What a difference a week makes

Last week they were making snow at Mount McSaubia (above) while Rosie Radle (right) and some of her friends were roller blading downtown. Then, during the weekend, winter landed with chilling temperatures and 13 inches of snow. Now, instead of making snow, we're shoveling snow and instead of wearing roller blades, youngsters are wearing heavy winter boots. (Photos by Laurie Lounsbury)

The year in review - a quick look back at 1994

When you're trying to figure out where you're going, it's always helpful to know where you're at and where you've been. With that in mind, before we dive headlong into 1995, here's a brief look back at what happened and when it happened in Charlevoix during 1994.

-January-

*Downtown Development Authority (DDA) sells property to low bidder. The DDA sold a portion of the former Kusina Motors property for $62,500 to Charlevoix Cinema Inc. despite receiving an offer of $101,000 from CJK Properties, which had renovated the Beacon Center complex adjacent to the Kusina property. DDA members said they accepted the lower bid because they feel it's important to keep the theater downtown. The decision was editorially criticized by the Courier on the grounds that it amounted to a governmental unit over-riding the free market system to pick winners and losers among businesses. The News-Review editorially supported the decision on much the same rationale as cited by the DDA.

*Arson was determined to be the cause of a Dec. 27, 1993 fire which destroyed a summer home on Michigan Avenue. No one was living in the home at the time of the fire. To date, the case remains unsolved.

*The DDA hired former congressman Bob Davis at a cost of $24,000 to lobby for retention of the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Acacia in Charlevoix.

*Castle Farms was sold to the Friends of 4H for $1.1 million. The plan is to transform the facility into the Castle Farm Community Center with an emphasis on youth activities. Castle Farm hosted several activities during the summer. The facility also hosted several fund-raising activities which for the most part flopped. Currently, the group is regrouping for the coming summer.

*Salmon continued dying from bacterial kidney disease while the Department of Natural Resources worked on finding a solution to the problem.

*Reacting to provisions in state proposals to reform educational finance, the DDA scrambled to meet a March 1 deadline for DDA project plans. Having plans in place by March 1 allowed the DDA to borrow money with the state paying back a major portion of the loan. In January, the DDA was looking at borrowing $1.742 million to either partially or entirely fund three projects: $1.1 million (of what was at the time estimated to be a total cost of $1.84 million) for Bridge Park improvements; $567,000 for a new or remodeled harbor master and Chamber of Commerce building; $75,000 for East Park improvements.

*A 1994 county budget which was 4.25 percent higher than the 1993 budget was adopted by county commissioners. The budget included a 4 percent pay increase for county employees.

*A series of winter storms over a 12-day period caused dozens of traffic accidents, damaged roofs and other property and generally made life difficult.

*New lights were installed on the Mount McSaubia cross country ski trails.

*Charlevoix High School Sports Boosters considered disbanding and issued a plea for new members. The group picked up some new members and continues to function.

*Goals for the Chamber of Commerce were outlined by Chamber President Dick Joseph at the organization's annual meeting. Joseph said that in 1994 the Chamber's top priority would be retaining a Coast Guard cutter in Charlevoix. Other goals Joseph discussed were: continuing to monitor and work with local governmental agencies; increasing Chamber membership; working to assist local industries; developing a snowmobile trail between Charlevoix and East Jordan.

-February-

*In one of the strangest meetings of the year, representatives of the city council, school board, intermediate school district, DDA and city council met in a joint meeting Feb. 1 to arrange a $124,000 refund from the DDA to the school district. Friction continues at Road Commission

By Laurie Lounsbury
County Road Commissioner Wayne Saunders has been traveling down a pretty humpy road for the last six years. Folks aren't happy about road conditions in Charlevoix County. Beaver Islanders were so desperate to get better roads that they sued the road commission. People living on seasonal roads are no longer getting plowed out by the county in the winter. County road employees have been working without a contract for the last year. Their morale is at an all time low. All in all, the road commissioners have some smoothing to do, not only on the roads but in their department.

Because of the current state of the road commission, Saunders wasn't feeling too optimistic about getting re-appointed when he went before the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners last week. Saunders knew commissioners would be scrutinizing him. "As a board, we're not entirely happy with the way things are going at the road commission," said Don Smith, Chairman of the Charlevoix County Commissioners.

Saunders did his best to explain the situation. "It seems like we have a manager who doesn't like to fix roads," Saunders said. "I have been disappointed in the way things have turned out," he said of some road projects.

Commissioner Richie Gillespie sympathized with Saunders, saying, "Wayne is in the hot seat. The road commission needs a more effective manager and we're not going to get that with the present situation."

County commissioners voted unanimously to re-appoint Saunders to another six year term on the road commission. Gillespie asked that the county commissioners start taking steps to remove a different road commissioner. Boh Herman. Gillespie says he would like to see Herman removed because he spends his winters in Florida and isn't around enough to be effective. Gillespie also said that Herman rents a home to the road manager, Larry Hamlin, which he sees as a conflict of interest.

The first step towards removing a commissioner is to hold a public hearing. Commissioners plan to discuss that possibility at their Jan. 25 meeting.

After hearing the news of his re-appointment, Saunders said he was grateful for the opportunity to serve on the road commission for another term. Saunders said he didn't want to hurt anyone's feelings, but felt that the road commission needs better management. He also said that in his opinion the county would be better off with a manager who is also an engineer. Hamlin has experience with sand and gravel, but he is not a civil engineer.

The county has to contract outside for engineering work, which adds time and cost to road projects.

Dog rescued from Walloon Lake

It's early in the winter, but the area has already had to rescue an individual that fell through the ice.

Whitney, a two-year-old Golden Retriever, fell through ice in Walloon Lake off Shadow Trails Road shortly after 5 p.m. Saturday. The water beneath the ice was approximately seven feet deep.

The Melrose Township Fire and Rescue Unit was called and retrieved the retriever. The dog's owners, Joseph and Carolyn Hardig of Walloon Lake praised the fire and rescue department for saving Whitney.

County budget rises by 5.6 percent

By Laurie Lounsbury

Last fall, before the county funding budget was determined, the Charlevoix County Commissioners voted to increase taxes by 5.75 percent. This year's proposed expenditure budget came in at a 5.6 percent increase, a pretty close match to the increase in funds.

"I guess if you've got it, you spend it," said Don Smith, Commissioner Chairman. In dollar amounts, the budget went from $5,199,370 to $5,505,354.

So where is the extra money going? Commissioners budgeted enough money for county employees to switch from a 35 hour work week to a 40 hour work week. The change would mean more wages being paid in nearly all county departments. Presently, only the sheriff's department and the planning department work a 40 hour week.

Charlevoix County will have its own circuit court, which will raise the court costs. In the past, circuit court costs have been shared with Emmet County.

The new courthouse building project will use up some of the money. The new courthouse will join the old county building with the county annex building.

A surplus of $240,000 will be put into the fund equity account. Every year the county puts about that much into fund equity. The fund equity account has about $1.5 million dollars in it.

A wage and efficiency study done by Plant Moran will cost $12,000 to $14,000 dollars. The study will look into the county's operations, staffing, and technology to determine ways that county departments can become more efficient. The study will also look at job descriptions, department head wages, and compare them to other counties' wages. The study will begin in January and will take six to eight weeks to complete.

Be careful on ice

The Department of Natural Resources advises those participating in ice-related activities this winter to be particularly careful in the vicinity of public docks and marinas along the Great Lakes.

Some harbors utilize underwater bubbling systems or electric de-icers to reduce ice damage to docks. These systems act to bring warmer bottom water to the surface to prevent strong ice from forming. In some cases, open water is maintained and is visible to persons on the ice nearby. In other cases, a thin layer of ice may exist. If this is covered by snow, a person may not realize how weak the ice is, and may break through.

"Winter sports enthusiasts would give a wide berth to open water and thin ice created by bubblers," DNR Director Roland Harnes said. "Public awareness of potential hazards is key to safely enjoying outdoor activities and preventing serious accidents."

Many commercial marinas and yacht clubs take similar measures to prevent the formation of strong ice at their docks. Unless a person is knowledgeable about a particular harbor, the safest course of action is to avoid standing or traveling on the ice near any dock structure in Michigan waters.

Some projections for 1995

Any fool can look back at the past. (See related story elsewhere in the paper.) What demands some brains is looking into the future and making some projections.

Following are a few things Charlevoix people can look forward to in 1995:

City Council: The election of Gabe Campbell over Ted Felter in the second ward creates something of a shift in the balance of power. In the past, on controversial issues Felter often joined Cheri Hoffman and Bruce Reid in creating a three person voting block on the six person council. Don Meggison and Butch Russell normally formed a two person block. Jackie Cross has often been a swing vote, but when he voted with Russell and Meggison he only created a 3-3 tie. Up until May when he resigned, former mayor Dave Novotny, when called upon to break a tie, normally sided with Felter, Hoffman and Reid.

In 1995, don't be surprised to see Campbell voting with Russell and Meggison. If Cross goes with them, they will form a four person majority. In that case, there wouldn't be a tie and newly elected mayor Josh Barnes won't have to vote. Even on issues where Cross votes with Hoffman and Reid and creates a tie, don't be surprised to see Barnes at least occasionally vote with Russell, Meggison and Campbell.

Depending on whether or not anything comes up before, one of the first times this shift in power is likely to come into play will be in February and March when the council discusses the budget for 1995-96.

Last year Meggison and Russell voted against adopting the proposed budget due, among other things, to city rate increases for services. They were outvoted and the increases went into effect. This year, things could be different.

Although you can expect to see the council split on certain issues, there will also be harmony on the majority of items before the council. On many issues, there's an obviously correct answer and council members have been willing to unanimously endorse the correct course of action. Unlike Congress, the city council has been very good about not fighting just for the sake of fighting.

Charlevoix School: With any luck school operations should be less acrimonious in 1995 than in 1994. Whether or not the school board and administration operate more openly remains to be seen. Watching them in the end of 1994, it seemed like sometimes they were doing better about openly confronting problems and other times they were still in the traditional speak no evil (at least in the open) mode.

In the past year the school system staff, administration and board made significant strides toward becoming more receptive to operational improvements and meaningful parental and community involvement. The prevailing attitude in the past was - we do it this way because we've always done it this way. That attitude has been replaced by a prevailing question - how can we do things better? That question and the search for answers to it have made the community and school much more aggressive about serving Charlevoix's educational needs. In 1995 we should see more and more tangible rewards from this approach.

Two issues the school board can expect to face in 1995 are learning to live with the effects of school finance reform and long-term school facility needs.

School finance reform makes Charlevoix schools more financially dependent upon the state. With that dependency, comes additional state control and a greater need to be in touch with what plans are taking shape in Lansing.

In terms of school facility needs, a committee has drafted a long-term facility plan which has been submitted to the school board. The board is going to have to figure out what to do with the plan and how to fund it. In recent weeks, Boyne City has been forced to address problems caused by having an aging middle school gym. As they read about Boyne City's problem, Charlevoix school district residents need to bear in mind that Charlevoix's middle school wasn't built yesterday.

Business: The business and employment climate in Charlevoix was a real success story in 1994 and that should continue in 1995. Several local plants expanded, or made plans to expand, in 1994 and we should continue to see the benefits of that in 1995. The two primary reasons for this are that Charlevoix is a nice place to live and people here believe in hard work. Local governmental units have been receptive to industry and willing to work with business people to increase local employment opportunities.

Although Charlevoix's general economic outlook is bright, there are a few question marks. One is the eventual decommissioning of Big Rock. That won't happen in 1995, but in 1995 and in following years, you will hear more and more about it. Another question mark is the lack of affordable housing. While Charlevoix's job opportunities grow, school enrollment remains flat. Why? Because people moving into the area can find jobs in Charlevoix, but can find more affordable housing in other area communities such as East Jordan and Boyne City.

Another interesting question which we will have more insight on as 1995 progresses is the effect the Bay Harbor development will have on Charlevoix. Chances are the effects felt by Charlevoix will not be as dramatic as those felt in Petoskey, but there will be effects felt in Charlevoix. You can count on that.

On the retail level, if the weather cooperates the summer of 1995 should be a good year for Charlevoix merchants. The downtown business district is as stable as it's been in a long time. Something to watch will be continued retail development outside of the central business district. Don't be surprised to see retail growth at the north end of town near the industrial park, along Bridge Street south of Hurlbut and continued growth on M-66.

1995 should be an interesting year in Charlevoix. But then, every year's an interesting year in Charlevoix. That's why we live here.

prompted the meeting. The purpose of the $124,000 refund was to allow the school's baseline funding figure for 1994 to be higher since state funding to the school in future years would be based on that figure. County commissioners were invited to the meeting, but declined to participate. Mayor Dave Novotny voiced displeasure over county commissioners' decision to sit out the meeting. County commission chairman Don Smith said he felt the Feb. 1 deadline was artificial and that the DDA had other motives for pushing the deal.

*Cold, cold, really cold, nasty, bitter, take your breath away type cold temperatures in the winter of 1994 caused water lines to freeze and burst throughout the city. City water department workers put in many hours of overtime thawing lines. Federal emergency funding later helped repair many of the broken water mains.

*The Charlevoix High School volleyball team entered the conference tournament with a 2-4 record in conference play, but upset the favored teams and won the tournament.

*In one of the area's biggest upsets of the season, Charlevoix's varsity basketball team beat St. Ignace 80-79 at St. Ignace. Charlevoix entered the game with a record of 5-8. St. Ignace came into the game with a 14-game winning streak and ranked seventh in Class C.

*The Charlevoix Cooperative Pre-School program issued a plea for a new home. Expanding elementary school needs pushed the pre-school out of the K-5 school building. A proposal to relocate the pre-school program to a room at the Castle Farm Community Center fell through and the pre-school program ended.

*Two Charlevoix Odyssey of the Mind teams qualified for state competition.

*Charlevoix Area Hospital officially dedicated its new building addition. The $4 million addition included a new surgical suite, outpatient surgery area, central sterile supply room, kitchen, meeting rooms, and obstetric unit.

*The Charlevoix boys' and girls' ski teams qualified for State Finals.

-March-

*The City Council approved adding several projects to the DDA project list and extending the DDA program until the year 2013.

*The Charlevoix High School debate team placed fifth at the State Finals.

*Charlevoix High School's boys' ski team placed fourth at the State meet.

*A furor ensued when the Charlevoix School Board reassigned high school principal Dave Smith. The reassignment was followed by several packed board meetings and an abbreviated recall effort. A few days after the meeting in which Smith was reassigned, the board met in closed session for three hours to evaluate school superintendent Dr. Roberta Jackson.

*City and County officials continued to argue over the city's DDA program. The city offered the county another proposed agreement similar to previous proposals, but the county again chose not to act on the proposal.

*Keith Parish of the Charlevoix High School wrestling team placed fourth at the state meet.

*A three-year contract for Charlevoix school teachers was approved by the school board. The contract gave teachers a three percent pay raise in 1994, plus annual pay raises of between 2.5 and 3.5 percent, depending on inflation, for the next two years.

*The City Council approved an $8.6 million budget for 1994-95. The budget was 6.2 percent higher than the previous year. The most controversial portion of the budget was a 20 percent increase in city water rates.

*Debate over the Acacia and whether or not it would remain in Charlevoix continued to take a variety of twists and turns. In March, the issue involved at least four different layers and agencies of government. A key factor in the decision was the status of the U.S. Coast Guard icebreaker Mackinaw, stationed in Cheboygan. At one time there was discussion of decommissioning the Mackinaw and moving the Acacia to Cheboygan. Ultimately, funding was secured for the Mackinaw and the Acacia, for the time-being, is remaining in Charlevoix.

-April-

*A revised estimate of the Bridge Park project came back at $3.775 million, up from earlier estimates of $1.6 million and then $1.8 million.

*The city council considered donating a parcel of city-owned property to the Coast Guard for housing in an effort to make a better case for Charlevoix continuing to serve as the home port of a Coast Guard ship. After discussion, the proposal was eventually dropped.

*A group of local business people filed an application with regulatory authorities to open a new bank in Charlevoix. Charlevoix State Bank opened a few months later at 111 State Street.

-May-

*Charlevoix County Republican Chairman John Haggard announced his candidacy for the state senate. Haggard was beaten in the primary by Walter North, who also won the general election.

*A group of parents began dis-

Country line dancing has become a popular Adult Education enrichment class. Adult Education program prepares for second semester

The first semester of this year's Charlevoix adult education program has been completed and plans are being made for second semester courses.

During the first semester, one group of young adults has been meeting each week and working toward fulfilling their high school completion requirements and preparing for their General Equivalency Diploma (GED) test. This program will continue to operate on Thursday evenings during the second semester, offering classes in English, Math, Government and History along with GED preparation. The first class of the second semester will meet Jan. 26.

Adult enrichment classes offer people of all ages a chance to expand their knowledge and skills in a variety of areas. Along with the learning that takes place, having fun is an important part of each of these classes. Some popular classes are: line dancing, basket weaving, woodwork, computing on the Macintosh, and Word Perfect (on IBM computers).

Many of the same classes will be offered in the coming semester, but program organizers would like to expand the Adult Education program to meet the needs of more people. Additional classes being considered include: bridge (the card game) instruction; calligraphy, sign language, art classes; rug hooking, and investment. People interested either in teaching or participating in a class should contact Jim Jinsky at 547-3206 during the day or 547-4195 during the evening.

Establishing a class requires a teacher and 10 students. Classes meet one night per week for one to three hours, for from one to 10 weeks depending on the need.

Some second semester enrichment classes will begin the first week of February, but the starting date is flexible to accommodate classes which may need to start later.

Oh Boix

A collection of praises, awards and accomplishments involving Charlevoix people.

Two Charlevoix people were among the students named to the Northwood University fall term dean's list. John H. Heck, the son of Dennis and Eileen Heck of Charlevoix, along with Andrea Matye, the daughter of Reinhart and Elizabeth Matye of Charlevoix, were named to the dean's list. To be named to the list, a student must have a grade point average of 3.0 or better on a 4.0 scale.

Marilou Ikens of Rogers City was recently honored by the Michigan Humanities Council for her public service and commitment to the Huron Shores Writing Institute. Ikens founded the institute with a Michigan Humanities grant. The program has now grown into an international endeavor. Ikens is the daughter of Polle VerWys of Charlevoix.

Beacons of Blessings

A few words of praise, reflection and worship from members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

Into each life, there ought to come at least one or two special someones who encourage and inspire you to live out your dreams. Though I never got to meet him, I consider Harold Kohn one of those important folks who have influenced my life and ministry. Long-time Charlevoix folks remember his tenure as pastor at the First Congregational Church. Others outside the area would know him from his writing ministry that filled eight hard bound titles and at least six paperback books.

A late Christmas present was the opportunity to go visit his home at Hidden Brook. For me, it was like the chance to meet Kohn, only without meeting him. His daughter, Carolyn, proudly showed a hand-carved fireplace featuring a little fawn whose eyes follow you anywhere in the living room. I gently rubbed my hands over the etched doors with birds and trees lovingly detailed on bedrooms and the den. You could feel his presence everywhere.

The real joy was wandering the grounds. Suddenly, more than a few of his books came to life as I found trees that beavers had gnawed through and deer runs that came virtually up to the side of the house. The sound of the water dodging rocks and tripping over fallen limbs literally drained the stress of the day. I tried to match up some of the scenes portrayed in his books with the views before my eyes. It was not hard to see why people came to Gray Cottage on the property to listen, learn and be encouraged by this blessed man.

My bird feeder has never seen the variety of visitors and songs that Hidden Brook's version of a Sunflower Seed Cafe does. Kohn's books are filled with sketches of little black headed chickadees. Standing on the deck, I watched them first hand swooping one after another in order to get their fair share of seeds. The buzz of their wings amazed me. It was a rhythm I had never heard. A nuthatch seemed to be protesting just inches away that she wasn't getting her chance at the goodies just below.

The blessing of my visit reminded me that such joys are not reserved for places like Hidden Brook alone. God has placed them all around us. It is just a matter of learning afresh how to look and listen. Now that the snow has come in all its white winter fullness, it should be easier than ever for you to spot the signs of his presence and care.

That was what Kohn did better than a lot of us do. His words sought to remind us that the Lord's love literally surrounds us at all times. Start the new year by asking God to help you wake up to the signs of his presence in your life. Celebrate His touch and be encouraged. Then be aware of one more thing. Just as you and I have been influenced by people like Harold Kohn, never forget that you are making your mark on folks every day. Make an effort to build them up. We are blessed in order to bless.

(Rev. Bruce Hamilton is pastor of the Charlevoix Community Church of God. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Hamilton and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

...1994 in review: School looked for principal while city looked for mayor

cussing the possibility of forming a charter school in Charlevoix.

*Several junior high and high school industrial arts students brought home awards from the regional and state competitions.

*City mayor Dave Novotny resigned in mid-term citing personal reasons and following criticism at council meetings. Mayor pro-tem Ted Felter filled in as mayor until a new mayor was elected in November. Novotny's resignation created an interesting mayoral election. By the time he resigned, the deadline for filing nominating petitions for the 1994 election was past and his was the only name on the ballot.

*The Charlevoix High School girls' softball team captured the league title.

-June-

*Eight candidates were interviewed for the high school principal position.

*The Charlevoix boys' track team placed first while the girls' team placed second at the conference track meet.

*Sulane Hamilton and Ardeth Wieland were elected to terms on the Charlevoix Board of Education. A proposal to levy 18 mills on non-homestead property passed by a vote of 958 to 756. A second proposal to levy 2.25 mills to fund structural and technical renovations and additions failed 1,004 to 712.

*Charlevoix's 3,200 meter boys' relay team of Matt Dickinson, Brian Martinus, Chris LeButt and Mike Bush placed first at the state finals track meet.

*New street lights were installed on Bridge Street. The street lights, which were a DDA project, had been a subject of controversy for nearly a decade. The new lights ended up costing approximately $241,000.

*After completing paper screening, preliminary and secondary interviews as well as visits to candidates' schools the school board offered the high school principal job to Richard Bologna of Brighton. Much to the board's surprise, he turned down the job.

*Papers were signed to finalize the purchase of Castle Farms by the Friends of 4H.

-July-

*Governor John Engler visited Charlevoix and hosted a community meeting at Alexander's Restaurant. Engler talked about changes made during his first term in office and changes which would be made if he was re-elected.

*The second annual Charlevoix Street Legends Car Show drew approximately 200 eye-catching vehicles and crowds of spectators.

*A plane crashed in Lake Michigan, near Beaver Island, killing two men from Illinois.

*The city of Charlevoix received a $135,487 check from the federal government to help repair water system damage caused by winter freezing.

*Chris LeButt, Matt Dickinson and Josh Dhaseleer from the Charlevoix High School track team were named to the Academic All-State track team.

*The city council discussed traffic problems on Petoskey Avenue and south Bridge Street and asked the state to reconsider increasing speed limits from 25 to 35 miles per hour in the areas of road in question. A few weeks ago the state raised the speed limits in spite of city council's objection.

*Beaver Islanders and county commissioners argued about the condition of roads on the island. Islanders have a pending lawsuit against the Charlevoix County Road Commission.

*Gary Grundman was hired as the new Charlevoix High School principal. Grundman came to Charlevoix from Allen Park where he had been high school principal.

*Despite a rain storm early Saturday evening, the annual Venetian Festival and fireworks took place and were a rousing success.

*The Knights of Columbus purchased a large vacant building on Bells Bay Road and announced plans to convert the building to a reception hall.

-August-

*Citing policy differences with fire department administrators, four volunteer firemen resigned from the city fire department.

*The city council considered borrowing via bonding up to $6 million for DDA projects. After discussion, the top end figure was sliced from $6 million to $3.5 million.

*Work on the airport continued. By fall, a new runway had been installed and was operational.

*The St. Mary's Summer Slam street basketball tournament drew hundreds of players from throughout northern Michigan.

*Local business woman Mary Fiendt was honored by having Aug. 17 declared Mary Fiendt Day in Charlevoix. Fiendt was Michigan's first female surveyor and has owned Charlevoix Abstract and Engineering for 50 years.

*The Coast Guard Cutter Acacia was ordered to prepare to ship out for Cuba to assist with refugee rescue efforts. Later in the month, the Acacia departed for Cuba.

*LexaLite announced plans to expand and build a new facility. The facility is now under construction in the Charlevoix Industrial Park.

*The Parkside Restaurant, a land-

The summer of 1994 was busy in downtown Charlevoix. Occasionally, the traffic was enough to frustrate even the most tolerant of drivers.

A grand ribbon-cutting ceremony was held in June to dedicate the new street lights on Bridge Street.

The Friends of 4H took over the Castle Farm Community Center in June. Several children's activities were successful, but fund-raising efforts have faltered.

CB North adds three northern Michigan branches

Francis B. Flanders, Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer of CB North announced the acquisition of the northern Michigan branch offices of Republic Bank, effective Dec. 17.

Flanders commented, "We are extremely pleased with the addition of the branch offices in Bellaire, Central Lake and Traverse City to the CB North bank. Our staff is very familiar with these communities and the financing needs of northern Michigan. The customers in the communities we serve will enjoy the expanded services CB North will provide."

The addition of the three branch offices to CB North will result in a total of eleven banking offices located in Charlevoix, Antrim and Grand Traverse counties. "Our expansion into these communities is a natural progression for the Bank and the Corporation," according to Brian D. Bell, Chairman of CB Financial, the Bank's holding company based in Jackson, Michigan.

The new CB North branch offices will maintain the same staff and office hours. CB North now serves the Beaver Island, Bellaire, Boyne City, Charlevoix, Central Lake, East Jordan, Eastport, Ellsworth and Traverse City communities.

CB North, is a subsidiary bank of CB Financial Corporation, Jackson, Michigan, with reported assets as of November 30, 1994 of $661 million. CB Financial and its banking subsidiaries in Charlevoix, Jackson and Lansing/St. Johns, have 45 banking offices providing commercial, trust and personal banking services in Northwest and Mid-Central Michigan.

mark in Charlevoix dining was sold. The building is now up for sale again.

*Charlevoix Public Schools received word that they were off the hook on a state attempt to bill the school system more than $400,000 for groundwater clean-up efforts in the 1980s. The school incurred nearly $90,000 in costs to gather information to dissuade the Department of Natural Resources and Attorney General's office from pursuing the matter.

-September-

*By a 3-3 vote, city council members left city manager Mike Wiesner's contract as it is. The contract expires in April of 1996. Wiesner had asked for the contract to be extended until 1999 and to have severance pay increased from the equivalent of four months' to six months' pay with an additional half month's pay for each year of service, and to have severance pay to extend beyond the end of the contract. Council members Cheri Hoffman, Bruce Reid and Ted Felter voted to go along with the changes. Council members Butch Russell, Don Meggison and Jackie Cross voted against them and the motion failed.

*While enroute to Cuba the Acacia was reassigned from Cuban to Haitian rescue operations. This made many in Charlevoix nervous as at the time, there was talk of the U.S. invading Haiti. An invasion was averted and the Acacia spent most of its tour hauling supplies and tending buoys.

*Deborah Sue Bowman of Charlevoix spent approximately 12 hours in a car in shallow water in Lake Michigan. The car went in the lake at the turn-around near the end of Mount McSaub Road and turned upside down in shallow water. Bowman's injuries were not serious, however she was unable to crawl out of the car. She was trapped there overnight until the car was discovered the next morning.

*A voter petition calling for a public election on the DDA bond proposal was approved and an election was scheduled for December.

-October-

*Following a public hearing, county commissioners approved a budget increase of 5.7 percent from the previous year for most county departments.

*The Charlevoix High School golf team won league and regional titles.

*County commissioners approved a plan to have 9-1-1 emergency phone service costs added to people's phone bills in the future.

*Charlevoix Area Hospital officials signed papers for a $4.5 million hospital bond which will pay off costs from recent and past hospital improvements.

*Both the boys' and girls' Charlevoix High School cross country teams were league champions.

-November-

*Josh Barnes was elected mayor over Bob Gill in a write-in mayoral election while Gabe Campbell ousted two-term incumbent Ted Felter for a second ward council seat.

*Big Rock Point nuclear plant continued to discuss plans for decommissioning the facility. Current plans call for the plant to be shut down May 31, 2000.

*Charlevoix's boys' cross country team placed third at the state finals meet while the girls' team placed tenth.

*Charlevoix's girls' basketball team wrapped up the league title.

*The DDA put forth a proposal to end the capture of county, school and intermediate school district tax funds in the year 2013. The proposal awaits action from the other parties.

Pace yourself when shoveling snow

Northern Michigan residents - even post-heart attack patients - don't have to get snowed in or under by Old Man Winter.

It's OK to shovel snow, the American Heart Association says, but remember: If you are middle-aged or older and have not been physically active, you need to follow some simple rules.

First of all, don't try to lift a heavy shovel full of snow if you're not used to strenuous physical exertion. The combination of sudden physical exertion and the cold increases the heart's work load.

It's natural for your arteries to narrow when it's cold. But the cold can be dangerous if your arteries are already narrowed due to fatty deposits in your arteries. Too much strain on the heart during these conditions could cause a heart attack.

"Anecdotal evidence has linked snow shoveling to fatal heart attacks. But recent studies show that most everyone can perform the routine winter chore within reason," says John Sonnermann, president of the American Heart Association's Grand Traverse Division.

Here is some additional advice concerning winter exercise:

* Before you pick up the shovel and walk out the door, bundle up properly. Wear several layers of clothing instead of one heavy layer. Put on a hat or scarf because most heat is lost through the top of the head. Protect your ears and hands, too, because they are most susceptible to frostbite.

* See your doctor first if:
- You have a heart condition and were advised to participate only on medically supervised physical activity.

- During or right after you exercise, you frequently have pains or pressure in the left or mid-chest area, left neck, shoulder or arm.

- You have developed chest pain with the last month.

- You tend to lose consciousness or fall over due to dizziness.

- You feel extremely breathless after mild exertion.

- Your doctor recommended you take medicine for your blood pressure or a heart condition.

- Your doctor said you have bone or joint problems that could be made worse by shoveling snow or performing other strenuous activities.

- You have a medical condition or some other physical reason not mentioned here that might need special attention such as insulin-dependent diabetes.

For more information on exercise or other heart or stroke-related topics contact the American Heart Association's Grand Traverse Division at (616) 946-9524 or call 1-800-AHA-USA1 (1-800-242-8721).

City initiates sewage pretreatment program

By L. Scott Swanson

How elite is Charlevoix? Even sewage has to meet certain standards.

Charlevoix is beginning an industrial pretreatment program to monitor industrial waste coming into the city's wastewater treatment system. "It's quite a major program and it's going to take a lot of work to get it going," explained Sam Creswell, wastewater plant superintendent.

Creswell says monitoring what comes into the plant is important to assure that nothing comes in which will either harm the plant or pass through the plant and pollute Lake Michigan. The estimated cost of setting up the program in Charlevoix is $39,500. The city has received a grant from the state which will pay 90 percent of that cost.

At the Jan. 3 city council meeting council members approved a recommendation to hire McNamee Porter and Seeley, an Ann Arbor engineering firm, to develop a program at a cost not to exceed $30,000. During the council meeting, former council member Bob Timms noted that other cities throughout the state have established similar programs and asked if Charlevoix couldn't adopt all or portions of their plans at a lesser cost.

Creswell, when contacted following the meeting by the Courier, explained that the plans to be developed aren't exactly the same from one community to the next. "It's very specific for the community and the industries that are in it," Creswell said.

A planned expansion by Charlevoix Manufacturing Inc. is the reason the program is being put in place now. Charlevoix Manufacturing has one plant in the Charlevoix Industrial Park and another in Cincinnati. They are in the process of moving the Cincinnati operation to Charlevoix. Operations at the Cincinnati plant include an anodizing process which uses electricity to bond chemicals to the surface of metal parts to reduce corrosion. When a plant with an anodizing process is among the users of a sewage system, federal regulations require the plant to pretreat its Charlevoix Personified Muma prepares for county emergencies

By Laurie Lounsbury

Most of us make routine trips past Big Rock Nuclear Power Plant, small industries, and farmers' fields without thinking twice about potential accidents. That's not the case for Earl Muma. Muma is the Director of Charlevoix County Emergency Services.

If Big Rock had a meltdown, Muma would be the man to organize the emergency evacuation. If a truck hauling hazardous chemicals was involved in an accident, Muma would know how to contain the accident. If a local industry caught on fire, Muma would know whether workers would be safer remaining in their offices or evacuating the premises. Muma's diligent efforts in emergency operations recently earned him the Emergency Services Coordinator of the year award in an 18 county district.

Muma spends hours at his desk reading about hazardous materials whose names most of us can't even pronounce. He knows that anhydrous ammonia, used to fertilize farmers' fields, can suffocate a person if it becomes airborne.

Charlevoix County has been blessed with very few hazardous wastewater and the sewage system to have a pretreatment monitoring program. Plant officials point out that the anodizing process is a closed system and with the treatment which takes place in the plant, water going out of the plant is cleaner than it is when it enters the plant.

Be that as it may, regulations will require a pretreatment program. Creswell notes that even before Charlevoix Manufacturing announced its plans Charlevoix was close to needing a pretreatment program. Even without the pretreatment program, the city has been keeping track of what goes into the system. Creswell has been doing annual surveys and keeping files of information regarding what people are putting into the system.

The pretreatment program isn't equipment intensive from the city's end. Industries required to participate in the program will have to install a manhole between their plant and the sewer main. The city will have a portable sampler and will be able to take random tests at the manhole to make sure effluent from the plant meets standards. Creswell explained that for the city the program mostly is a matter of inspections and paperwork.

The program's estimated cost per year is $7,500. Creswell said depending on how many other industries end up participating and on how the city sets up hilling, most or all of those costs will be borne by the industries requiring the program.

Council discusses when to, and when not to, take bids

Should the city always get competitive bids for engineering work on projects, or are there times when the city should just get a price from a company they're comfortable with?

It's a debate which has taken place in the past and occurred again at the Jan. 3 council meeting. The issue came up as a result of a recommendation from city manager Mike Wiesner that the city hire the Ann Arbor engineering firm of Mc-Namee, Porter and Seeley, Inc. (MP&S) to develop an industrial pretreatment program for the city sewage treatment system. (See related story.) The recommendation was to authorize MP&S to do the work at a cost not to exceed $30,000. The city has received a 90 percent state grant for the program, thus the city's cost for engineering would at most be $3,000.

Second ward council member Gahe Campbell and second ward resident Billie Smith questioned why bids weren't solicited for the engineering work.

Wiesner noted that MP&S designed the city's wastewater treatment plant and consequently are already familiar with the city system. He said that in regard to engineering and professional services, he feels there are times when taking bid proposals is appropriate and other times when it's not. Some factors he cited as criteria for that decision were: projects where higher than normal expertise is required; projects where a particular company is familiar with the system; and the city's comfort in working with the company.

"I'm always wanting to save a huck if we can," Wiesner said, but added that he didn't feel this was a case where that could be done.

Mayor Josh Barnes noted that the city's share of the cost on engineering and the remainder of the project would be less than $4,000. He asked Wiesner what the cost to the city would be to go out for bids.

In this case, it wouldn't be real high, Wiesner responded.

Would it be $1,000? Barnes asked.

Wiesner said $1,000 would be a maximum cost.

First ward council member Cheri Hoffman noted that the project is accidents, but that doesn't mean Muma can slack off. Part of his job is keeping a file on every business in the county that uses hazardous chemicals in their work. He has to know what to do if these chemicals are released into the environment. Muma can tell you about the cleaning properties of sulphuric acid and how large amounts of propane gas will behave if released into the air.

Muma started working for the county in 1980. The emergency service director position was a part-time job when Muma began. He had barely settled into his new job when the Three Mile Island nuclear accident occurred in New York, sending all areas with nuclear power plants into a planning frenzy. Muma's job became a full-time position as Charlevoix County started to prepare for the possibility of a nuclear accident.

Some parts of Muma's job have changed considerably over the years. "The cold war was still on when I started," Muma said. "We were making plans for attacks from Russia then."

A primary threat to the county today comes from hazardous chemicals. The Local Emergency Planning Committee (LEPC) works with Muma to be prepared for any accidents involving local businesses using chemicals. "People don't think it's (the LEPC) really necessary at times. It's a struggle to keep it going," Muma said.

Muma will head up the next nuclear emergency drill, to be held in August. After that, Muma is planning to retire.

Retirement won't leave Muma sitting at home twiddling his thumbs. He plans to start a business, Charlevoix Classic Cars. Muma will buy classic old cars, restore them, and sell them. He hopes to fully restore one or two cars a year.

being done to assist in the planned expansion of Charlevoix Manufacturing. She asked if time is of the essence in making a decision. When Wiesner did not indicate that there is a pressing time table, Hoffman said she was perfectly comfortable with the proposal from MS&P.

Campbell said, "I don't think it's a good policy to get a habit of doing things without going out for bids."

Hoffman said she disagreed with Campbell and recalled that with the initial engineering for the Bridge Park project, the city went with the low bidder and got work they weren't completely satisfied with. "The lowest price is not always the best price," Hoffman maintained.

Campbell said he agrees that the lowest price isn't always the best price, but added, "There are times when you don't take the lowest bid, but you take bids to keep them all in the ballpark."

Third ward council member Bruce Reid said he felt what Campbell was saying is true, but not in some cases and this project is one of those cases. "I feel comfortable with this just for the fact that they did build our system," he said.

Jackie Cross, the other third ward council member, noted that the city has had MP&S bid competitively with other firms on other projects and they've been the low or next-to-low bidder.

A motion to authorize MP&S to do the work passed 4-2 with Campbell and second ward council member Butch Russell voting no.

Editor's notes

Expressing empathy for all who have had the flu

Has anybody in northern Michigan not been sick at some time during the past three weeks?

There's a nasty flu bug going around. It landed at the Swanson household this past weekend. It started with the kids, then hit me and finally my wife.

I'll spare you the gory details. Suffice it to say, if you've got it, you'll know you've got it. And you won't enjoy it.

I'm no doctor so I won't try to offer any in depth medical advice. Just get plenty of rest, try not to get dehydrated and do what you can to avoid contaminating the fortunate few who have escaped illness.

There are interesting things happening in Washington D.C. these days. The newly installed Republican majority is intent on reducing the size of federal government. That's a long overdue step which will soon be felt by local governments.

As federal government diminishes its role, a greater portion of the role of government will be assumed by local entities. That's not without its problems, but overall it's healthy. Local government has its quirks, but it's closer to the people and consequently far more responsive and easier to keep track of.

In regard to Washington efforts to balance the federal budget, you've got to ask yourself when any of the politicians are going to work up the courage to tackle Social Security spending. It's the elephant in the middle of the room that nobody wants to admit is there.

At the Tuesday, Jan. 3 city council meeting an interesting little debate took place regarding when the city should seek bids for engineering work.

City manager Mike Wiesner had recommended the city hire the Ann Arbor based engineering firm of McNamee, Porter and Seeley to do some engineering work for a sewage system pretreatment program. Second ward city council member Gabe Campbell said he felt the city should seek bids to make sure they're getting the best price. Wiesner said he's all for saving a buck when possible, but in terms of professional services there are other factors to consider such as a company's familiarity with the system and the city's comfort in dealing with the company.

In this instance, the city council accepted the recommendation to hire McNamee, Porter and Seeley without going out for bids. In this case it was a small contract, $30,000 with the city paying only 10 percent and the other 90 percent covered by a state grant.

Even though this particular debate didn't result in bids being sought or anything being changed for this project, it may have ramifications for future projects. Those ramifications could be one of two things, either bids being taken or the one company being considered making sure they're giving the best price possible.

When the city took bids from auditing firms last year they did an interesting thing. They devised a rating system which allowed the city to consider other factors rather than simply price. No doubt it took some extra work to put the system together, but it also seemed to be quite effective in procuring the best product for the best price.

Lake Charlevoix has yet to freeze, but according to local barber Big Bergmann, it could happen anytime. He said he's been kind of keeping track for years and the lake normally freezes within a week, one way or the other, of Jan 15.

Retired nurse expresses appreciation for hospital

Editor,

On Dec. 31, 1994, I retired as an R.N. from Charlevoix Area Hospital. I wish to say how proud I am that I had the opportunity of serving on the staff of such a fine hospital.

I know people in this community love to debate, but I am sure they will have to agree that we are very fortunate to have such an outstanding hospital.

I feel the Hospital board and administration are efficient and very future oriented, which is important to keep viable in the ever changing world of health reform.

It is evident that all the employees care about their part in helping our Very Important Patient on their road to recovery.

I wish to extend my sincere gratitude to each and every one at day's. The holiday spirit included entire communities, large corporations, professional groups, food pantries, friends getting together, business employees, individual families, and clients helping clients. Over 100 families and individuals were assisted during the holidays, including 181 children of the families.

Charlevoix Area Hospital for their dedication and fine work.
Sincerely,
Suzanne M. Miller, R.N. Retired

Changes coming to northern Michigan

The year 1994 may be the end of an era. There are forces brewing like yeast which will change our community dramatically by the turn of the century.

Let's begin by focusing on Charlevoix's new neighbor, Bay Harbor. Driving along the highway, the new housing developing starts at Bay Shore — the county line — and stretches for more than four miles, almost to Petoskey. This posh, new community with its own address, has already sold many of its prime, million dollar, one acre lots with a view of Lake Michigan in the front and the new yacht harbor in the back!

The harbor, which was the former quarry of the defunct cement plant, covers over 1000 acres, and will be completed in April '95. It will be twice the size of Round Lake, varying between 60 to 80 feet deep. It will accommodate 500 boats of all sizes. The adjacent yacht clubhouse, with tennis courts and outdoor pool, will be the social center of the waterfront community. Visiting yachtsmen will be able to dock in the harbor at a privately run marina.

Realtor Rik Lobenherz of Vacation Properties Network, took me on a speedy, bumpy, thrill ride in his jeep over most of the 90 acres. He showed me the graceful contour of the three nine-hole world class golf courses being developed by the Kircher family of Boyne USA. I held my breath as I looked over the 140 ft. drop, skirting the rocky beach below on Lake Michigan. A cart-controlling electronic guard that automatically stops any cart traveling too close to the edge of the bluffs will be installed, thank goodness. The first 9 holes, The Links, will be ready in late August for play. Designed by Arthur Hills, the course plays along two miles of gorgeous, royal blue, lake frontage, which is more waterfront than the famous Pebble Beach course in California. At the end of the round, golfers can relax and dine at the clubhouse overlooking Lake Michigan.

When completed the project will accommodate over 800 homes scattered throughout the woods among five streams and numerous nature trails; around the harbor, along the shores, and in the proposed village adjacent to the public park. All utilities will be underground. The design of the homes is under architectural control and leans toward "Michigan Victorian," at least in the harbor area. At the moment, the project employs 250 workers. There are over 100 pieces of major bulldozing equipment on the site, including 10 and 12 yard loaders, that pick up 10 ft. boulders as if they were a handful of peanuts.

Over 2 million cubic yards of solid rock and limestone is being moved. The kiln dust and shale, all 60 acres, will then be covered with good black dirt and sod and finally landscaped. One of the principal movers and shakers of the project, David Johnson says, "It's like landscaping the moon!"

From the highway, one can still see two 210 foot high silos beckoning. They are actually located in the water and will remain, surrounded by fishing and viewing platforms and a public walkway. In spite of the rapid growth of the project, which has truly been phenomenal, all does not always go according to schedule, even here. Four of the silos that were dynamited didn't cave in as planned. Instead they tilted at a 30 degree angle and the local populace jokingly called them "the leaning towers of Petoskey."

A section of the development is contemplated as "mixed use commercial." Here an inn is to be built for transients, with a restaurant and fine shops.

The impact all this growth and population expansion will have on the surrounding areas of Charlevoix, Petoskey, Boyne City and Harbor Springs will be discussed in my next article January 18th in the Courier.

The Bay Harbor project represents a transition from an industrial site to a resort complex on the shores of Lake Michigan.

Teacher and students thank food drive contributors

Editor,

My 7th grade math class at Charlevoix Middle School would like to thank the many people and businesses who donated to our class for the Food Pantry in Charlevoix. We purchased 141 cases of food (3384 cans) with this money. Along with individual cans brought in by the class, we gave 3660 cans of food to the pantry. We're sure that will feed a lot of hungry people. Our entire school total was 12,760 cans.

Happy Holidays,

Adult Education seeks people who are willing to share talents

The Charlevoix Adult Education program would like to hear from area people who are interested in teaching classes not currently being offered. Program coordinators feel there are people out there who have knowledge, skills and talents which can be shared with others through adult education. Among the subjects which have been suggested are: calligraphy, sign language, rug hooking, oil painting, watercolors, investments, fly tying, C.P.R. and fitness programs. Program coordinators are also open to other suggestions. Essentially, all that is needed to offer a class is a teacher and at least ten students.

Most classes meet one night per week, for one to three hours per night, for four to 10 weeks. That schedule is flexible depending on the needs of the subject and class participants. The starting date for most classes will be the first week of February, but that is also flexible.

If you're interested in teaching an adult education class, contact Jim Jinsky as soon as possible at 547-3026 during the day or 547-4195 during the evening.

High school completion classes in English, Government, History and Math will be offered along with G.E.D. Preparation. These classes meet on Thursday evenings at the high school, beginning Jan. 26.

Conservancy offers winter education

Now in its fourth year, the Little Traverse Conservancy's Winter Environmental Education Program will once again take to the snowy outdoors. Scout troops, school classes and other groups can experience aspects of winter ecology that are often overlooked. Identifying animal tracks, observing mammals and birds, and exploring temperature variations are a few of the activities covered in one hour hikes at the Conservancy's Nature Preserves. Other topics might include plant and animal adaptations for winter survival and identifying winter weeds and trees. The Conservancy will modify or present different topics to meet a particular group's needs.

Last winter the Conservancy conducted outdoor programs for over 600 school students and members of scout troops. The Conservancy is excited about this year's program and hopes many more groups take advantage of this opportunity to learn about nature in winter.

For those participants in the Cheboygan and Emmet County areas, the Winter Environmental Education Program is offered at Round Lake Nature Preserve, just off M-119 between Petoskey and Harbor Springs. For Charlevoix area children the winter program is offered at North Point Nature Preserve north of Charlevoix. Three cent stamps are tough to find

Local post office goes through $8,000 worth

A run on three cent stamps took the Charlevoix Post Office by surprise. They weren't the only ones. It took almost all the post offices in northern Michigan by surprise. "I didn't know people had that many 29 cent stamps on hand," said Postmaster Jay Wheatley.

Wheatley reported that the post office ran out of three cent stamps Wednesday, Jan. 4. They went through 50,000 three cent stamps since the beginning of the year. Tuesday, Jan. 3, the postal workers sold nearly $8,000 worth of stamps to the 1,500 people who swamped the post office. Wheatley ordered another 30,000 three cent stamps, but isn't expecting them to arrive until Friday, Jan. 13 at the earliest.

As if the stampede for stamps wasn't enough, the post office was flooded with mail to deliver last week. Most of it was third class mail, consisting of catalogues and advertising supplements. Companies rushed to send out their sale catalogues before the postal rates went up, which resulted in truckloads of mail landing in Charlevoix during the first week of January.

Walter North opens Lansing office

State Senator Walter North (R-St. Ignace) has his Lansing office up, running and open to constituents.

"Serving the people of northern Michigan will be the number one goal of my staff and I," North stated. "I'm also looking forward to beginning my committee work," he added. "These committee assignments will give me the ability to effectively address the issues that are of direct concern to the people of my district."

North was appointed chair of the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee and also serves on the Transportation and Tourism Committee, the Education Committee and the Joint Committee on Administrative Rules.

North's Lansing office can be reached by calling (517) 373-2413, or by sending correspondence to Senator Walter North, P.O. Box 30036, Room 320, Farnum Building, Lansing, MI 48909-7536.

When it comes to finding things that we really want in our lives, sometimes the most important thing is shopping around. Those rare, important items are always well worth the effort if they fit well and give you good service. I promise you. If you give the Lord a real opportunity to work in your life and show you what He has in mind, you will discover there is no more fulfilling nor more perfectly fitting way of life than the one that He has already laid out for you in His Word. Don't take my word for it. Check for yourself and see if it doesn't fit everything you've ever hoped for and more.

Bodem to chair tourism committee

Speaker Paul Hillegonds has announced that state Rep. Beverly A. Bodem, R-Alpena, will chair the House Tourism and Recreation Committee during the 1995-96 legislative session.

"By assigning Beverly to this key post I am anticipating another productive term on tourism issues," said Hillegonds, R-Holland. "She will build on her experiences from the shared-power agreement and focus on bipartisan problem-solving. With 11 bills signed into law last session, Beverly was among the top five members in the House."

Hillegonds cited Bodem's 1993 revision of Michigan's Tourism Policy Act and her extensive efforts to create the Genevieve Gillette State Parks Endowment fund. The latter was an integral component of Proposal P, approved by voters last November.

"Both measures will contribute to the success of Michigan tourism and Beverly was instrumental in getting them approved," Hillegonds said.

Bodem is strongly committed to rural tourism revitalization and infrastructure improvements.

"Industries and tourist attractions depend on good roads and bridges. Northern Michigan's future will be enhanced by maintaining and improving our transportation system," Bodem said.

The 106th District lawmaker also wants to cultivate innovative strategies between the public and private sector, such as the international ferry between Alpena and Ontario.

"This is an exciting time to be involved in tourism. As a new century emerges, so are many new approaches in the travel industry," she added.

Bodem said Michigan travel officials are planning an initiative to improve the hospitality service level of the state. They also want to emphasize product development as a tool for building economic activity through tourism.

"Above all, we must sustain an aggressive promotional strategy to compete against other states in the region. This is essential if Michigan's tourism industry is to thrive in the years to come," Bodem concluded.

Basketball team splits games

Beat St. Ignace and lose to St. Francis

Charlevoix's varsity basketball team split two games at home last week. The Rayders beat St. Ignace 68-66 in overtime Tuesday, Jan. 3 and lost to Traverse City St. Francis 59-45 Friday, Jan. 6.

Charlevoix got a big game from several players to beat St. Ignace. Jerry Duhart had 20 points including two clutch free throws in overtime. George McClellan had 18 points including a basket with 20 seconds left in regulation play to send the game into overtime. Chuck Pop had 18 points and 13 rebounds. Trevor Williams had seven rebounds while Casey Crain had four steals.

Charlevoix fell behind in the first half, trailing 14-11 at the quarter and 35-27 at the half. In the second half the Rayders rallied. By the end of the third quarter they had sliced to three at 43-40.

The teams went into overtime tied at 56-56.

In the St. Francis game, Charlevoix never led. The Rayders fell behind 9-4 in the first quarter. Unlike some previous games this year when the offense has sputtered, the Rayders were getting player movement and ball movement. The Rayders set picks, but players were looping off picks, rather than cutting sharply off them. When players came open, the ball got to them a split second late allowing St. Francis defenders to recover and get back into defensive position. Although the Rayders offense sputtered and was out of synch, aggressive rebounding kept them in the game through the first quarter.

McClellan gave the Rayders a lift early in the second quarter scoring six points. His third basket of the quarter with 3:12 remaining in the half pulled the Rayders to within three points at 19-16. However, that was to be the Rayders last basket of the half. St. Francis scored seven more points and went into half time leading 26-16.

The second half was nondescript.

Charlevoix scored. St. Francis scored. The Rayders never were able to make a run and cut into the St. Francis lead. In the fourth quarter St. Francis bumped their lead up a few points to end up winning by 14.

Duhart led Charlevoix with 15 points and was the Rayders only player to score in double figures. Pop had seven rebounds while Williams had five.

The loss dropped the Raydres' season mark to 2-4 and league record to 0-2. St. Francis raised its record to 2-0 in league play and 6-1 overall. St. Francis is ranked number four in Class D.

Casey Crain (4) takes a shot from the perimeter during Charlevoix's loss to Traverse City St. Francis Friday evening. The Rayders fell behind in the first half and were unable to cut the deficit in the second half.

Wildlife Service schedules meetings to deal with Ruffe

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service will hold a public meeting in early January to provide citizens and interest groups around the Great Lakes an opportunity to comment on a proposed program to control the ruffe, a nuisance fish accidentally introduced into the Great Lakes.

According to Sandra Keppner of the Service's Lower Great Lakes Fishery Resource Office in Amherst, New York, the focus of the meetings will be management strategies to control the ruffe and prevent its spread throughout the Great Lakes.

The use of chemical piscicides to control the ruffe will be discussed and is expected to be a controversial issue among environmental groups, Keppner said.

According to European sources, the ruffe is capable of successfully adapting and thriving in areas of introduction, Keppner said. This small Eurasian fish was first identified in North America in 1987 by the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources in collections from the Duluth/Superior Harbor at the far western end of Lake Superior.

The ruffe, a member of the perch family, is believed to have been introduced into the harbor via ballast water discharge from trans-oceanic shipping during the early 1980s.

Since then, population abundance was increased sharply and distribution has spread rapidly, now including points as far east as the Ontonagon River in Michigan, approximately 180 miles east of Duluth Minnesota, Keppner said.

Population assessments conducted in the Duluth/Superior Harbor since 1989 indicate dramatic increases in the ruffe population, while native fish populations, including yellow perch, trout-perch, spottail shiner and emerald shiner, show declines. Since 1993, ruffe have been more abundant in trawl surveys than all other species combined.

Lakes Erie, Huron, and Michigan likely have the most available habitat for ruffe colonization based on the temperature requirements of ruffe. The thermal habitat utilized by ruffe is approximately the same as that used by walleye and yellow perch, allowing biologists to predict the amount of habitat for ruffe based on that available for walleye and yellow perch. Of the estimated 16.4 million acres (6.6 million hectares) of thermal habitat area available to walleye in the Great Lakes, 58 percent of that is in Lake Erie, the warmest and shallowest of the Great lakes; 21 percent in Lake Huron due to influences of the North Channel, Georgian Bay, and Saginaw Bay; 12 percent in Lake Michigan and Green Bay; 7 percent in Lake Ontario; and only 2 percent in Lake Superior, where ruffe are already having an impact on native species.

management, population investigation, surveillance, predator evaluation and public education. Although full implementation of this program awaits approval, Keppner said, some of the objectives have already been initiated. Surveillance monitoring has begun in all five of the Great Lakes to provide early detection of range expansions. Population investigations conducted in the Duluth/Superior Harbor have been instrumental in developing the control program and learning about the potential impacts of ruffe on native species and its potential for distribution throughout the Great Lakes.

A Voluntary Ballast Water management Plan for Control of the Ruffe in the Great Lakes has been initiated by the maritime industry to prevent inter- and intra-lake shipping introductions. Education programs have also been initiated throughout the Basin to provide a better understanding of the ecological impacts of aquatic nuisance species and society's role as potential monitors and controllers of aquatic nuisance species introductions.

The overall goal of the Ruffe Control Program is to prevent or delay the spread of ruffe through the Great Lakes and inland waters by containing the species to its current range in western Lake Superior. Three primary strategies have been identified including preventing eastward range expansion in the littoral zone of Lake Superior; preventing re-inoculation from Eurasian sources and intra- and inter-lake transport of ruffe via ballast water from established populations in Lake Superior; and preventing the deliberate or inadvertent spread of ruffe by anglers or bait dealers.

Objectives identified within the Ruffe Control Program to implement these prevention strategies include range reduction, ballast water

Elk to be transplanted to Wisconsin

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources has agreed to provide 25 elk to the state of Wisconsin in an effort to re-establish the elk herd in that state. As in Michigan, elk were once native to Wisconsin but died out in the late 1800s after years of unregulated hunting and disappearing habitat due to development.

"We have elk in Michigan today because, back in 1918, the state of Wyoming provided us with 20 elk to re-establish our herd," DNR Director Roland Harnes said. "Now we have an opportunity to help restore this magnificent animal to another of its native ranges, this time to Wisconsin. I am proud to serve as DNR Director at a time when we can share the successes of our wildlife management program with another state for the benefit of this species."

"Because the 25 Michigan elk will be taken from portions of their western range, where elk population densities exceed our population objectives, we expect no impact on elk hunting or viewing opportunities here in Michigan," said Ed Langeau, DNR big game specialist. "In addition, attempts will be made to capture family groups that already have strong social ties with one another, in order to ensure the most successful transfer."

The wild Michigan elk will be trapped at feeding sites in the vicinity of Gaylord in late January. Six bulls and nineteen cows will be captured and transported to a quarantine facility by personnel from the University of Wisconsin at Stevens Point working under supervision of veterinarians and biologists from the Michigan and Wisconsin Departments of Natural Resources. After mandatory testing for tuberculosis and brucellosis at the quarantine facility, the elk will be shipped to Wisconsin for release in their new home on the Chequamegon National Forest. This area was selected as the most suitable area for release based on several years of study and evaluation.

All funds for trapping, holding of elk at the quarantine facility, and for research to monitor released elk are from sources outside of Michigan. The Wisconsin legislature provided a line item appropriation to the University of Wisconsin for this project. The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation has committed $50,000 toward the reintroduction effort and has embarked on a national fundraising effort to continue to assist in this project. The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation is a national, non-profit conservation organization dedicated to ensuring the future of elk and other wildlife.

Dr. Saltonstall named Outstanding Citizen

At the old Hillcrest Hospital, he used to pull on a rope to haul patients up in an elevator which had been purchased from the local co-op. But not all patients were seen at the hospital. In those days, doctors made housecalls. At one house, while delivering a baby, the family cat knocked the chimney off of the kerosene lamp and that baby entered the world in the dark.

For more than 30 years, Dr. Gilbert B. Saltonstall served the community of Charlevoix. Jan. 12 at the Chamber of Commerce's annual meeting, he was named the 1994 Outstanding Citizen.

Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Jacqueline Merta presented the award, recounting some of the countless professional and civic endeavors Saltonstall has been involved in over the years.

Saltonstall was valedictorian of the Charlevoix High School class of 1926. Six years earlier he joined the Charlevoix Congregational Church and has been active in the church ever since, singing in the choir.

After graduating from high school, he attended the University of Michigan where in addition to his studies he was manager of the University of Michigan Band.

After serving his medical internship at Grace Hospital in Detroit, Saltonstall returned to his hometown in 1934 and began a 43 year medical career. He had purchased a full set of surgical instruments from another doctor's widow in Detroit. In the 1930s hospitals did not supply surgical instruments and the main criteria which determined whether or not a doctor performed surgery was whether or not the doctor had his own instruments.

Back in the 1930s, the Charlevoix hospital was the old Hillcrest Hospital on the top of the hill on Huribut Street. Saltonstall spearheaded the drive to build the new Charlevoix Area Hospital in the 1950s. In April of 1984 Charlevoix Area Hospital dedicated a new surgical wing, naming it the Gilbert B. Saltonstall Surgical Wing.

Snowmobile trail to link Charlevoix and East Jordan

By L. Scott Swanson

If everything falls into place, next winter snowmobilers could be riding on a trail linking Charlevoix and East Jordan. The trail has long been a goal of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce and area business people.

John Ferguson, a former member of the Chamber board and an avid snowmobiler, has been one of the people behind the formation of the trail.

"I think it's a heck of a good idea," he said. "I've seen what it can do for a winter time economy."

East Jordan is hooked into the Jordan Valley snowmobile trail system which hooks into a vast system of other state trails. The problem for Charlevoix snowmobilers or snowmobilers who would like to come to Charlevoix, has been the lack of a trail between the two communities.

This past summer the Chamber hired Chris Georgi of PRS Environmental to plot a trail and begin going through the paperwork necessary to establish a trail. Georgi has established a tentative route which primarily utilizes seasonal roads and has talked to Department of Natural Resources about developing a state endorsed trail.

Georgi said DNR officials have been receptive to the proposal. The state has a grant program which would help with marking the trail and developing staging areas. Having a registered trail also means that snowmobilers and landowners would be covered by liability insurance through the state and snowmobile associations.

Currently Georgi is waiting to hear back from the DNR to get the official blessing to proceed with the trail.

"I would hope to hear from the DNR pretty soon," he said. "I'm not sure what they have to go through."

Ferguson and other Chamber members are hoping the trail will be ready by next winter. Georgi says that with luck, it will be.

"It does seem like a very do-able thing," Georgi says of the trail.

noted that as of yet, the route is only tentative, but generally speaking would run near Monroe Creek. He said he hopes to keep the trail away from homes, in fact so far away that in most instances the trail would not be within earshot of homes.

Ferguson said Charlevoix used to get a few skiers staying in Charlevoix during the winter, but now most of them stay at the ski resorts. He feels Charlevoix has the potential to draw snowmobilers and winter tourism dollars. "Look at the facilities we have," he says.

...Saltonstall named Outstanding Citizen

During the era in which Saltonstall practiced medicine not all medical work was done in hospitals. Housecalls were common and payment wasn't always cash. Sometimes it was chickens, wood or vegetables.

While his professional work, which included delivering more than 3,000 babies, kept him quite busy, he also found time to lend a hand to many community activities. He helped establish a Charlevoix chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Singing in America. He was an avid sailor for many years. He supports the Charlevoix community swimming pool. He was one of the founders of the Mount McSaba Ski and Recreation Area. He donated the property for the present public library. He served on the Board of Directors of the Charlevoix County State Bank for 27 years. He was a member of the Chamber of Commerce from the time it formed in 1958 until he retired.

Like his association with the community of Charlevoix, Saltonstall's relationships with people have been long-lasting. His nurse served with him for 35 years and his secretary for 38 years. He and his wife have been married 60 years.

Merta's announcement that Saltonstall would be receiving the Outstanding Citizen award was greeted with loud applause. He walked to the front of the room, graciously accepted the award, smiled broadly and quietly said, "Thank you."

Chamber president discusses '94 successes and '95 goals

By L. Scott Swanson

Chamber of Commerce President Dick Joseph recalled some of the Chamber's successes for 1994 and set ambitious goals for 1995 while speaking at the Chamber's annual meeting Jan. 12.

In addressing a crowd of well more than 100 people gathered at Stafford's Weathervane Restaurant, Joseph said the Chamber of Commerce is one of the primary reasons Charlevoix is a good place to do business.

Joseph recalled the chamber goals set for 1994 and pointed out the chamber's success in following through on those goals.

He said the Chamber continues to monitor and work with local governmental units. Among the 1994 successes Joseph discussed were the passage of a Downtown Development Authority bond issue and the election of new mayor Josh Barnes.

Another of the Chamber's 1994 goals had been increased chamber membership. Joseph said the chamber added 50 new members during the past year.

The chamber also set out to continue assisting local industries and retain the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Acacia. Joseph discussed the addition of a new LexaLite plant and the expansion of other plants in the Charlevoix Industrial Park. He also noted that the Acacia remains in Charlevoix.

Establishing a snowmobile trail between Charlevoix and East Jordan has been a goal for a number of years. Joseph said that in the past year significant progress has been made and that by next year people should be snowmobiling on the trail.

"The snowmobile trail is going to be like opening a new factory in this town," Joseph said. "We all want to have a 12-month-a-year community," he added.

According to Joseph, the Chamber hopes to build on the successes of 1994 with the following goals for 1995:

1. Completing the snowmobile trail between Charlevoix and East Jordan.
2. Continuing to monitor and work with local governmental entities and fostering better relations with the Charlevoix school district.
3. Working with Consumers Power to encourage the continued use of the Big Rock Point plant.
4. Providing oversight and guidance for the Bridge Park project.
5. Continuing to develop and implement a comprehensive marketing plan for the community with particular emphasis on increasing fall, spring and winter tourism.
6. Working on the development of a new industrial park as the current one is nearly full.
7. Continuing to improve and expand the Chamber.

Snowmobile trail will boost winter economy

For years the thought of having a snowmobile trail linking Charlevoix and East Jordan has been a great idea waiting, and looking for a place, to happen. According to what's being said by the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, that great idea is now getting very close to becoming a reality.

This past summer the chamber hired a person to work on laying out the trail and lining up the necessary easements. If all goes well, by next winter snowmobilers should be able to do what boaters have been doing for years - take a fun cruise between two of northern Michigan's most beautiful communities.

Snowmobiling was at one time more popular in Charlevoix. At that time, people used to just go out bombing around in fields. Later, as snowmobiling evolved into more of a trail riding sport, snowmobiling's popularity in Charlevoix faded. Primarily, because there aren't that many trails to ride on in the Charlevoix area.

In East Jordan, the sport remained strong. One of the key reasons for that retained strength is that East Jordan is on the doorstep of the Jordan Valley which has a beautiful trail system which is linked to other trail systems.

Until now, when it came to accessing the Jordan Valley trail system, Charlevoix has always been just off the end of the trail. With a trail linking Charlevoix and East Jordan, we can join the party.

The economic benefits should be obvious. While Charlevoix traditionally has been a hopping town in the summer, winters have been long and cold in terms of the economy as well as the climate. Tourist dollars from snowmobilers would be a welcome winter-time economic boost. All of the services are in place to accommodate winter-time guests. The same places to stay, eat and shop that appeal to people in the summer are still here in the winter.

East Jordan, like Charlevoix, should also benefit. Economically, the only thing better than being at the end of a busy snowmobile trail, would be being in the middle of one.

East Jordan, like Charlevoix, has kind of been missed in terms of drawing tourist dollars from downhill skiing. Both towns are better suited to draw revenue from cross country skiing and snowmobiling. A trail linking the two communities could go a long way toward spurring winter economic growth.

Bay Harbor to make tremendous impact

by EDITH GILBERT

"People don't yet realize the tremendous impact that Bay Harbor — the new $500 million residential community — will have on Charlevoix, Petoskey, and surrounding communities in the near future," says Lynn DeGrow, president of the Beaver Island Boat Company.

The new development, as you know, is located on the former, barren Penn Dixie Cement plant property overlooking the scenic harbor of Little Traverse Bay.

"Bay Harbor will accommodate 500 boats in its yacht basin, which will be twice as big as Round Lake. This will increase boating traffic and what's better than a day trip to Beaver Island?" asks DeGrow.

Most people agree that although the short range impact may be gradual, the long range impact will be enormous. Only a few of the 800 projected homes on the $350,000 to a million dollar lots will be completed this year, and only 9 holes of the 27 hole waterfront golf course will be finished by August.

In talking with other local movers and shakers, one learns, however, that plans are already underway to meet the projected impact of these new, well-heeled neighbors. The Chamber of Commerce had a meeting with David Johnson, who leads the mammoth project. The Charlevoix Hospital hopes to attract future patients to its new out-patient facility, and possibly some expectant mothers to northern Michigan's first single-room birthing center. To accommodate the increase of large private jets, Josh Barnes, the mayor, is appointing an airport study committee "to address the issue of runway length, approaches, and fuel farm" this week. Merchants are poised to compete for orders on furniture, home appliances and security systems. Contractors are advertising for carpenters and electricians. Soon cash registers from Kmart to Kilwin's to car rentals will ring merrily.

The service industry will also benefit by those who have the skills and the temperament to cater to the needs of these clients. Tennis pros, life guards, caterers, hair dressers, janitorial services for homes and yachts, lawn care, photographers, florists, musicians, dentists, optometrists and masseurs will all be adding new names from far away places to their card files.

The down side, naturally, will be more traffic. Highways eventually will be widened and new traffic lights installed. The question is will the new homeowners shop in the Petoskey or Charlevoix? One's first assumption is that the bridge will deter people from heading south, but in talking to people in Petoskey, they claim the traffic situation there in the summer is so bad, that no one will choose to go north unless they have to. Good reason for homeowners to stay put if they can, and for services to be brought to Bay Harbor.

And what is going to happen to the phone system? Many of us can remember when we only needed to dial the last four numbers in Charlevoix. What a shock it was when we were asked to add the prefix 547 every time we dialed a number. And lately, we are even required to dial our area code 616 when we call anywhere outside of Charlevoix.

On the up side, it's encouraging to note that only 20 percent or 30 percent of the Bay Harbor residents are expected to be fulltime residents, while 50 percent will stay four to eight months and the balance will use the "place up north" only as a weekend retreat.

The impact on schools is expected to be minimal, but job training will be needed in all areas. This includes all phases of the hospitality industry including how to manage one's own business. Schools and colleges will need to offer courses on how to graciously deal with the public for profit. We still hear too many horror stories of rude behavior by untrained personnel. (Example: a customer asked a shop owner last summer if she would mail a purchase. Her reply, "Don't you think I have enough to do around here?")

Hopefully, some of the new settlers will contribute their special talents to make our historic resort area even more desirable to live in. Becoming involved by supporting the arts, the historical societies, the hospital associations, the churches — even rubbing elbows with old timers on the streets — will make the Bay Harbor impact a welcome one. As the old saying goes, "it takes two to tango," — so by the same token those of us who came here first, ought to welcome this new wave of resorters just as we welcome the return of the eagle to Michigan.

Letters to the editor

Courier Road Commission story criticized

Editor,

Let me start by saying that I have no contention with the political war being waged between the Charlevoix County Road Commission and Dick Gillespie and Don Smith. I don't care to know the intimate details and thank goodness consider it none of my concern. But when I do get involved, and concerned is when someone steps forward to attack a family member of mine on a personal level.

I am truly outraged over the slanderous article that was so irresponsibly published by the Charlevoix Courier in its Jan. 4 issue. The article was written by one Laurie Lounsbury (Lounsbury). This was an article printed about several things, but most importantly to me my dad. When reading the article I was shocked and appalled by the lack of common decency to get even the spelling of his last name correct. He was referred to several times as Herman whereas had Ms. Lounsbury done any homework (looking in the phone book maybe!) she would have found it is spelled with two Rs two Ns.

As I continued to read the article I couldn't get it figured out. Whether this was supposed to be an article, or belonged on the opinion page, I was increasingly alarmed by the lack of presentation of facts from the other side of the story.

I was just numb by the unprofessional personal assault allowed to be mounted on my dad, and others by Dick Gillespie and Don Smith, through the paper. This was done by an uninformed obviously unaware author who didn't bother to check statements before printing them as facts. In fact I don't think I have seen such sloppy journalism since reading the "rumor" page we used to print for fun in our high school paper.

I find it entirely pathetic that today - the 90s - the so called "age of communication" - that Ms. Lounsbury felt no need to contact any of the people so prominently mentioned for comments. Or something that would either lend to or dispel the credibility of the story. Also I find equally disturbing that an editor would allow such slanderous untruths to go to print with out any investigation into them what so ever. Whatever may I ask happened to the old adage "two sides to every story?" One would have to wonder if this article was reporting or paid for political advertising? I couldn't tell.

I guess if there is a shining point to this letter I would like to commend the Petoskey News-Review for their article published on the conflict. They took time to quote several sources including my father and I found it a very objective article. It left the reader with the facts and let them make the decision.

With all this in tow I would like not only an apology from the Charlevoix Courier but also a retraction on the items printed as fact that weren't true concerning my father Bob Herrmann. Your paper has allowed Dick Gillespie and Don Smith to harass my father publicly, and run his name through the mud over issues that were incorrectly reported on.

I also ask Dick Gillespie and Don Smith who have upgraded their harassment to Don Smith showing up on my dad's doorstep on the weekends, (no he's not in Florida as you reported) to try using some professionalism. If they are, as they say, trying to do what is right than how about going about it in the right way. It seems to me that they haven't been getting their way for their own personal agenda and they are trying to get my father out of the way as he seems to be intelligent opposition. Don, and Dick why don't you take your problems and complaints to a meeting of the road commission instead of trying to lynch your opposition? And to the Charlevoix Courier shame on you for aiding them in their witch hunt!

Sincerely,
Rae Ellen Brazier

(Editor's note: We apologize for misspelling Mr. Herrmann's name. The writer of the story initially understood Mr. Herrmann was in Florida and unable to be contacted. Two phone calls to Mr. Hamlin were not returned for the Jan. 4 issue. Later, after several phone calls, Lounsbury was able to contact Herrmann and Hamlin. A story regarding Road Commission problems appears elsewhere in this edition of the Courier.)

Pool proponents feel their project merits mention

Editor,

Is "Good News No News?" Neither your 1994 year end review nor goals for 1995 mentioned that, at long last, there will be a community indoor pool for the Charlevoix area.

I would like to list some of this "good news:"

- Four acres, appraised at $83,000, was donated by Charlevoix Country Club to Friends of the Pool, Inc. The site is within a three-minute ride from the elementary school.

- Five units of government cooperated closely to provide necessary permits and services needed for the pool project.

- Six local engineering firms donated their time to do the preliminary work for this project.

- At year's end, a sign was erected identifying the pool location on U.S. 31 N and a $300 grant for construction was awarded by the Youth Advisory Committee of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

The City Recreation Study of 1992 states:

"The major facility which is lacking within the immediate community, and planning area is a public pool. In an area where water oriented activities are as important as they are here, it is deemed essential that the youth of the community, as well as all age groups are trained appropriately to recreate in and around water. For that reason, despite the size of the community, a pool is considered an essential element of the plan."

Many of us are working hard to make the pool a reality as we believe it's vital to the health, safety and welfare of the community. Anyone wishing to volunteer can leave their name at 547-6960 or write P.O. Box 1, Charlevoix, 49720.

Sincerely,

Meeting to determine whether or not Club 77 has a future

By L. Scott Swanson

A lack of funding and manpower is threatening to bring the demise of the Club 77 youth center. While the youth center, located in a brick building on West Lincoln Street, continues to draw an average of about 50 kids to weekend dances, the board of directors has dwindled to a handful of people and not enough funds are being taken in to cover costs.

Kevin Janisse, President of the Club 77 board, has called a meeting for 7 p.m., Feb. 6 at the center. As he describes the meeting, "That'll be decision day. We're going to find out, does the community want this or do we close?"

Janisse estimates that approximately $5,000 is needed to keep the facility open for at least another couple of months. In terms of manpower, he says if 20 adults would volunteer to serve as chaperones, a schedule could be set up to take care of the manpower needs.

Club 77 has applied for some grants, but haven't received any lately. Janisse said that when the Club opened a couple of years ago, there was community support. Later the building had to be shut down for three months while remodeling was done to correct some building code problems such as a lack of exit signs. Now the building is adequate, but there is a lack of funding and personnel.

Most of the students who attend Club 77 are in from fifth grade to high school. The admission price to dances is $2. Janisse said the Club has always wanted to reach the point where it could host activities during the week, but currently is struggling just to maintain the weekend program.

Stupak named to health subcommittee

U.S. Rep. Bart Stupak (D-Menominee) has been named to two subcommittees within the House Commerce Committee. Stupak will serve on the Health and Environment Subcommittee and the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigation.

Legislation within the jurisdiction of the Health and Environment Subcommittee includes: public health and quarantine, hospital construction, mental health and research, biomedical programs and health protection, including Medicaid and national health insurance. The Subcommittee is also responsible for food and drugs, drug abuse, the Clean Air Act and environmental protection including the Safe Drinking Water Act.

The Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigation is responsible for oversight of agencies, departments and all programs within the jurisdiction of the full committee and for conducting investigations within its jurisdiction. Among other issues, the Oversight and Investigation Subcommittee investigates, and attempts to stop the waste, fraud and abuse of taxpayer money.

"The Health and Environment Subcommittee offers me the chance to impact major legislation that comes before the House of Representatives," Stupak said.

Four county commissioners ask road commissioner to resign

Herrmann declines and stays on board

By Laurie Lounsbury

Road Commissioner Bob Herrmann has been asked to resign by four of the six Charlevoix County Commissioners. The letter asking for his resignation was hand delivered to Herrmann last week by Chairman Don Smith.

"He said he would resign if he wasn't wanted, so we decided to take him up on his offer," Smith said. Smith was referring to a Petoskey News-Review article in which Herrmann was quoted saying, "Why should I work for somebody that doesn't want me? I have no problem with that."

The letter asking for Herrmann's resignation cited "a severe breakdown in the morale and management structure of the road commission," as the reason for wanting Herrmann's resignation.

Despite the letter, Herrmann has chosen not to resign. "I had the support of the other road commissioners," Herrmann said following a road commission meeting Jan. 12. "They did not think it was in the best interest of the road commission for me to resign."

"I think it's a poor reflection on him (Herrmann) to make a comment like that and then back away from it," Commissioner Richie Gillespie said after learning that Herrmann chose to stay on the commission.

Gillespie said that the county commissioners will have to take a wait and see attitude before they try to remove Herrmann from office. If the situation at the road commission improves, Herrmann will probably finish out his remaining two years on the road commission. "If he (Herrmann) continues to contribute to the breakdown of morale at the road commission, then I think we have no choice but to try to remove him," Gillespie said.

Commissioner Carl Price is hoping the situation will improve now that it has come to light. "I was in favor of asking him to resign, but I'm not sure I'm in favor of trying to remove him," Price said. "He knows there's a problem. Maybe he'll straighten up now. He had a positive attitude at the meeting," Price added.

Herrmann wouldn't acknowledge any problem at the road commission. "Every organization has its problems," Herrmann said. "I'm not at liberty to say what the problem is, that is, if there really is a problem."

Herrmann questioned the legality of the letter. Commissioners Smith and Gillespie admitted that they polled other board members about Herrmann, which is legal according to the Open Meetings Act. What is questionable is whether or not the commissioners could legally take action and ask for Herrmann's resignation without holding a public meeting. "If it was illegal, it was an honest mistake. We didn't know it was wrong to send a letter around to the other commissioners," Gillespie said.

State Representative Beverly Bodem, R-Alpena, (right) was recently sworn in as a member of the Michigan House of Representatives during the first day of the 88th Legislature. Administering the oath was Michigan Supreme Court Justice Elizabeth Weaver (left). Bodem represents the 106th District, which includes Alpena, Charlevoix, Cheboygan and Presque Isle counties.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

It is the quiet of the night that brings me to write. The day was so full of noise and distractions. The business that had to be accomplished didn't find me getting home until well after dark. It is hard to unwind when your world has you going full tilt for ten or twelve hours. For me anyway, it takes time to get my mind to shut down for the night.

I was on my way to Petoskey when the moon came up. Its huge orange glow seemed to fill the sky and signal that it was going to be a night to remember. Though the snow piles have shrunk dramatically, what remains crunches under your feet at eventide in a fashion that alerts you to the constant possibilities that surround you.

I had refilled the bird feeder over the weekend. I had been watching for new tenants to spread the word that a feast was waiting. I did not realize that the darkness brought visitors to the table as well. Two rabbits sat at the base of the feeder working on the spillage that had fallen from far above their heads. Even though the sky was aglow with the new silvery moon, stars galore filled the sky like crystals scattered across a black velvet cloth.

For whatever reason, God chose to wake me up to this particular night because I have been known to fill my days with all kinds of noise. I run the television at home sometimes not so much to watch anything but to just cover up the silence. I will play a tape or tune into radio in my study for the same reason. Driving in solitude never has tickled me that much either. I know for a fact that I am not the only one who has been known to do that. There is only one trouble with filling your world with noise. You may crowd out the very thing you need to hear most of all.

I cannot tell you how many times over the years that people have come to me and shared how they have trouble sensing God's presence in their lives and especially in hearing His voice. More often than not, the problem is that we haven't really made the effort to look for His presence or listen for His voice. In fact, if we are honest, we have gotten pretty good at crowding and drowning the Lord right out of our days. But oh how quick we are to go hunting for Him when the going gets rough!

One of the more often quoted verses from the Psalm is "Be still and know that I am God." The Psalmist was writing about what the Lord can be like in the midst of a sea of troubles. "Be still" is God's command. "Know that I am God" is His way of bringing the peace that you need to the noisy world that so often surrounds us all. I know it seems easier to fill your life with distractions. But those distractions don't make what you need to face any easier. Look and listen for the sounds and sights of God's presence in your life. The power He brings to bear in your life will give you a peace you can really live with.

Empty building becomes a hotbed of activity

By L. Scott Swanson

When the Weathershield business moved out of town a couple of years ago, the obvious question was what was going to happen with that huge, vacant building at the north end of town. Well, that building's still huge (54,000 square feet), but it's no longer vacant. It's been renamed the Charlevoix Commercial Center and lately has become a hotbed of activity.

Chris Smith, a Cincinnati, OH businessman with a cabin on Lake Charlevoix, bought the building Aug. 3 as an investment and began dividing it up and renting spaces.

"We're probably 75 to 80 percent rented," Smith said last week in a phone conversation with the Courier. "It's filled up very quickly."

Smith described what's currently in the building, beginning at the front near U.S. 31 and going back.

The front section is office space. A large portion of the office space is going to be occupied by the Private Industry Council. The Private Industry Council will have seven offices and a conference room. They're in the process of moving in and will be using the facility for employment training, among other things.

Behind the front offices are another block of offices which as of yet haven't been spoken for or completed. Smith said that space will rent for between $1.50 and $3 per square foot.

Farther back, there is a violin shop and beyond that a property management firm.

The Bi-Ceps Fitness Center takes up a large space near the middle of the building. With the additional space, Bi-Ceps owner Carney Russell has expanded the enterprise beyond barbells, treadmills and weight machines and now offers recreational activities such as an indoor archery range, an indoor golf range and martial arts instruction. Russell said Smith has been helpful and willing to work with tenants on improvements.

Several spaces at the back of the building are being used to store boats in the winter. Smith said there are two more fairly large vacant spaces toward the back which could be used for small shops, office space or storage - whatever somebody needs.

"The idea is to make it available for multiple companies," Smith said of the building.

Smith said he and his family have been vacationing in Charlevoix for years and also own other commercial property in the community as an investment. He said he's very pleased with the Charlevoix Commercial Center. "It's really going well and I would fully expect that within the next six months we'll have it fully rented."

Smith noted that as time passes he intends to gradually keep improving the property.

A few months ago this building at the north end of town was 54,000 square feet of empty floor space. Now it is an active commercial center and home to several businesses.

Steve Corporon, who ranks high on the list of great basketball players to come out of the state of Vermont, works on his vertical leap at the fitness center which occupies a large space in the midst of the Charlevoix Commercial Center.

Some strange winter weather

Johnathon Campbell slogs through the water outside of the middle school on an unseasonably warm day last week.

Not every winter day is warm enough to allow you to hide behind a snowbank while disdaining a winter coat in favor of a T shirt, but David Drury found such a day last week.

Two weeks worth of heavy snow melting in one week turned the Charlevoix Middle School into lakefront property for a short time last week.

Lake levels remain high despite low precipitation

During the month of December precipitation was below average on the Lake Superior, Michigan-Huron and Ontario basins while the Lake Erie basin was above average. For the year to date, precipitation on the entire Great Lakes basin is near the average. The net supplies of water to Lakes Superior, Erie and Ontario were above average, while the net supply to Lake Michigan-Huron was below average.

In comparison to their long-term (1918-1993) averages, the December monthly mean water level of Lake Superior was at its average, Lakes Michigan-Huron, St. Clair and Erie were 8, 10 and 9 inches above average respectively, while Lake Ontario was 1 inch below its average. Shoreline residents are cautioned to be alert whenever adverse weather conditions exist, as these could cause rapid short-term rises in water levels. Should the lakes approach critically high levels, further information and advice will be provided by the Corps of Engineers.

A more detailed summary of Lakes Michigan-Huron water levels follows. All elevations are referenced to International Great Lakes Datum 1985.

Lakes Michigan-Huron at the end of December were at elevation 579.20 feet (176.54 meters) above the mean water level at Rimouski, Quebec, or about 20 inches (54 cm.) above Chart Datum. The December monthly mean level of 579.36 feet (176.59 meters) was about 8 inches (21 cm.) above the long-term average for December. The lakes were about 26 inches (67 cm.) below the all-time high December monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986. The forecast shows that the January monthly mean level of Lakes Michigan-Huron will be about 3 inches (7 cm.) below what it was at Mid-December. The lakes are expected to continue their seasonal decline into February. The water level in Mid-June 1995 is expected to be about 7 inches (19 cm.) above the long-term average for that month, or about 2 inches (6 cm.) above what it was at the same time in 1994.

School to seek enhancement millage

By Laurie Lounsbury

The Charlevoix Board of Education had a lengthy list of items on the agenda Jan. 16. The board moved smoothly through the agenda, unanimously approving all of the action items with little or no discussion.

The only note of discord was struck during public comment. Jim Stewart told the board that his daughter took a seventh hour world geography class last semester, taught by Nelson Green, and was dissatisfied with the course content. Stewart said that according to his daughter, the class spent only ten percent of their time learning geography. The text book was abandoned after the first of October. Superintendent Roberta Jackson said she learned of the problem last Friday and is looking into it.

The following is a brief summary of the approved items.

*The board approved hiring Hagen Manker and Tom Conlan as coaches for the girls' soccer team. The two men applied for the position as a team, and will share the salary for the position.

*Rick Grunch was hired as the new girls' softball team coach.

*Janet Freidinger was hired as assistant tennis coach.

*School Business Manager Rich Kelly proposed that the schools hold a millage election on March 14. The election would ask for three mills of enhancement millage each year for two years. The enhancement millage would be used to pay for technology equipment, both software and hardware. It would also be used for new carpet at the elementary school, mechanical and structural work at the high school, and the removal of asbestos at the high school. It would also pay for new electrical work at all of the schools: The school's present wiring is insufficient to handle the electrical demands of computers. First grade teacher Christine Bentley told the board, "We only have two outlets in our classroom, and one is over the sink."

Kelly said a detailed budget for the millage would be ready in about two weeks. Estimates are that the school would receive a total of $2,145,000 in millage over the two year period. The costs of the projects would be about $2,150,000. The ballot proposal will outline the expenditures and revenues.

*Several curriculum changes at the high school were approved. Pre-algebra will be dropped, and a new, three part course called Applied Math will be adopted. The applied math classes will serve non-college bound students in the practical application of math skills needed in life and at work.

*A second construction technology class will be offered for students completing the Construction Technology One class. Teacher Brian Certa told the board that students in the follow-up class will build a moveable home at the high school, utilizing the skills they learned in the construction technology class. After completion, the manufactured home will be sold and moved.

Weaned off welfare

By Laurie Lounsbury

Ask Dawn O'Neal what she thinks of the new welfare reform and she won't mince words. "The system sucks," O'Neal said matter of factly. O'Neal isn't offering her opinion from the sidelines. She is one of the first welfare recipients in Charlevoix County to be shuttled into the Work First program. Work First is designed to ease people back into the work place so they can be weaned off welfare. So far, O'Neal isn't thrilled, but she is working for the first time in years.

O'Neal is a 33 year old mother of four children, ages two through nine. She's been collecting AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) for more than a year. Her husband can't help pay the bills because he's paying his debt to society in a downstate prison. O'Neal hadn't planned to work while her husband was incarcerated. She figured she would take financial aid, care for the kids, and sit tight until her husband returned.

Those plans flew out the window when her case worker from the Department of Social Services told her she had to try to get a job. "They said I had two months to find a job, and after that they would find me a

Puroll murder trial focuses on question of insanity

By L. Scott Swanson

Sometime between 11:30 p.m., May 5 and 5 a.m. May 6 Dan Puroll shot 81-year-old Clark Lee Washburn in the head. As Puroll's trial began last week in Charlevoix Circuit Court, nobody argued that point.

As one of Puroll's attorneys, Richard Zerafa, told the jury in the opening statement for the defense, this is not a case of who done it. The defense concedes that Puroll shot Washburn, but contends that it was due to temporary insanity. According to the defense, the 29-year-old Puroll is homophobic, passed out at Washburn's trailer while drinking beer, awoke to find Washburn having oral sex with him, freaked out, grabbed a loaded 22 caliber rifle and shot Washburn. An oral swab done by police investigators found sperm in the victim's mouth.

Prosecutor Richard May says physical and circumstantial evidence May has cited is the position the body was found in. Washburn was found lying on his back on the bed with his head on the pillow. He was nude, his hands were on his chest and his legs were crossed at the ankles. Washburn had been shot five times in the right side of the face. A State Police evidence technician testified that blood spatter marks indicate that when Washburn was shot, he was in the same position as which the body was found.

In his opening statement, May pointed out that there was no evidence of a fight or confrontation at Washburn's trailer near the corner of Korthase and Rogers Road between East Jordan and Boyne City.

Throughout the trial, May has repeatedly asked witnesses who saw Puroll before and after the shooting if Puroll appeared rational and aware of his actions. The witnesses testified that at the times they were with him, he appeared rational.

According to witnesses Karen Smith and Robert Ance, Puroll stopped by Smith's house around 9:30 p.m. and drank beer and talked with Ance until after 11 p.m. when the group ran out of beer. Ance said Puroll then said he was going to "Dog Man's" house to see if he had any beer to drink. Dog Man was a nickname for Washburn, who kept several dogs.

A neighbor of Washburn's testified that a large red Puroll logging truck arrived at Washburn's house at 11:20 p.m., May 5.

"At about 12:30 a.m., Puroll phoned John VanDorn to discuss running electricity to an outbuilding on Washburn's property. While talking to Puroll, VanDorn could hear Washburn in the background.

...getting off welfare assistance

job, and I would take whatever they found," O'Neal said. So she got a job. She works part time at a restaurant in Petoskey, making two dollars an hour plus tips. The job brings in about $425 a month. O'Neal's day care costs $210 dollars a week. O'Neal thinks it hardly pays to work.

"Basically, I'm working to pay for child care," O'Neal said.

O'Neal is still receiving AFDC while she works, but she has to pay for day care out of her AFDC grant money. If she gives up her AFDC grant of $659 a month, the Department of Social Services will pay 95 percent of her day care costs. Then the rest is up to her. If O'Neal continues to work part time, she will end up receiving less than she did when she stayed at home and collected AFDC. If she chooses to work 40 hours a week, with DSS paying most of her day care costs, she will end up with more money in her pockets.

O'Neal is mad. Life just got a lot more complicated for her, and her options don't seem attractive to her. O'Neal wants to be an auto mechanic, not a waitress. She wants training, not a job. "I don't have a choice here, I have to work. I'm dropping my ADC because I'm tired of pissing with all of this," O'Neal said.

Bonnie Worden is the financial aid director at the Department of Social Services. She sympathizes with O'Neal and others like her. "There is a shift in the focus," Worden said. "We used to look at the long range plans, which included job training programs. Now the primary focus is to get a job, get conneted with the work force," she explained.

O'Neal might have missed her opportunity for training months ago. The MOST program, (Michigan Opportunity Skills Training) will identify people receiving financial aid who need training to get out into the work force. "Maybe we didn't identify her. Unless she was aggressive, she might have faded into the background," Worden said.

O'Neal is not a person to fade into the background. "They've got me to the point where I could scream," O'Neal said. "I don't have a problem speaking out on this. I want people to hear me. There are a lot of people like me that won't speak out," O'Neal said.

O'Neal's frustration lies with the system itself. As a strong-willed, independent person, she doesn't like to have case workers watching her every move. She doesn't like the paperwork, accounting for every dime. "It makes me feel belittled, like I'm below their standards of what is a human being," O'Neal said.

O'Neal is so fed up she wants to get out of the system. She wants to work longer hours, get off AFDC and settle for state funded day care. "If I have to, I'll get a second job. I'll miss the time with my kids, but they'll be ok. Kisses and hugs make up for it," O'Neal said.

O'Neal makes a few things clear. There are some glitches in the new welfare reform system. Getting off welfare is a scary, emotional step for many people. People like O'Neal are confused and frustrated by the new system. "I feel like a guinea pig for them," O'Neal said. People like O'Neal are also working for the first time in a long time.

Michigan welfare reform - How does it work?

Michigan welfare reform can be explained in either twenty pages or two sentences. The two sentence version goes like this. People receiving welfare are going to start working. People receiving welfare will not be penalized for working.

For many years, the welfare system was designed to help people who were down on their luck. But once into the system, people had a hard time getting back out. It used to be that people on welfare risked losing their Medicaid if they got a job. They risked losing their food stamps or a portion of their benefits if they worked, even part time.

Welfare reform is trying to change that. People receiving AFDC can earn money and keep $200 a month, plus another 20 percent of their gross earnings (to cover job related expenses such as work clothes and car expenses), and still receive their full AFDC grant. For a person with kids in school, who doesn't have large day care costs, that's a pretty good deal. Those people will continue to get food stamps and Medicaid.

For people willing to give up their AFDC, the state will pay 95 percent of their day care costs. They will still qualify for Medicaid if their income is in the poverty level. They will continue to receive food stamps if their income is in the poverty level. Even if a person's income exceeds the poverty level, they can still get Medicaid for their children.

Any new people applying for welfare will be expected to get a part time, minimum wage job within two months. There will be help for them.

The Michigan Work First program provides intensive training to people on welfare to help them get a job. Work First helps people build self-esteem, learn how to write a resume, apply for jobs, and dress for interviews. "The Work First program is fine, it's fantastic," said Dawn O'Neal, one person who went through the program. "But you can't build self-esteem in a day," she added. (see related story)

New, able-bodied welfare recipients who don't make an effort to work could lose 25 percent of their grant money. If they make no effort to work for one year, and they are considered able to work, they could lose all of their benefits.

Charlevoix County Community Foundation gives money to area projects

Education, recreation, and cultural enrichment activities received some needed financial help from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation when trustees of the organization approved grants totaling $8,700. The grants are made with interest earned on the Foundation's permanent endowment, which has grown this year to nearly $1.7 million.

Projects selected for funding include:

- The Boyne Area 4-H Hockey Program, $1,200 to complete construction of an official outdoor ice hockey rink that will be used by area children;

- St. James Township, Beaver Island, $1,000 toward development of public tennis courts;

- East Jordan Community Schools, $500 to purchase special lighting for the auditorium, where students and the Jordan River Arts Council will stage drama and musical productions;

- Charlevoix County Probate Court, $1,000 to help purchase interactive computers that will allow children temporarily placed in state-licensed homes to continue their schooling through the Char-Em ISD;

- Camp Daggett, $2,000 to construct a new, barrier-free bath and shower house;

- Charlevoix Township, $3,000 toward the cost of re-engineering and resurfacing the Shanahan Soccer Field, used by children throughout the county.

Vel Kammermann, president of the Foundation, says the programs chosen for funding address a good mix of issues and serve people throughout Charlevoix County. "In reviewing grant requests, we attempt to select programs that target a variety of social needs," she explains. "These programs involve the arts, education, and recreation — and they have the potential to enrich our communities in many ways."

The Foundation began making grants last year, and, so far, has distributed nearly $70,000 to various community groups, in addition to more than $33,000 in scholarships.

Started in 1992 by local citizens from throughout the county, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation was set up to develop a permanent endowment that could support worthy projects now, and well into the future. The Foundation accepts charitable donations and manages them in trust. Earned income is used to fund a variety of health, educational, human service, community development, and cultural programs in the county.

More information about the Foundation and its grant making activities is available by calling 616/536-2440, or by writing c/o P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI 49727.

Editorial

We need local access to information superhighway

Unless you've been living under a rock, you've probably heard talk of the information superhighway. Well, if you live in Charlevoix and try to get on the information superhighway, one of the first things you'll discover is that we lack a local access ramp.

The information superhighway is really just a way of linking up your computer with other computers throughout the world. This is done by a modem, which is a little gadget that allows you to hook your computer into a phone line.

Once you have a computer and a modem, you can hook into one or more of several computer networks. One of the more popular networks is called America Online. Once you're hooked into one of the computer networks, you can do all kinds of fun things. The research potential is overwhelming. Once you become adept at figuring out where to look, it's amazing the questions you can find answers for.

Even if you're not interested in doing any high powered research, you can just use your computer to communicate with people. On the computer network, you can communicate with people in Arkansas, Texas, New York and Boston at the same time. Later before you sign off, you can leave a message for a friend in Toronto. There's a feature called Michigan Forum where you can obtain a copy of Governor Engler's State of the State speech and leave a question for him or one of his staff to answer.

The charges for the America Online service itself are quite reasonable. Ten bucks a month gets you five hours of the service and each additional hour costs about $3 more.

Where the service gets expensive is in the phone costs. The problem for people in Charlevoix, Petoskey, Boyne City etc. is that there's no local phone number you can use to access the service. The nearest number is in Traverse City.

As our society becomes more and more information oriented, convenient and inexpensive access to information sources is going to be very important to the people of Charlevoix and surrounding communities. It's not just a matter of convenience for computer hobbyists. It's going to be important for the economic and general well being of our community.

The world of information services is a developing thing. It's something which is important now and will be even more important in the future. Charlevoix has prospered as a community because in many areas we've shown foresight and vision. This is another area where we need to stay ahead of the game. We in northern Michigan need to get organized and push for local access to as many of the on-line services as possible.

Animal overpopulation can be stopped

Editor,

The harsh reality is that more than ten million healthy animals are killed in the U.S. pounds and shelters every year. The killing could easily be prevented by spaying and neutering. Euthanasia is the single largest cause of death for dogs and cats in the U.S. Each year 27 million of the animals are born. Ten to 12 million we classify as "surplus" and kill. That's about one million per month. These numbers do not include the millions of dead dogs and cats whose bodies we scrape off the streets, or the hundreds of thousands of abandoned, neglected or abused ones who never make it to the shelters to be counted and killed. The 10-12 million figure represents those we "must" kill because they are unwanted. Most of these animals are young and healthy; in fact, it is estimated that a majority are less than one year of age.

The problem is simple: We have too many dogs and cats. Too many for too few homes available. The solution we have opted for is to kill the extras. This solution has been considered acceptable by default, as though there were no other way to control the crisis. And we spend $1 billion every year destroying "man's best friend."

No single segment of the public can be blamed for dog and cat overpopulation; overall responsibility is shared by many groups. The source of the problem includes accidental matings, purposeful breeding by those hoping to sell the offspring, and "personal" reasons like, "I want my children to experience the miracle of birth," and "I feel it's unnatural to castrate my male."

A host of myths surround spaying and neutering. Unfortunately, they often discourage people from having the surgery performed on their animal. The following are some of the myths that are absolutely false.

- Preventing animals from having litters is unnatural.

- It's better to allow a female to have one litter before spaying.

- Behavior is adversely affected by surgery.

- Animals become fat and lazy after spaying or neutering.

- We don't need to neuter males because they don't have litters.

YOU CAN HELP END DOG AND CAT OVERPOPULATION

Spay or neuter your pets and encourage others to do the same. Spaying and neutering not only curtails overpopulation, it also provides medical benefits to the animal.

Adopt from your local animal shelter. All shelters are overloaded with adoptable animals who need homes.

Support your local shelter by volunteering. Many shelters are in need of volunteers and financial help.

Please help by being a responsible pet owner — SPAY OR NEUTER YOUR PET. Don't let your pet run at large, take your pet to your Veterinarian for yearly check ups and have the pet vaccinated.

Thank you,

Performing Pirates of Penzance

Performing Arts Director Connie Ford ambitiously decided to take on 'The Pirates of Penzance' for this year's musical. The Gilbert and Sullivan show is spirited and fast paced, but Ford is sure her students are up to it. "We have an across the board balance in talent, and this matched the talent of the kids," Ford said. Ford picked 'Pirates' because it is an ensemble work, giving all of the students an opportunity for a good role. "It's a habit of mine, I like to make sure we use the talent of all of the kids, so I pick pieces that will do that," Ford explained.

At a recent rehearsal, it looked like Ford used good judgment in choosing 'Pirates.' The cast put on a lively demonstration of their skills. The performing arts group will travel to the Bay City area this weekend for the district competition. The full show will be performed in Charlevoix the last weekend in February. ...trial focuses on issue of sanity

Shortly before 5 p.m., May 6, a neighbor called a sheriff's deputy to Washburn's trailer. Washburn's dogs were barking inside the trailer and the neighbor was unable to get Washburn to answer the door. Charlevoix County Sheriff's Deputy Roger Moses came to the trailer and after conferring with the undersheriff by radio, broke into the trailer and found Washburn's body.

State Police evidence technicians found three empty 22 cartridges at the scene. At the time, they didn't know how many times Washburn had been shot. Later, the autopsy showed he had been shot five times. The remaining two casings are still unaccounted for.

At the scene, police also found a box of 22 shells with 12 shells missing and a box for a 22 semi automatic rifle Washburn had purchased Thursday in Boyne City.

The rifle has not been found, but according to Ance, Puroll came to see him May 7, told him he had shot Washburn and needed help getting rid of a gun. Ance testified that Monday, May 9, he drove Puroll to the Deer Lake public access site and dropped him off. Ance then drove away and Puroll met him a short time later saying he had hidden the gun.

Later, Ance, fearing he would be implicated in the murder, contacted his attorney and arranged to talk to police. Ance had a charge of felonious assault pending for allegedly striking a person with a two by four. A bargain was arranged where that charge would be dropped in return for his testimony in the Puroll case.

Approximately 10 days prior to the murder, Washburn transferred ownership of his property to Puroll's brother, John. John Puroll testified that he initially met Washburn several years ago when he bought a hunting dog from him. Puroll said that in March of 1994, Washburn called him and said he had two hounds he wanted him to have. Between March and April, John Puroll ran errands for Washburn and stopped by his trailer periodically. According to John Puroll, Washburn decided he wanted him to have his property because he didn't want the state or his family to get it after he died. John Puroll took Washburn to Grand Rapids because Washburn wanted to visit his sister. At that time Puroll talked to the sister about the proposed land transfer and she said she had no objection. A quit claim deed, giving Washburn a lifetime lease and Puroll title to the property upon Washburn's death was filed with the county register of deeds office April 26.

Thursday, May 5, Thomas Schraw, an attorney who represented John Puroll, received a phone call from Washburn. Washburn said he was upset with Puroll for not stopping by the previous evening and wanted to cancel the land transaction. Schraw advised Washburn to talk to Puroll first and then, if he still wanted to cancel the transfer, contact an attorney.

John Puroll later contacted Washburn Thursday evening.

The defense contends that there is no evidence to indicate that Dan Puroll knew anything about problems with the land transfer.

The majority of testimony Friday was from Dr. Steven Berger, a Grand Rapids psychiatrist hired by the defense. Berger interviewed and examined the defendant for four and a half hours at the Charlevoix County jail July 9. He also reviewed numerous records related to the case.

Berger testified that Puroll indicated he went to Washburn's trailer May 5 and the two men drank beer and talked. They discussed extending electricity to the barn and also talked about the 22 rifle Washburn had purchased earlier in the day. Puroll showed Washburn how to load the gun. (In earlier testimony, the person who had sold the gun to Washburn, testified that at the time of the sale, he explained to Washburn how to load and operate the rifle.)

Later in the evening, Puroll became ill. He vomited in the toilet, then passed out, or went to sleep, first on the floor and later on a bed. According to Berger, Puroll said he woke up and found Washburn performing oral sex on him. He pushed Washburn away, picked up a rifle, shot him and left the house.

Berger has diagnosed Puroll as mentally ill, suffering from sexual aversion disorder, also referred to as homophobia. According to Berger, Puroll's mental illness led him to experience temporary insanity when he shot Washburn.

As a definition of legal insanity, Berger said the defendant was not able to conform his conduct to the requirements of the law in that incident.

"It is my opinion that, yes, he does fulfill the definition of legal insanity in regard to the Washburn shooting," Berger testified.

In a lengthy cross examination, May challenged the psychiatric manual (commonly referred to as DSM 4) which Berger utilized in making his diagnosis. May pointed out that among other things which the manual characterizes as possible sources of mental illness are: caffeine dependence or withdrawal; nicotine use or withdrawal; reading and writing disorders; math disorders; and premature ejaculation.

May and Berger also got into a protracted exchange over the semantics of the word "remembered." Berger contended that just because Puroll knew what he had done, didn't mean he remembered what he had done. Berger drew the analogy of tying a tie, saying he was sure he had tied his tie in the morning, but didn't remember doing it.

May asked if Puroll's supposed inability to remember the incident was consistent with the details he had recalled for Berger and others. Among the details May cited were Puroll's description of exactly where the gun was when he picked it up to shoot and telling people that he shot Washburn three times. May also noted that all of the lights were turned off. Berger said Puroll might have automatically turned off the lights when he left the trailer.

May asked Berger how much he was being paid for his work in this case. Berger said he had received approximately $4,000 for his work until noon on Friday and would be receiving an additional $200 per hour for every hour of testimony beyond that. He estimated that his entire compensation in the case would be approximately $5,000.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

My heart goes out to the folks at St. Mary's Parish this week. They are engaged in a week long "Mission of Renewal." In my church's tradition, we call them revival meetings. There is something special about a time of spiritual renewal or revival. Your whole being is focused on seeking God's blessing. Your prayers center on a reassurance of the Lord's direction in your life. Wonderful things can happen if you are truly open to the fullness of your heavenly Father's love.

There is a trans-denominational group of believers called the Emmaus Community that regularly holds weekend renewal meetings. They base their approach to ministry on Jesus' encounter with two very discouraged disciples on the road to a place called Emmaus following his resurrection. They thought their world had come to an end when Jesus died. They found it hard to believe that anyone could rise from the grave. So blinded were they by their emotions, they did not even notice as He shared their journey with them. Yet as He explained the prophecies concerning His life, something warmed within their hearts. It was when He offered communion that their eyes were opened and their renewal of faith was born.

Our Methodist brethren trace a high point in their history to a revival meeting as well. John Wesley was attracted to a gathering of believers at a place known as Aldersgate. He too sensed the stirring of the Lord's Spirit as the scriptures were unfolded. His heart was warmed as he recognized the divine direction that was set before him. Together with his brother Charles, an outreach began that brought countless people into the kingdom of God that might otherwise have been lost were it not for the stirrings of a revival meeting.

My own tradition finds revival meetings dotting its heritage from its very first days. Daniel Sydney Warner, the man looked on as the first minister in our group, fell under conviction at a gathering in Beaver Dam, Indiana. His heart was broken by how far apart the body of Christ had grown. He felt denominations had caused folks who were meant to be brothers and sisters in God's family to work in competition against one another rather than in unity to reach those who had never heard the gospel. He called upon listeners to seek to restore the unity between believers that the early New Testament church displayed. Focusing on a message of unity, holiness and heaven, the Church of God was born.

I am praying every day for the meetings at St. Mary's Parish. I'm trusting that Father Tom and his congregation have already sensed the blessings and stirrings of the Lord that they have been seeking. Spiritual renewal is a source of encouragement that anyone can benefit from. But you won't find it sitting at home reading this column. You'll find it when you open your heart to God. Reach out and get involved in a community of believers. It will change your life forever.

Community grant gives benefits to a variety of groups

Several programs that benefit area young people can stretch their budgets a bit, thanks to some help from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation's Youth Advisory Committee. Members of the advisory group met recently to award grants totaling $7,300 to non-profit agencies and special programs that serve Charlevoix County children.

Chosen for funding were:

- The Charlevoix City Police Department, $1,500 to support D.A.R.E., a drug education and prevention program aimed at elementary students.

- Crooked Tree Arts Council, $1,250 to enrich classroom learning by bringing a variety of performing arts programs to Charlevoix County schools.

Hospital offers classes to help new parents of young children

Just add water ... unfortunately, raising kids just isn't that easy. If it was, toilet training, disciplining, and satisfying a picky eater wouldn't be so complicated. Challenges like these often take the joy out of parenting. Determined to rekindle that joy, childbirth educators at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey are offering a new Growing Child Series for parents with children ages one month through three years.

According to Northern Michigan Hospital parenting and childbirth educator Judy Wojcik, one of the founders of the program, the series is designed to meet the needs of mothers and fathers during the early parenting years.

"Parents make it through childbirth classes only to find themselves muddling through the difficult aspects of parenting. Getting a child beyond peanut butter and jelly, disciplining with success, saying good-bye to diapers, erratic sleeping habits, and soothing a tiny new personality are major challenges by enabling parents to see the world through their child's eyes and problem-solve by drawing on their own resources," she said.

The series will be divided by age group to address the different developmental aspects of children ages 1-6 months, 7-14 months, 15-24 months, and 2-3 years. Northern Michigan Hospital parenting and childbirth educators Linda Grosskopf, Linda Sheppard and Judy Wojcik, who have been working with expectant and new parents for nearly 15 years, will host the series.

Mini lectures, group brainstorming, discussion and role-playing, as well as practical activities parents can do at home, will be the means for exploring the issues of nutrition, social/emotional development, play, learning, sleeping, toilet training, cognitive and motor development, and language skills. Parents also will be encouraged to present actual problems from home and to attend the entire series as their child grows.

"The classes will allow us to dispel a great many myths about child-rearing. Parents will soon learn that their baby won't do the same things at the same time or in the same way as anyone else's," explained Grosskopf, RN. "We hope parents will also rediscover each other in the sessions and come to realize the importance of maintaining an intimate spousal relationship after their baby enters their lives."

For the convenience of working parents, all classes will meet in the evenings from 7-9 p.m. at Northern Michigan Hospital, Petoskey. The first series, focusing on babies from 1-6 months old, meets Mondays, Jan. 23 and 30. Classes for the 7-14 months old are scheduled for Mondays, Feb. 20 and 27. Thursdays, March 23 and 30, are marked for children ages 15-24 months, and parents of 2-3 year olds will meet for class on Thursdays, April 6 and 13.

Call the Northern Michigan Hospital Parenting and Childbirth Educators at (616) 348-4762 for more information, registration and location, or call Health Access at 1-800-248-6777. A nominal fee will be charged for each series to cover materials. The water will be free.

It's not often that the Beaver Island based tugboat American Girl can make a supply run from St. James to Charlevoix at the end of January.

American Girl, piloted by John Gillespie, was in Charlevoix picking up a few necessities on January 23. That's the latest in recent memory that Lake Michigan was still open water. Will it ever freeze this winter?

Wrestling team improving

Charlevoix's high school wrestling team lost to both Grayling and Onaway Jan. 19 despite some exceptional individual performances. Ron Haggard, Erik Howard and Jason Metiva all won both matches on the evening.

A lack of wrestlers in the 100, 106 and 112 pound divisions caused Charlevoix to start both matches with forfeits. Against Grayling, Charlevoix also forfeited in the 185 pound division, losing by a score of 57-18. Against Onaway, Charlevoix also forfeited in the 126 and 185 pound divisions and ended up losing 45-42.

Howard was named the Rayder's outstanding wrestler of the night. Wrestling in the 126 pound division against Grayling, Howard pinned his opponent in 1:16. In the Onaway match, he stepped up to the 134 pound division and pinned his opponent in 4:30.

Haggard improved his season record to 17-1. Wrestling at 171 pounds, Haggard pinned his Grayling opponent in 49 seconds and his Onaway opponent in 1:40.

Metiva, wrestling at 151 pounds, pinned his Grayling opponent in 1:35 and was in the process of thrashing an Onaway wrestler when the wrestler became injured and could not continue.

Also picking up wins in the Onaway match were Dan Harris and Bruce Reinhart.

Harris, wrestling at 215 pounds, got in a bit of trouble within seconds of the match's start. But it only lasted an instant. He promptly got out of it and ended up pinning his opponent in 41 seconds.

Reinhart, wrestling as a heavy-weight, lost a tough 6-0 decision in the Grayling meet, but dominated the Onaway wrestler. Reinhart slapped his opponent to the mat with a mighty kerwhump in the first minute and had him pinned at 1:44.

One of the evening's most exciting matches occurred in the 142 pound weight class where Onaway's Nick Dennis defeated Charlevoix's Kyle Russell 16-12. The two were closely matched and went at each other. Russell had his opponent nearly pinned twice in the match, only to lose in the final seconds.

Charlevoix's Erik Howard pins his opponent Grayling opponent for a win. Howard was named outstanding wrestler of the night for his performance.

Planned Parenthood breaks records in 25th year

By all measurements, 1994 was a record-breaking year for Northern Michigan Planned Parenthood.

"Our two health centers provided services to more people than in any previous year, our prevention education programs reached more people, and our membership was at its highest ever level in 1994," said Scott Blanchard, Executive Director of Northern Michigan Planned Parenthood (NMPP).

"This type of growth indicates the level of need in our community for the services which Planned Parenthood offers and the support which we have from the community."

During 1994, the two NMPP health centers in Petoskey and Traverse City provided 5,977 client visits, an increase of 16 percent over 1993. As in past years, the majority of these services were annual gynecological exams and family planning visits. Testing and counseling for HIV, premarital counseling for marriage licenses, and testing and treatment of sexually transmitted infections all were services whose volume increased significantly over past years. In 1994, women from their teen through their eighties came to NMPP for health services and the number of men receiving services at the agency increased as well.

The greatest increase in NMPP's services occurred in the area of prevention education. In 1994, a total of 5,850 teens, parents, and other community members participated in Planned Parenthood's educational programs. This is a 52 percent increase over the number of people reached in 1993 and an all-time record for NMPP's education programs. As in past years, the "How to Say No" abstinence education program and the "From All Walks of Life" HIV/AIDS prevention program continue to be among the most popular of NMPP's educational services. During 1994, the agency developed and offered a new program, TROUPE - Teen Theater which provides teens information on a wide range of topics. TROUPE has quickly taken off, and 2,294 teens and adults attended a performance during 1994.

Northern Michigan Planned Parenthood depends heavily on the financial support of its members and other donors, who provide nearly half of the agency's funds. In 1994, NMPP received over $200,000 in local funds to support its work.

"As we celebrate our 25th anniversary of service to this area, it is very gratifying to see the support which the northern Michigan community has shown for our work," continues Blanchard. "It is clear that we are meeting a need for low-cost women's health care services and for accurate information about sexuality."

Halverson also doesn't want to ban snowmobiling from town. He would like to see riders using, not abusing, the snowmobile routes in town. Will feeding deer remain legal?

By L. Scott Swanson

So far the debate has been relatively mild. But don't be surprised if the possibility of the Michigan Natural Resources Commission recommending banning deer hunters from using bait such as apples, beets, carrots and corn, causes a loud and intense statewide debate in the next few weeks.

Among the things at stake is a deer food industry which the Great Lakes Vegetable Growers estimates puts $20 million in the pockets of Michigan farmers each year and in total is a $50 million industry. In addition to farmers and retail merchants selling deer feed, other voices in the debate will come from hunters. Department of Natural Resources (DNR) field officers and Lansing bureaucrats and legislators.

What baiting deer amounts to is hunters carrying apples, beets, carrots or corn into the field and creating a bait pile. Then the hunter sets up a blind near the pile and waits for deer to come to feed.

Baiting deer has been done for years, but in recent years, depending on who you talk to it has either grown in popularity or at the very least become more visible to the general public.

Places where deer food can be purchased include farms, farm markets, co-ops and many gas stations. Bait can be bought by the bag, truckload or ton. There are also small bait blocks made of compressed apples or salt which can be purchased.

Growing and selling food for deer has become a fairly large business in the Charlevoix area. Dave Grutsch, a farmer and owner of Peninsula Produce between East Jordan and Boyne City, grew 20 acres of carrots last year. On average, each acre planted produced 15 tons of carrots. Each ton of carrots sold for $50 resulting in gross receipts of about $15,000. Grutsch said he sold out by Oct. 30.

Gary Marvin, owner of Marvin's Gardens in Charlevoix, says, "If (the sale of deer bait is) completely banned, it could wipe out 50 percent or more of my October and November sales and 25 to 30 percent of my December sales."

Marvin notes that if the DNR attempts to ban deer baiting, one of the first things they'd have to do is to define what constitutes baiting and what is merely feeding the deer. Marvin says its not uncommon for people who don't hunt to buy food for deer. He says they feed deer and watch them in their backyard, the same way many other people feed birds and watch them. Marvin speculates that even if deer baiting is banned, people will probably still do it, they'll just be a little less obvious about it.

"If (the sale of deer bait is) completely banned, it could wipe out 50 percent or more of my October and November sales and 25 to 30 percent of my December sales."

Gary Marvin, owner of Marvin's Gardens

One area DNR officer said he doesn't feel the impetus to ban deer baiting is coming from the officers in the field. He said as far as the field officers are concerned, he doesn't think you'd find hardly any support for eliminating baiting completely. He added that six of seven area field officers use bait when they hunt and the seventh uses artificial scents.

There are a variety of options be-

County considers union contract

By Laurie Lounsbury

County road employees and county building employees packed the commissioner's room at the Jan. 25 Charlevoix County Commissioners' meeting. The employees were there to put pressure on commissioners to resolve contract negotiations. Both the road employees and county employees have been without a contract for more than a year.

County employees voted to form a union a year ago in December. The vote passed narrowly, with 30 in favor and 27 opposed to joining the union. Since then, little has been done to negotiate the union contract. "Up until now, there hasn't been a strong push to get this thing settled," said County Board Chairman Don Smith. Smith also said that there was a possibility of a union re-vote taking place during the previous 12 months, but Smith wasn't sure how it was supposed to work. Union representative Billy Burling explained that after a 12 month waiting period, an employer can ask for a re-vote if he thinks there is justification. In this case, the employer would be the county commissioners. "They can't automatically ask for a re-vote. They have to have justification, show that there isn't enough interest in a union. I'm sure they're not going to find that in Charlevoix now," Burling said. In spite of Burling's opinion, there are still quite a few county employees opposed to the union. (See related story)

County employees supporting the union are hoping to get a contract similar to the sheriff's deputy contract. Smith said he could agree with that.

Road employees had more to complain about than just a lack of a contract. Employees aren't happy with their manager Larry Hamlin and the morale at the road commission. "We'd like a little respect from management. We resent being called grease monkeys and whiners," said Randy Thompson, a road employee. Walter Olson said it's difficult for employees to go to work each day when morale is so low. "He doesn't care about us, so how can we care about going to work for him," Olson said of Hamlin.

Bob Dunnette has worked for the road commission for 48 years. He said Hamlin disregarded the recommendation in the factfinder's report regarding vacation days. The report allowed for employees to take two or three of their vacation days one at a time.

Commissioner Phil Johnson agreed with road employees that Hamlin was a problem. "I don't think (Bob) Herrmann's a bad road commissioner. I think the problem is with the manager," Johnson said.

The commissioners tried once more to remove road commissioner Herrmann from his position. Jan. 25, they formally voted on the matter, with four commissioners voting in favor of asking for Herrmann's resignation. Johnson and Commissioner Jim Behling voted against asking for Herrmann's resignation.

Employees have mixed feelings

By Laurie Lounsbury

Unions are supposed to unite workers, but at the Charlevoix County building, quite a few employees see the union dividing them up. The rumblings of union discontent can already be felt at the county building.

Employees who support the union don't want to be identified. They say they fear reprisal from their bosses. Their biggest reason for wanting a union is to protect their rights. "We want 'just cause' versus 'at will'," said one union supporter. She explained by saying that right now employers can fire at will. A union contract would require that employers be able to show just cause for firing a person.

Employees on the other side of the fence disagree with that idea. Jeannie Davis works in the equalization department and isn't afraid to discuss the union issue. "I think if you're doing your job, you won't get fired. If you do get fired, there are places to go to get the situation resolved," Davis said.

Carla Spencer has other reasons for fearing the county unionization. Spencer is the assistant to the equalization director. When Spencer started working for the county 25 years ago, she was a front office clerk. "I've had the opportunity to learn and advance. If I'd been in a union it wouldn't have happened," Spencer said. She is afraid that strict union job descriptions will make it difficult for management and employees to work together. "I'm afraid people are going to be stifled by a specific job description. People won't be allowed to learn. Management will only manage, and then it's going to start costing the county a whole lot more," Spencer said. Both Spencer and Davis said they have always been treated fairly by their employers. They receive raises every year, and they both think the benefits are excellent. "I have a good boss who treats me fairly and gives me respect. Even if I didn't get a raise, it's ok if someone appreciates you," Davis said. Davis works for Joan Blanchard.

ing discussed regarding possible changes in the law. These options range from maintaining the status quo to completely banning baiting and in between those extremes include the possibility of restricting the amount of bait hunters can put out or allowing baiting only on private land and not on state land.

The area DNR officer said allowing baiting only on private land and not on state land would probably be an enforcement nightmare and create additional problems with trespassing.

He viewed with more favor the possibility of limiting the amount of bait hunters can use. Currently, hunters can haul as much bait into the woods as they want. For most hunters, that means apples by the pail-full or perhaps a few bushels of corn or a bag of beets or carrots.

However some hunters drive truckloads of vegetables into the woods. While some people would argue that regulating the amount of bait hunters may use would be difficult from an enforcement standpoint,

"I don't see any way that it's hurting the deer herd."

Ed Langeneau, DNR Big Game Specialist, commenting on the effects of deer baiting on the deer herd.

The DNR officer counters that there are regulations governing bear baiting which are successfully enforced.

Advocates of deer baiting contend that it allows hunters to see more game, as well as other wildlife, and allows them to make cleaner kills since they end up with better shots. Furthermore, they argue that hauling bait to the bait pile becomes part of the enjoyment of the outdoors. They also maintain that having a bait pile really isn't that much different from sitting on the edge of a cornfield.

Opponents argue that baiting modifies the normal movements and habits of deer and is unsportsmanlike.

Thusfar, nobody is arguing that baiting is harming the deer herd.

Ed Langeneau, a DNR big game specialist in Lansing, said, "It's not doing anything negative. In some cases, it's helping the herd." He said there have been no disease or nutritional problems resulting from baiting and it hasn't affected deer movement into winter yarding areas. "I don't see any way that it's hurting the deer herd," Langeneau said.

Langeneau said that currently the DNR is gathering information and public input. There will be a series of meetings throughout the state (See related story elsewhere in this week's Courier) and the DNR has done a survey and is receiving mail. Langeneau said the survey indicates that most Michigan hunters favor restricting the quantity of bait which may be used, but oppose a complete ban. He said that mail has been about equally divided three ways between leaving things as they are, restricting bait quantity or completely banning baiting.

Vane Smith, secretary for the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club, said the club hasn't taken any formal position yet, but that the issue is something members have informally discussed.

With winter finally here in earnest, local people have been able to enjoy winter activities such as skiing, sliding and skating. Rene Golovich-Keie holds on to Calvin Townsley as they slide down one of the hills at Mount McSaubia. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

DNR schedules meetings to discuss deer baiting

The Department of Natural Resources will conduct six statewide citizen input meetings on various issues related to deer hunting in Michigan. Members of the Natural Resources Commission may also be present.

"We especially want to hear from Michigan sportsmen and women whether they think hunting deer over bait should continue as it exists today, whether some restrictions or limitations should be imposed, or whether the practice should be eliminated," explained DNR Director Roland Harnes.

"However," added Harnes, "citizens may utilize these public forums to discuss any aspects of deer hunting. We will not limit expressed opinions exclusively to the baiting issue."

"Those of us who enjoy the sport of deer hunting need to listen to each other and, together, determine appropriate actions to address some controversial issues facing us. That's what these meetings are all about," Harnes concluded.

All meetings will run from 3 p.m. until 5 p.m., and will resume again at 6 p.m., and continue until 10 p.m. Those attending the meetings will be asked to fill out a card expressing their opinion as to whether hunting for deer over bait should be (1) LEFT AS IS, (2) LIMITED or (3) ELIMINATED. Anyone wishing to verbally express their opinions will be granted between three to five minutes to do so, depending on the number of people desiring to speak.

Meeting locations and other specifics are as follows:

Tuesday, February 28, Cheboygan: National Guard Armory, 610 Cuyler.

Wednesday, March 1, Acme: Grand Traverse Resort, Blossom Room, 6300 U.S. 31 North.

Citizens are also welcome to submit comments in writing to: The Michigan Department of Natural Resources, Wildlife Division, P.O. Box 30444, Lansing, MI 48909.

The Natural Resources Commission conducts its next monthly meeting and provides yet another forum for public comment on February 8, in rooms 204/205 of the Lansing Center, 333 E. Michigan Avenue, Lansing. For more information, please contact Karen Scott at 517-373-2352.

Justice is better served here than in Simpson case

Is anyone else pained by the hundreds of thousands, more likely millions, of dollars being spent on the O.J. Simpson trial? Worse than the money being expended is the time of so many people.

Granted, two people are dead and the freedom of a third is on the line. Even more important than the lives of three people is the general concept of justice. Justice, as a concept, affects more than just three people. It affects us all.

Society has a moral imperative to address criminal acts such as murder. In order for American society to function as the vast majority of us would like it to, when someone is murdered, then what did the murdering need to be brought to justice. Why? Well, to begin with, you don't want the person who has committed the murder to make a habit of it. And beyond that, you don't want other people to begin getting the notion that murder is acceptable behavior.

While wanting to put a damper on murder and other crimes, in the interest of justice, you also want to make sure that innocent people aren't jailed for crimes they did not commit.

With all of this in mind, both the need to convict and punish the guilty while insuring that innocent folks aren't railroaded, the United States has developed a pretty elaborate court system.

But this court system has some flaws and those flaws are very evident in the Simpson case. The system allows itself to be manipulated. In the Simpson case, this manipulation is taking the form of drawing out the trial into a needlessly long and expensive national spectacle.

This trial is expected to take months - not days, not weeks, months. Months of time for jurors, the judge, court staff, prosecutors and attorneys. Hundreds of thousands, more likely millions, of dollars some out of the defendant's pocket, some out of tax payers' pockets.

There's simply no need for this and no way it can be justified. There's no reason on earth that every relevant facet of the case can't be discussed in a three-week time period. Anyone who can't come to a conclusion after listening to about three weeks of testimony, probably shouldn't have the fate of anyone resting in their hands. And in fact, they probably shouldn't be allowed to cross the street by themselves.

Recently, we had a murder trial in Charlevoix County Circuit Court. The trial featured some peculiar arguments and some interesting twists. But it moved forward. The defense made its case. The prosecution made its case. When questions arose, the judge made a decision. The jury heard evidence from both sides, drew a conclusion and rendered a verdict.

Watching the Charlevoix Circuit Court trial, you couldn't help occasionally thinking about the Simpson trial going on thousands of miles away. But if you compare the two, and this will grow increasingly apparent as the Simpson trial drags on in the months ahead, you reach an inescapable conclusion. Justice was not only carried out more expeditiously in the Charlevoix Circuit Court, it was safer in the Charlevoix Circuit Court than it is in the Simpson trial.

EDITH

This morning, when I looked out of my window, a bright winter sun was striking the icicles hanging from my slanted roof, making them sparkle like diamond daggers. Beyond the icicles, snow glittered like silver on my white lawn. The beauty of it all lifted my spirits. And to top it off, there were deer tracks in the snow between streaks of black, a shadowy reflection from the bare trees.

Only the deer and I, are here to enjoy the peace. Almost everyone who is able has fled south or west to the noise and bustle of golf carts, marinas, and malls. It is as quiet here as the commercial where you can hear a pin drop. Neither the phone nor the doorbell rings, nor a dog barks. Once a day the school bus goes by.

I enjoy hibernating. For days now I've been throwing our mountains of papers from my files, cleaning out drawers, paying holiday bills, reading and watching television.

Television, aye, there's the rub. The only channels that aren't snowy at night are CNN, PBS, and Cspan. Most of the time ABC is impossible to watch — the quality is so poor, which is unfortunate for Ted Koppel, but fortunate for Charlie Rose on PBS. Someone on the tube has been urging me to call our cable office and ask for the new History channel, which I did. We're not getting it and probably won't, because "it's expensive and we would have to raise rates." I was told by a friendly voice from TCI, our cable company.

A friend also called me to complain that we in Charlevoix are not getting the Educational Access Channel, which is run under the auspices of North Central Michigan College in Petoskey. This channel features not only college courses, but news programs in German, Spanish and French, which sounds like fun for anyone wishing to brush up on their language skills, and a lot more fun than watching pitchmen sell gold chains, semi precious stones, and exercise equipment. Anyone who is keen on having this channel in Charlevoix, should call TCI and ask, "Why isn't our cable company hooked up to PACE?" (Providing Academic Cost Effectively). There is no charge if you have cable.

Of course, everyone is watching the O.J. Simpson trial on all channels, whether one wants to or not. Yesterday, while seated in a coffee shop for lunch, a very nice couple, whom I didn't know, sat down next to me. The woman announced that she was taping the opening defense of the trial, so she wouldn't miss a beat! One thing led to another, and we pleasantly discussed all the pros and cons of the fascinating trial until it was time to leave.

Another fun thing to do during this quiet period, with no summer houseguests, is to go on weekends to the Virginia McCune Arts Center in Petoskey and see great foreign films. A very active group has successfully launched this project, which is in its second year. It has been my good fortune to have seen the very best award-winning films ever here! Out of a dozen or more films, I can honestly say, there were only two that I would have skipped, given a choice. If you like action, car chases, violence, and raw humor, this is not your cup of tea. But if you appreciate fine photography, subtle humor, tender relationships, exotic settings, and thoughtful characterizations, then you ought to give foreign films a try. A lot of people do on Friday and Saturday evenings or on Sunday afternoons.

In the meantime, our bundled-up mailman walks the streets of Charlevoix in our 5 degree temperature and delivers postcards from warmer climes. "Wish you were here." Come March and April, the muddy season, I will take you up on the invitation — but not now. It's too beautiful.

Letters to the editor

Saltonstall tribute well deserved

Editor,

What a guy! It was very gratifying to see the excellent Courier article regarding Dr. Gib Saltonstall's Chamber of Commerce award for being Charlevoix's 1994 Outstanding Citizen. We are among the 3,000 plus babies he brought into the world. He hasn't forgotten that either as he's reminded us of that fact many times when our paths have crossed. It wouldn't surprise us if he knew most of the others by name. We guess that's what sets Dr. Gib apart from most doctors — once you were a patient of his, you were a member of his "family." He still often will stop to visit former patients housed in the Charlevoix Hospital and on occasions calls others when they are recovering at home.

Dr. Saltonstall is one of a rare breed that simply loves his hometown and wants the very best for his community and those that live there. He's a healing legend in Charlevoix that only too few present day Charlevoixians know and remember.

Congratulations to the Chamber for realizing that Dr. Saltonstall's "giving" style was deserving of this high honor.

Thank you Gib for all the years of special care and love you've given to Charlevoix and its people.

From a couple of your many babies,

Joyce and Deano Davenport

Club 77 needs to be saved

Editor,

Here in Charlevoix there's a place on W. Lincoln called Club 77. Club 77 is a teen center, where teens come to socialize and to simply have a great time. We're open on Fridays and Saturdays from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m.

During those two days out of the week we have the place open so the kids can come and dance to the music of their choice as long as there's no swearing or Satanic stuff. During those two days that we're open we also run a concession stand that sells popcorn, pop, pizza-pockets and candy.

The teen center has seven chaperones. Anne & Butch Hart that run the concession stand, two that monitor the game room, three that monitor the dance room area. I know that in the past year and a half that there were a few problems. But thanks to Anne & Butch Hart those problems have been solved.

About one week ago, I was told that Club 77 in Feb. was no longer going to be open because as of right now we're $2,500 behind on rent of the teen center. The reason is because teen attendance is slightly down, but that isn't the entire reason. When the club first opened we had arcade games there, and more teens. At that time area merchants were donating money and making contributions. But why the sudden decline? Well the answer is simple, they gave up. So as of this day we no longer have a big turn out because the games have been taken out. That's the reason why attendance is slightly down.

The second reason is attendance, because when a teen goes there and finds that there isn't a big turn out he or she wonders what's going on. Also at that particular time area churches were donating money. Then suddenly they stopped. I guess they gave up too.

I apologize if this letter sounds a little harsh. I'm not trying to offend anyone. I'm simply making an important viewpoint. The reason for writing this letter is because I myself am one of the seven chaperones. I've been chaperoning with the others for about two years and we like it a lot thanks to Anne & Butch. I personally think that if area merchants as well as churches would once again contribute it would greatly be appreciated. Then once again we could get our arcade games back as well as our attendance. If that can happen, then when a teen comes there they'll think, "Wow, this place has a good turn-out, let's invite all our other friends." You see, if the club closes, the teens no longer have a place to go to. Why take something away from them that they enjoy doing? For example, they like to go there and dance. Another reason is to communicate and make new friends. Of all the times I've been going there to chaperone, the kids are really open when it comes to issues regarding the club. They all communicate extremely well with chaperones as well as with each other. They are all outstanding. I feel that it's not fair to close Club 77 because it's like taking something special away from them. The place is completely drug & alcohol free as well as smoke free. So all I'm saying is please donate, make contributions so the kids can have a place to go and to stay off the streets.

You see, a place like Club 77 will keep the kids out of trouble. So once again area merchants as well as churches, let's work as a team so that we can make a difference for our youths. Let's give our youths an opportunity to build self-esteem as well as confidence. See if people contribute around here, to keep Club 77 open our youths can have the opportunity to communicate and make new friends. Some of you probably think that it's a waste of time to have a teen center.

But however, if you go to Club 77, walk inside Friday and Saturday evenings you will see the kids socializing and dancing and hanging out with their friends. So you see that's what Club 77 is all about is meeting new friends and communicating with one another. So please community of Charlevoix, don't take this opportunity away from them. Let's all work together so that we can all make a difference and we as well as our youth can achieve our goal. Thanks very much.

Sincerely,
Matthew Seaman

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

In the constant quest for things that will preach, one never knows where you may uncover a gem of spiritual wisdom. This particular week's exploration came from that fountain of comfort and insight known as my loving family physician.

It seems he was one of the hosts of last weekend's Robert Burns Dinner; that illustrious gathering of those who have Scottish ancestry or just plain love the Highlands. One of the guests at the dinner unfortunately lost a diamond ring. Fortunately, they knew my doctor friend was a resourceful and creative soul.

Returning to the scene of the dinner the next night when all was dark and quiet, he brought a powerful spotlight with him. Keeping the room dark, he got down on the floor and carefully shined the light around its perimeter. Realize that one of the diamond's most endearing qualities is the way it reflects light. Recalling the tale, the doctor said it was like the ring suddenly jumped out of the darkness and said hello! A happy ending for our fearless searcher and the ring's worried owner made all the difference in the world.

Now, as to where that little odyssey will preach, think about something. Have you ever felt like your faith suddenly got misplaced? As something I trust you value, faith can be taken for granted. And when taken for granted, faith's light can be hidden by all kinds of things. Doubts can block it. Fears can overwhelm it. That macho human tendency that far too many of us have to try to handle everything ourselves can all too subtly force it back into some darkened corner of our hearts. When we realize that faith is the only answer to a lot of things in life, we panic when we can't find it or it doesn't work like it once did.

Jesus told us long ago that He was the light of the world. One of the apostles reminded us that as people who have walked in darkness, in Christ, we have seen a great light. When you wonder where your faith has gone, the most important thing to do is ask yourself what you have done with Jesus. He is supposed to be sitting on the throne of your heart. He is supposed to be your partner in life guiding your every step and assuring you of His care. Your faith will never function like it is supposed to if you have taken back the place in your heart that is rightfully the Lord's.

Turn off all those fears, doubts and worries. Shine the light of Christ upon every nook and cranny of your heart. Before you know it, the diamond that is your faith will reflect its presence in your life once again. And there is nothing like faith to insure that all your days will find you living more happily ever after.

DNR warns people to be cautious on frozen lakes

Due to the changing weather over the past few weeks, ice conditions in many areas of the state are especially hazardous, and ice anglers and others walking on ice should use extreme caution.

The ice formed by a cold snap in early December has deteriorated due to warm rain and alternate freezing and thawing. These conditions tend to "honeycomb" and weaken the ice, making it unstable and dangerous. In addition, many lakes are covered with several inches of snow, slush, or standing water. This insulates the ice and prevents it from refreezing, and also makes the ice difficult to evaluate. Ice should always be carefully evaluated on a case-by-case basis: never assume that ice at a certain location or of a certain thickness is safe. The following regional information is offered only as a general guide.

Northern Lower Peninsula: some of the deeper lakes have just recently frozen over, and ice may be only one to two inches thick and very dangerous. The smaller lakes are more likely to have safe conditions.

If you go out on the ice, observe these safety precautions:

- * Wear a personal flotation device, and don't fish along.
- * Use an ice spud bar or an auger to test the ice ahead of you.
- * Before venturing out on the ice, check with local sources such as bait and tackle shops for the most up-to-date information.
- * Avoid ice formed over flowing water near shore, around inlets and outlets of streams, or on lakes with springs.
- * Avoid aeration devices such as warmwater bubblers used near marinas.

* Carry a couple of large nails and a length of light nylon rope, if you should go through the ice, the nails could help provide a "grip" on the slippery surface and aid in getting out.

* If you do break through the ice, try not to panic. Remember to turn toward the direction you came from — toward the ice that supported you. Use the nails or your hands to gain a hold on the unbroken surface of the ice, and advance by kicking your feet.

* Once you get out of the water and are lying on the ice, don't stand! Roll away from the point where you broke through until you are on solid ice.

* If you see someone fall through the ice, do not run toward the person. Carefully extend a rope, ladder, pole or line to the victim.

Master Gardeners host annual meeting

The Northern Michigan Master Gardener Association installed new officers and reviewed the past year's accomplishments at their third annual meeting at the Holiday Inn in Petoskey. Outgoing President, Terry Clayton, introduced the new officers, who were elected at the October meeting.

LeRoy S. Brooks, incoming president, thanked Clayton for his past work and outlined some of the plans for the upcoming year which will include plant and seed exchanges, tours of area nurseries and orchards and at least one progressive tour of Master Gardener Member's gardens. Other officers installed at the meeting included Tracey Blake, Vice President; Judy Van Loo, Treasurer; and Bette Henry, Secretary.

Speakers for the evening were Deb and Paul Gelderblom of Charlevoix who spoke on their organic farm and bakery, Morning Star Farm. Their experiences offered challenges for the group and an invitation to participate with the nationally known Seed Savers organization.

Also during the evening, JoAnn Deery was presented with the Northern Michigan Master Gardener's annual award for Outstanding Service. Master Gardener members are graduates of the Michigan State University Master Gardener program which is offered locally by the MSU Extension office, and includes members from Emmet, Charlevoix, Otsego and surrounding counties. Steve Fought, instructor for the classes, was in attendance and reminded the group of their responsibility to the community and the MSU Extension Office to offer community service in the area of teaching, speaking and hands-on services for non-profit organizations in the area, including schools, hospitals, and other non-profit groups.

Anyone interested in learning more about the Master Gardener program, courses being offered, or community service by the members may contact Kathy Johnson, 582-2715.

Students establish a pioneer trading post

The elementary school fourth graders held their annual trading post day last week. The trading post is a culmination of a unit of study on Michigan history. The trading post combines a little math, geography, and history into a fun day for the students.

NCMC providing area with access to the Internet

Access to the "information super-highway" is just a local phone call away for most residents of Emmet, Charlevoix and Cheboygan counties. North Central Michigan College in Petoskey now offers full Internet services to the public. Anyone with a PC, terminal software and a modem can dial a local phone number to access Internet through computer servers at NCMC. Local modem dial-in banks have been established at several sites in the three-county area to avoid long distance charges for Internet users.

On the Internet, you can send and receive electronic mail, access database resources from around the world, and even conduct global business. "Internet is a loose federation of organizations such as businesses, colleges, libraries and governmental authorities, operating linked computer networks. They use the same family network protocols, which help computers talk to each other," according to Eric Grandstaff, NCMC Director of Library, Media and Distance Learning Services. Grandstaff headed a team of NCMC and private sector volunteers to develop the service.

The Internet allows millions of people all over the world to communicate and share information. "Internet is an overall name for a group of worldwide information resources so vast as to be well beyond the comprehension of a single human being," according to Grandstaff.

"Providing this service is a part of NCMC's continuing effort to fulfill the 'community' portion of our charter as a community college," says NCMC President Robert Graham. "We're very thankful to the D.C. Burns Health Sciences Fund and the other organizations which helped in this endeavor." The D.C. Burns Health Sciences fund of Northern Michigan Hospital's Foundation provided funding and assistance with the project.

While the service is currently free, it is anticipated that beginning in July a modest semi-annual fee will be charged. The service will remain free for residents of Emmet County, NCMC's tax base county, and NCMC students, faculty and staff.

Is Internet difficult for the average person to learn? According to Grandstaff, not really. "It does require time on your part to learn. And remember, there is no one who can even begin to understand most of the Internet — so you can jump right in and become an 'expert' in your area of interest in a relatively short time!" he said.

Kay Geuder, a teacher at Petoskey's Sheridan Elementary School, uses the Internet to keep in touch with her daughter, who is currently teaching and working as a missionary in Russia.

Because the Lutheran Church operates "Luther Net" in the former Soviet Union, Kay's daughter stays in touch twice weekly by sending e-mail to her and other family members in the states. "I would worry about her if it were not for this wonderful Internet service," says Geuder. "The mail is terrible over there, and by the time the mail does get through, many moments she relates to us are old. But I can receive a letter she's written only a couple of hours before by using the e-mail on Sunny." NCMC's Internet server is named "Sunny" after the sun in NCMC's logo.

Another local user of NCMC's Internet is Sam Gaylord of Petoskey. His son is a senior lecturer at City University in Hong Kong. Gaylord, a retired editor, corresponds with his son by e-mail on an almost daily basis. He helps his son in proofreading and editing scholarly documents produced by the younger Gaylord. Gaylord estimates the e-mail resource has saved them hundreds of hours and heavy postage costs. Where formerly it would take weeks to mail transcripts back and forth overseas, it is now virtually an instantaneous process.

"What's more," said Gaylord, "NCMC's computer allows me to do the editing and text processing right on-line. I use the built-in editor and filing system that 'Sunny' provides, and can even have my spelling checked for me. All with just a local phone call to the College computer!"

Several area libraries and others helped make the NCMCnet a reality. "Thanks for funding our 'net goes out to Kay Kelly of the Burns Health Sciences Library at NMH/Burns Clinic, who provided some funding critical to the service's quality, and to the Northland Library Cooperative. The Library of Michigan and Merit/MichNet provided and expanded network access servers in Pellston, Petoskey, Cheboygan and Gaylord. A special thanks goes to Jim Cook and Chuck Scott of the Straits Area Ham Radio Club, and Dennis Holshield of Your Computer Services," said Grandstaff.

Cook, Scott, Holshield and Grandstaff play "sysops," or system operators, to the computer network servers. Cook, a UNIX programmer, modified and wrote UNIX code to make Sunny work.

A test group of more than 300 users from Charlevoix, Cheboygan and Emmet counties provided feedback to the programmers and Grandstaff, who began developing the project in March 1994. Sunny went online in August. The test group contributed ideas for changes make to Sunny's menus and to the server's access to different computers around the world.

Tax-deductible contributions to the NCMC Foundation can be earmarked for support of the NCMCnet. For more information, contact the Foundation Office at 616/348-6621.

Applications for NCMCnet service are available from the NCMC Library. The NCMC Library also has a collection of books on the Internet. Library hours are Monday through Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 9 p.m., Fridays from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturdays from noon to 5 p.m., and Sundays from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Volleyball team improves to 4-1

Charlevoix's varsity volleyball team ran its league record to 4-1 with a Jan. 26 win over Boyne City. The Rayders swept the best of five match in three games, 15-12, 15-2 and 15-12.

Jill Dreyer was the Rayders' top setter while Kris Blanchard, Liz

Grunch and Aprille Pischner led the team in serving. Dreyer, Gretchen Scott and Grunch were the top defenders while Grunch had eight kills on offense and Scott and Blanchard each had two.

Charlevoix also won the junior varsity match in convincing fashion, taking the best of three match in two games 15-3, 15-2.

Top setters for the Rayders were Amanda Eaton and Laura Maltese. Top servers were Maltese and Lindsay Blechel. Leading the defense were Eaton and Lindy Morrow while the team's best offensive players were Katie Conlan and Jenny Eveleigh.

Basketball team loses 63-59

After falling behind early, a late game rally by the Charlevoix varsity basketball team fell short and the Rayders ended up losing 63-59 at Boyne City Friday night. It was the second time this season that the Rayders have lost a close game to the Ramblers.

The Rayders fell behind by as many as 17 points in the first half, but regrouped and got to within one point at 59-58 with less than a minute to play.

Charlevoix scored one basket in the final minute, but Boyne City countered with four free throws.

Jerry Duhart led the Rayders with 14 points while Chuck Pop had 12 and Trevor Williams 11. Pop also had 11 rebounds and Williams nine. Duhart had seven assists.

Charlevoix won the junior varsity game 72-66. Scott Smith led the Rayders with 17 points while Josh Miller added 15.

Friday evening Charlevoix will travel to Traverse City St. Francis to play one of the top rated schools in Class D.

Haggard takes title

Charlevoix junior Ron Haggard ran his season record to 24-2 winning four matches and the 160-pound weight class at the Northern Michigan Wrestling Championships in Gaylord Saturday.

Haggard opened the day by pinning a Kalkaska opponent in 45 seconds. He followed with a 15-0 technical pin over an Elk Rapids opponent. In the semi finals, he beat a Gaylord wrestler 18-3 on a technical pin. In the finals, he beat a Tawas Area wrestler on points, 11-6.

Jason Metiva placed fifth in the 151 pound class, going 3-2. He opened by pinning a Sault Ste. Marie wrestler in 1:30. He then got pinned by an Elk Rapids wrestler in 1:52. He won a 9-7 decision over an Ogemaw Heights wrestler, lost 10-4 to a Petoskey wrestler and closed the day by pinning the Elk Rapids wrestler who had pinned him earlier in 45 seconds.

Bruce Reinhart placed fifth in the heavyweight class with a record of 3-1 on the day. He lost to a Petoskey wrestler on a pin in 1:30 seconds, but pinned his other three opponents in a total time of 4:05.

Nick Swanson of Sears of Charlevoix looks to take a shot during a Charlevoix Recreation Department B-League basketball game Monday night.

A good marriage is like a sled run

It should pick up speed and get more exciting as it goes along

By Laurie Lounsbury

John Taylor and Kim Rowe will exchange wedding vows this Saturday, standing on a hand-crafted bridge, with a breathtaking view of Charlevoix in the background. From there, it will all be downhill.

The bride will be dressed in traditional white from head to toe. Her groom will be garbed in a crisp new black coat. After they say "I do," the couple will light a ceremonial bonfire of love. They will trek up a snow-covered aisle to their wedding limousine. The limo doesn't come with a chauffeur. It also doesn't come with wheels. The limo at this wedding is a sled limo, and the newlyweds will take their first run at married life down an ice-coated sled run.

A sledding wedding might be a bit unorthodox for some people, but for John and Kim, it's a natural. John has been hosting an annual sledding party in February for the last ten years. Kim got in on the act seven years ago, shortly after she met John. The first sledding party Kim attended was almost the undoing of their budding romance.

Kim met John at the December wedding of mutual friends. John caught Kim's eye, since he was looking pretty darned adorable in a tuxedo. They went out on a couple of nice dates in January. Then came the sledding party. Kim was rather taken aback to see the formerly well-dressed John standing around on a sledding hill looking like the abominable snowman in Carharts.

"He looked like a geek. He wasn't dressed to look good. He was dressed for warmth," Kim said.

Fortunately, good feelings triumphed over bad fashion.

The annual sledding parties grew over the years, just like their relationship. One of the key ingredients to the sledding party has always been the theme of the invitation. One year the invitation was a spoof on the million dollar sweepstakes. Invitees received a letter that started out, "You have just won..." Another year the invitation was a replica of a court summons. Guests were hereby ordered to appear at the sledding party. After ten years, Kim and John were running out of clever ideas. Then it occurred to them that the invitation could appear to be a wedding invitation. The theme came first. The idea of making it an official wedding came later.

Guests need not worry if they're not up on their sledding wedding etiquette. The couple sent out a "Complete Sledding Wedding Planner" along with the wedding invitation. The planner reminds guests to dress for an outdoor reception held in the middle of February some 30 miles north of the forty-fifth parallel, where sub-zero temps are always a possibility. "Formal wear - NOT!" says the planner. The bride will be attired in a borrowed white snowsuit and veil. Thermal long underwear will be worn in lieu of, or in addition to, silky undergarments. The groom will be in crisp, new black Carharts. "Carharts are just so perfectly northern Michigan," said the bride to be. Guests are reminded that they will be doubling as wedding caterers, and are expected to bring a dish to pass. Chili is the traditional sledding wedding fare. The wedding couple will provide Jello shooters. Bringing a gift is optional - Bringing a sled is a must.

School and businesses begin working together

The organizational meeting of the Charlevoix School-Business Partnership Council went well with approximately 50 school and business people attending. The meeting took place Jan. 30.

The council has been broken down into three subcommittees. One is working on technological prep programs, another on construction technology and a third on manufacturing technology. School superintendent Roberta Jackson said the idea behind the partnership council is to establish communication links between the school system and area businesses to assure that the school is providing education that's relevant to the needs of the business world. Along the same lines, another goal of the program is to get students interacting with employers so they can see what type of occupations interest them and what they need to get out of their high school education in order to perform well in the career they choose.

Business people attending the meeting came from a wide variety of fields, including insurance, building, real estate, manufacturing, medical and financial professions. Those attending the meeting discussed the premise of the partnership council and what it would take to get it off the ground. They then broke into subcommittees. The subcommittees will be meeting again within the next month.

For additional information, contact the school's central office at 547-3200.

Charlevoix High School has three student teachers this semester. They are: (from left) Karen Lerch, English; Kurt Grangood, government; and Michelle Fowler, biology.

Three student teachers welcomed

By Dixie Ashton
Charlevoix High School has three new teachers - student teachers, that is.

Karen Lerch is student teaching with Dixie Ashton in Academic English III. After graduating from Petoskey High School in 1989, she attended Grand Valley State University where she earned a B.A. Degree in 1993 with an English major and a history minor. She is now attending Wayne State University to obtain her teaching certificate.

Lerch is currently teaching a poetry unit covering several historical periods and genres in American Literature. The students are creating a poetry book with evaluations of poetry from several American Poets as well as some original poems they wrote.

Kurt Grangood, also a 1989 Petoskey High School grad, is student teaching in Government with Nelson Green. He will graduate from Central Michigan University this May with a History major and a Political Science minor.

Grangood enjoys sports, especially baseball and golf, and he worked for some state politicians during the 1994 elections. He is currently teaching the government students about political parties. They are using the media (T.V., radio, and newspaper) to follow various local, state, and national issues.

Michelle Fowler is originally from East Lansing and Harbor Springs, where her family owns a vacation home and where she is currently living and teaching skiing weekends at Boyne Highlands. She is student teaching in Biology with Roger Gowell and is covering units about the digestive system in Applied Biology, mitosis and meiosis in Academic Biology, and zoology in Advanced Biology.

Fowler earned a B.S. Degree in 1992 from Michigan State University in Merchandising and Management, and she is currently finishing her teaching certification at Olivet College in Biological Science and Business.

Tax terminology has grown stranger

By Laurie Lounsbury

What's the value of your property? It depends. Who wants to know? The county, the township, or the tax collector? Your property has different value to different folks. When you get your new property assessment notice in the mail soon, you'll see that your property has three different values. Why three? Equalization Director Joan Blanchard is able to answer that question. But the explanation might leave you scratching your head. Understanding property tax values is like trying to follow Abbott and Costello's famous 'Who's On First' routine.

Who's On First? You, the property owner are on first base. All property owners got a nice base hit with Proposal A. You come first. You will get the first, or the lowest, property value for taxing purposes. Think of the state as the baseball commissioner. Even if your local umpire, the equalization department, says your property is worth lots of money, the state has the final call. The state will call you safe at first. You're safe because the state says your property can't rise in value more than five percent a year, or the rate of inflation, whichever is less. This year the rate of inflation is 2.6 percent, so that's how much your property value can increase for taxing purposes. This value on your property is called the Tentative Taxable Value (TTV). It's tentative because you can always protest the umpire's call and go to your local board of review for a second opinion.

What's On Second? The local assessor is what's on second. The assessor is going to come up with a second value to your property, the assessed value. In some townships, the local assessors have consistently under-assessed property values over the years. The assessment value is supposed to be 50 percent of market value. Under-assessing property is like trying to throw the ball to home plate without hitting the cut-off man. The local assessor is trying to throw low property values to the tax collector on home plate, bypassing the equalization department's cut-off man. The Bill Smith visited Charlevoix for two days last week to work with Charlevoix Public Schools on their quality education project. Thursday evening, Smith spoke at a meeting where parents described what they want to see in teachers and teachers described what they like to see in parents. (Photo by L. Scott Swanson)

School continues quality project

A group of Charlevoix school district parents and teachers met Thursday, Feb. 2 to let each other know what they want from each other.

Parents want teachers who are creative, dedicated, caring and who create a classroom atmosphere where there are high expectations for all, yet an appreciation for individual differences.

Teachers want parents who are good role models, value learning, care for and love their children and who are interested and willing to be involved in their child's education.

The meeting was moderated by Bill Smith. Smith and Dr. John Champlain are working with the Charlevoix school system throughout the year on a project to improve the quality of education.

As part of the Feb. 2 meeting, Smith and the people in talked about what the community wants in terms of a local educational effort. According to school superintendent Dr. Roberta Jackson, one of the things the school is currently stressing is teaching things students can connect to their own personal experiences.

"If they can't find meaning and relevance, chances are they're not going to remember and use it," Jackson said.

Smith was in town for two days meeting with a core group of teachers, staff and parents. In coming weeks, that core group will be conveying information to other school and community members.

The next training session in the quality schools project will be March 20 and 21. This summer there will be a five-day voluntary workshop for teachers dealing with teaching techniques and concepts.

equalization team doesn't like that. They like to catch the low assessment at the cut-off point. They like to level the playing field.

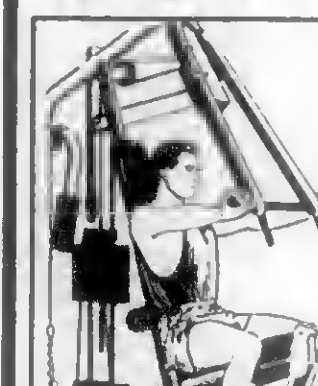

So equalization sends their players out into the field to look at your property and decide what it's really worth. These outfielders will compare your property to other neighborhood properties. They will look at the true cash value of similar properties that have recently been sold. They will consult their official play book, which guides them in determining property value. Then the equalization outfielders will assign a value to your property. This figure is 50 percent of its true cash value, or market value. This third value is your State Equalized Value (SEV).

I Don't Know's On Third: 'I Don't Know' is the person rounding third base, heading for home - your home. This person wants to buy your home, but what will the property value be after he buys it? I don't know. Luckily, Blanchard and her efficient team of outfielders have kept track of your home's true value. They keep a property record card, (think of it as your own baseball trading card, complete with all your home's vital statistics) on file for you. There is never a limit, or a cap, on your home's true cash value. When someone buys your home, the taxable value and the equalized value will become the same. You may sell your home for whatever the market will bear. The new homeowner will have to start up his own game at a new SEV.

Maybe you're more concerned about someone stealing home. Did declining values steal something from you? Let's say the value of your property didn't increase in the last year. Maybe it actually went down. Pretend you own an older condo in town. With all the fancy new condominiums being built, your old condo hasn't increased at all in value since last year. If that's the case, your SEV would remain exactly the same. But the state's official playbook says the taxable value of your property can be increased by this year's rate of inflation. Your local umpire will still give you the benefit of the call. You will still be safe at the first with the lowest taxable value. The taxing entity trying to steal home (your home's taxable value) will be thrown out. Blanchard said that if the lowest value on your property is your SEV, then that becomes your taxable value.

OPINIONS

Editorial

Computer access editorial brought several responses

Two weeks ago I wrote an editorial regarding the need for a local access phone number to computer data services such as America OnLine. Several people have responded and I've picked up a lot of information which I need to pass along.

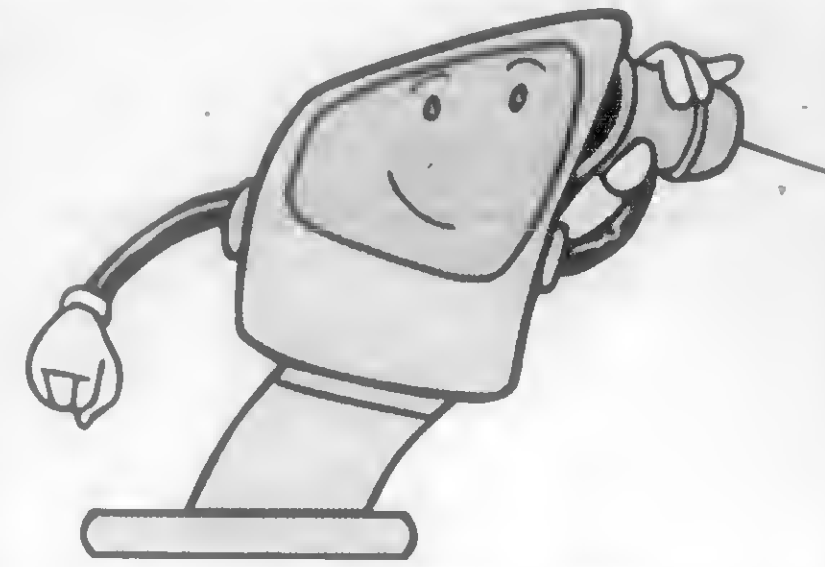

The problem, as stated in the editorial, is that a long distance phone call is required for Charlevoix and surrounding communities to hook into services such as America OnLine. That means that for every minute a Charlevoix computer user is on line, the long distance phone bill grows larger and larger. The cost for the America OnLine service (and many similar services such as CompuServe, Prodigy, Genie and E-World) is quite reasonable. For America OnLine the cost is $10 per month plus about $3 an hour for every hour after the first five hours. It's the long distance phone charges that eat a hole in your wallet.

The same day the editorial hit the streets I started getting replies by phone, fax and e-mail.

One of the first people to call was Courier General Manager Ken Winter. He told me that it's possible to get on the Internet by going through a computer at North Central Michigan College (NCMC). NCMC, with the help of a grant, has set up an access program which has been so well done that it has become a model program for other community colleges.

The program sounded so appealing that the next day, Thursday, I drove up to Petoskey and filled out an application form for a computer account at the NCMC library. When I turned in the application, the person at the library desk said it would take a couple of weeks to set up.

Friday morning, my phone rang. It was Eric Grandstaff, the NCMC media person who set up the Inter-Net connection program. He said he'd seen a copy of the Courier editorial and would have an account set up to allow me access within a week.

This past weekend I received the account number and logged on to the Internet. It's like exploring a huge new world. During the past weekend, I went through NCMC to the Go-Blue system at the University of Michigan and found a journalism section with a ton of information from the Detroit Free Press. While on the U of M system I came across a title that said U of M phone number listings. Last week I'd happen to run into MacDuff Stewart and asked her how her brother Dylan was doing at U of M. He's a medical student and working at a hospital. Out of curiosity I decided to see if his phone number was included in the listing. It was. Later, while reading a list of users of the NCMC system, I found that both MacDuff and her father, Dr. Jim Stewart, are among those listed.

One of the first things I found when I logged on to the NCMC system was an E-mail message from Michael MacMillan. He suggested contacting US Sprint or Bell Telephone North America about obtaining local access numbers for computer services. He included the addresses for both companies.

I also received an E-mail message from News-Review Managing Editor Kendall Stanley. He's been surfing on the Internet for a while. Within a matter of hours, I'd come up with several questions for him.

In regard to America OnLine, I also received a phone call from Wendi Wright, a friend from high school who now works at Harbor Industries. She told me that in the America OnLine membership department, there's a place where you can put your name on a list requesting consideration for a local access. She also gave me her E-mail address and we've sent each other a couple of messages updating each other on our travels along the information super highway. Wendi and a couple of other people told me that America OnLine is considering initiating a 1-800 number to provide access to areas such as ours which don't have a local access number.

Several other people also called or faxed to express support for any effort to get local access numbers for northern Michigan.

When I wrote the initial editorial, I wasn't sure exactly what resources are available for computer users in this area and I wasn't sure exactly how much demand there is for local access. The information received since the editorial leads me to two conclusions.

First - NCMC, showing great vision and foresight, has developed an Internet access program which more and more people are discovering as a northern Michigan information treasure.

Second - I'm not the only one who feels there's a real need in northern Michigan for local access numbers to on-line computer services. There are several people now from a surprising variety of professions, and that number is growing.

Impromptu fund-raising nets nets for hockey

An impromptu fundraising drive to raise money for new hockey nets at the local ice rink met with quick success two weeks ago.

The nets had fallen into disrepair. Jim Nystrom, the father of one of the kids who plays hockey at the rink, welded up the goal frames, but needed $105 to purchase new netting. So on a Friday afternoon, he started going through town asking for money. Most people donated between $1 and $5. In a short time, he had the money and the nets went up three nights later.

"People were great," Nystrom said.

Letters to the editor

Sixth grade students voice concerns on a number of issues

Editor's note: The following letters were written by sixth grade students as an assignment for middle school teacher Kathy Gowell's English class:

Litter can be done without

Editor,
I have some ideas for ways to prevent littering because Charlevoix is such a beautiful town, but a lot of people litter and make it less beautiful. Here are my ideas:

Maybe if every time someone saw a piece of litter they would pick it up.

Another idea I have is that we should have more garbage cans, because we don't have very many, and this would probably reduce the amount of litter around Charlevoix.

If everyone did that, Charlevoix would be even more beautiful than it already is.

Sincerely,
Melissa McDonough

Drivers should use headlights

Editor,
I agree with Joe Werden about the use of headlights.

It is dangerous not to use your headlights, but if you turn them on, it will be a lot safer. Headlights reduce accidents and they help you better in bad weather. When you have your lights on you can judge distance of oncoming cars.

Sincerely,
Corey Bascom

Seat belts should be enforced

Editor,
I recently read about how people think that officers should be allowed to stop those who are not wearing their seat belts. I think they should because more people would probably get in the habit of putting them on. The article said how the ages of 16-29 is the lowest users of seat belts and highest in accident rates. So I think they should be allowed to.

Sincerely,
Shanon Schulmeister

Write legibly

Editor,
I read about the article on penmanship. We have had a lot of kids and parents that can't write and little kids in like the first and second grade who can't write very well. I agree with you. Kids in 3rd and fourth grade need a lot more practice on writing.

Sincerely,
Melissa Hudson

Kids need jobs

Editor,
I am a sixth grader at Charlevoix Middle School. I think there should be more jobs for children, because kids like to get jobs but they can't get one, because they're too young. Let me tell you something. They aren't too young. They can do as good a job as adults can do. The reason I think there should be more jobs for children is because it would keep more kids off the street, and it would give them more responsibility. So there should be more jobs for children.

Students want Club 77

Editor's note: The following letters were submitted by a group of students who are dismayed at the prospect of having Club 77 close.

Editor,
Club 77 is a place where the youth of the area can go to have fun in a drug and alcohol free environment. They hold dances on Friday and Saturday nights. The Club was originally started in order to keep teens off the streets. The founders believed that teens needed a safe place to go where they could have fun with their friends. The Club has proved worthy of this cause, but without $2,500 it will close for good. Then where will the kids go? What other places are there in the area where they can dance, socialize, and just have fun on the weekend? We need to save Club 77. It's given a lot to the youth around here; it's time to give back. Somehow, we have to get that $2,500. Save the club ... save the kids.

Sincerely,
Julie L. Rooks

Editor,
I am writing about the Club 77 issue. I have a couple points to make about it. One is the fact that kids have nowhere to go without Club 77. Oh we have the streets. I always thought that I was supposed to stay off the streets. If you want to go against my parents word that's ok, I guess. Now there is the money problem. I know that they need $2,500 to stay open and I was wondering if there is someone who cares where the kids of Charlevoix go.

Sincerely,
Tiffany Resch

Sincerely yours,
Keith Patrick

There is too much violence

Editor,
I think that violence is really bad in the United States. I think that we should stop violence before more people get hurt or killed. There should be more police officers protecting our children from violence.

I think that kids sometimes kill people because there is too much violence on TV and viewers are susceptible, particularly if they've been drinking. Producers should be careful of what they put on TV.

Sincerely,
Jennifer Liotta

Elderly need care

Editor,
I am a sixth grader at Charlevoix Middle School. I feel we have a need to put in a nursing home in Emmet County for the elderly, who need our help.

One reason we need this is because there are elderly people out there dying because they have no place to go except along the streets. Some people are feeling sad seeing people live out in the cold weather.

So, I have every hope that there will be a nursing home in Emmet County.

Sincerely,
Jaclyn Cunningham

Care for pets

Editor,
I am responding to a recent letter

Editor,

We need lots and lots of help! Please! Please! Help us! We have nowhere to go! We need $2,500 or else they will close Club 77.

Thank you!
Julie Miller

Editor,

We need $2,500 or they will close Club 77 and if they close it we won't have anything to do on Saturdays and Fridays. We will probably just get into trouble and right now Club 77 is keeping us out of trouble. Please help us!

Sincerely,
Megan Blair

from the manager of the Charlevoix County Humane Society. I strongly agree with her that we should have our pets spayed and neutered because we have so many dogs and cats.

I live out in the country and you wouldn't believe how many strays we have! Once during the summer someone just up the road from my house dropped off a dog and we had to call the Humane Society! I really hope we can stop the dogs and cats from reproducing so much.

Thank you,
Kim Schoenheit

Swimming pool is needed

Editor,
I feel that a swimming pool is greatly needed in Charlevoix. It would be a place where people can swim in summer and winter that is local. For now people have to drive to East Jordan. It would be inside, safe, and swimming lessons would be year round. Also, you don't risk being sunburned. Charlevoix might even have a swim team.

Sincerely,
Rebecca Heise

Give us the History Channel

Editor,
I agree that we should have the history channel. If TCI can't give us the same channels they get down state, we should be charged less money. TCI should update their system.

Sincerely,
Jennifer Westenbroek

The beach is too cold

Editor,
I honestly believe that we need a pool in Charlevoix. In the summer-time, if you go to the beach early in the morning, you will see little children swimming in the water. Most of them are in a swimming class. When I was little and took swimming lessons I hated it! The water was way too cold. We should have a swimming pool in Charlevoix so you can take swimming lessons in the winter and be warm. It is also something that the older people of Charlevoix can enjoy. Charlevoix, you know we need a pool. Let's get one!

Sincerely,
Amy Martinchek

Not all puppies are unwanted

Editor,
I recently read an article in your paper that the manager of the Charlevoix Humane Society wrote about animal overpopulation. I both agree and disagree with Ms. Korh. In her article she states that all dogs and cats should have to be spayed or neutered. I totally disagree with that statement because I feel that not all dogs or cats should be spayed or neutered. I feel that if you take responsibility for your dogs or cats, spaying or neutering won't be necessary. If you let your dog run wild then it should be spayed or neutered, but if you watch your dog and it is kept in a fenced yard it should not be mandatory to spay or neuter. I believe people should be able to purposely breed their animals. If you have an animal you want to breed and have homes for the young before they're born, you should do it.

Another thing I tend to disagree with is, Ms. Korh had phrases in the article in which she called myths. A agree with all the phrases she titled as myths and think they would be true.

I was majorly frightened at the facts, she stated about the amount of animal deaths a year. More than ten million healthy animals are killed in U.S. pounds a year.

Humane Societies always complain about the fact that they are overloaded. I think Humane Societies should try harder to get people to adopt animals. I also think more people should volunteer to help out at their local Humane Societies. I fully intend to do so.

Please, pet owners, keep your pets safe and happy.

Thank you.
Yours truly,
Lanie Lopez

High school students create virtual reality

(Editor's note: The following story was written by Charlevoix High School student Leah Dulaney. The Courier and high school English teacher Dixie Ashton have been working with students to have some of their writing appear in the Courier. Dulaney's story is the first to appear as a result of that effort.)

by Leah Dulaney
Virtual Reality. It's the newest in technology to hit Charlevoix High School. Miss Katherine Fennema decided it was time for her computer science class, a class dealing basically with computer programming, to try something new.

"The kids were getting bored with doing the same thing every day," she said. Fennema said that she thought it would be more interesting to do some "experimenting with hardware," so she purchased a Virtual Reality (VR) book and found out that they could make a Virtual Reality glove from a Mattel Power glove. These are no longer being made, but one of her students had one.

John Chase, Kurt Degrow, Pat Butcher, and Zac Bakker, with the directions from the VR book, rewired, and hooked up the Mattel Power glove to the computer so that it would work with the computer like a VR glove.

The VR glove goes on your hand, and as you move your hand, an icon on the screen that looks like a hand, also moves. If you close your hand, the icon closes also. In this fashion, you can grab onto things and move them. This also enables them to use the 3rd-dimension. Prior to the VR glove, they weren't able to do very much in 3-D.

There are two main computer programming languages that Fennema's class has been working in: Basic and C++. The computer science class is able to use their knowledge of programming in C++, which is one of the newest computer languages, to create "worlds" of their own for the VR glove. Different "worlds" are necessary in order to operate the VR glove because in a "world," you create objects to pick up on the screen, or to just move around.

Fennema doesn't have any major plans for the VR glove, but she hopes to purchase more books and possibly some VR goggles in future years.

School discusses technology needs and millage request

By Laurie Lounsbury
Technology is sometimes like an adolescent with an insatiable appetite. It grows and changes constantly. And like any good parent, the Charlevoix school district would like to keep feeding our technology needs in order to keep growing. The school technology team, with Roger Gowell acting as spokesman, presented the Charlevoix Board of Education with a thorough explanation of goals for Charlevoix students as they relate to technology.

Gowell described the need for new computers, electronic encyclopedias, and upgraded electricity in all three school buildings.

Charlevoix schools do have computers in all three buildings, but some of the equipment is inadequate to drive the new programs available today. Audience member Vel Kammermann raised a concern about the school's ability to stay current with computer programs and equipment. She asked Gowell how the schools would avoid the problem of purchasing equipment that will become obsolete in a short time. Gowell explained that while some of the school's computers are insufficient for some applications, they are still adequate for other uses. As the school acquires new equipment, the older equipment can be used in classrooms for word processing.

Gowell's presentation outlined the technology goals in all three buildings. He provided a breakdown of the goals in each building to teach computer literacy to Charlevoix students. These goals can't be met without expanding the existing computer base.

When Gowell finished his presentation, school business manager Rich Kelly picked up where Gowell left off, discussing the need for enhancement millage to fund the technology. The enhancement millage would bring in more than two million dollars over the next two years. Kelly showed the breakdown on where all the dollars will be spent.

The enhancement millage focuses primarily on revenue for technology, but it will pay for other building needs. New carpeting is needed at the elementary school, and the high school needs mechanical and structural improvements.

The enhancement millage election will take place March 14. It will ask voters to pay three additional mills each year for two years. The state law will not allow local school districts to collect enhancement millage after 1997. Beyond 1997, any school millage will have to be raised on a regional basis, with the millage revenues being shared equally with other area school districts. If that ever happens, Charlevoix would end up contributing more to the collective millage and receiving less in return. This is because Charlevoix has a higher total SEV (State Equalized Value) than other area school districts.

Kelly and the finance committee are eager to answer questions and explain the enhancement millage to voters. "Our plan is to go out and talk to anyone who will listen to us," Kelly said.

In other business, Jim Glynn was selected to be the new middle school track coach. The opening was created when middle school teacher Jerry Puhl retired last year.

Show features architects' work

"Idea to Reality" is an exhibition of architectural sketches, drawings, models and photographs that gives the viewer an insight into the design processes used to create a building. The show opened at the McCune Arts Center Feb. 3 and runs through the month.

The exhibit is produced by members of the Upper Great Lakes Chapter of the American Institute of Architects and is chaired by Petoskey architect Richard Neumann. The show portrays the wide range of architectural drawings created by architects that demonstrate the evolution of a design idea into a built reality. The graphics involved in this design process are considered by many to be an art form. The Crooked Tree Arts Council takes pride in displaying these works by local architects.

There are a great variety of drawings on view from free hand sketches that communicate the design idea through drafted construction drawings that serve as graphic instructions for the building contractors. There are drawings made with computer software called CAD for Computer Aided Design.

Some drawings depict the buildings as three dimensional volumes and others how only two planes. Plans portray the building as if sliced horizontally and sections portray the building as if sliced vertically. All the drawings are important for different stages of the building process as the original sketch grows to a completed building.

To help the viewer further understand this growth of a building from an idea to reality, there are architectural models of the proposed building and photographs of the completed building.

Architects participating in the exhibition are H. Jack Begrow of Charlevoix, Mark Buday of Harbor Springs, the firm of Fuller-Nichols of Harbor Springs, David W. Kimble of Harbor Springs, Donald E. Morgridge of Gaylord, Richard Neumann of Petoskey, Nicholas J. White of Petoskey and Douglas A. Wright of Petoskey. In a joint statement they declared: "We hope the exhibition is informative and enjoyable. As architects, we feel that architecture produced through the design process has the power to communicate meaning and transform the man made environment."

For further information about this exhibit, contact The Crooked Tree Arts Council at 347-4337.

Band Day raises $2,500

The Charlevoix Band Boosters raised approximately $2,500 at their hand day and spaghetti dinner Jan. 31. Approximately 400 people were served a spaghetti dinner.

Karen Bakker won the $500 first prize in a raffle drawing. LexaLite International Corp. and Medusa Cement Co. each donated $250 for the grand prize. Dawn Fletcher won a $100 second prize and Sheila Bogart won a $50 third prize.

Money raised through the event will help fund band trips and music scholarships for Charlevoix band students.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. LOWELL ANDERSON

IS HISTORY BEING MADE BY THE CHURCH?

The Church of Jesus Christ has always shaped history. Starting with the division of time by the Advent of Jesus Christ (all time is dated either BC or AD whether before Christ or since) and by events such as the Reformation and subsequent spiritual renewals that have affected the nations of the world.

Significant, and I believe history making, renewal is taking place in the universal Church of Jesus Christ around the world. Just one evidence of the renewal in the United States that is affecting our entire nation is Promise Keepers. Promise Keepers is a non-denominational ministry to and for Christian men in America that in just five years has brought spiritual renewal to over a quarter million men and in the conferences planned for 1995 has a goal of affecting three quarters of a million. To my knowledge there is no other spiritual renewal that has taken place in the history of the United States that has encompassed so many people in such a short period of time.

Promise Keepers is only one part of the larger picture which transcends any particular organization, denomination or movement. The Holy Spirit is moving sovereignly among Christians whatever their denomination or affiliation. The thing that marks what is happening as being initiated by the Spirit of God and not by human effort is that every manifestation of that renewal bears the same fingerprint. While the overarching evidence of renewal is a fresh devotion to the Person of Jesus Christ and a deepened commitment to His Church, other evidences common to the contemporary renewal is the unifying of believers across denominational lines, the unifying of believers across racial lines, and a revitalized worship experience.

While it was not my privilege to attend any of the renewal services recently held at St. Mary's Catholic Church, those from my own congregation who did attend reported to me that the signs of renewal I mentioned above were indeed in evidence there. I am thrilled with what is taking place at St. Mary's and rejoice with my brothers and sisters there. At Charlevoix Assembly, we too are experiencing renewal and the same evidences are being manifest among us by the same Holy Spirit. Evidences of renewal are apparent in other congregations in our community I'm sure.

What is currently happening in the Church of Jesus Christ appears to be the beginning of a renewal the likes of which took place over the history of our nation from which many of our traditional denominations were formed and flourished. Those renewals shaped for formation of this Nation, influenced our constitution, fostered our traditional moral and legal values, and impacted our history.

Is history being shaped by the contemporary renewal in the Church? Only time will tell for sure, but I believe it is! Whether or not it will be dependent on our willingness to follow our Lord Jesus Christ in whole hearted devotion. Let's go for it! ... we have nothing to lose and everything to gain!

Conservancy summarizes 1994 projects in area

The Little Traverse Conservancy reports that 1994 was one of its best years for protecting natural integrity and scenic beauty of the North Country. More than two square miles of land with an estimated value of nearly $4 million came under the Conservancy's protection during the year.

Waterfront property figured prominently in the Conservancy's 1994 activity. Two quarter-mile sections of Lake Michigan frontage were acquired, more than half a mile was protected on Burt Lake, and a conservation easement was signed in order to protect more than four miles of Lake Huron frontage including four islands.

The land was protected through donation to the conservation group, by purchase or through the use of conservation easements. Conservation easements, the Conservancy notes, are quickly growing in popularity because they enable private owners to protect the natural features of their land while retaining ownership. "The conservation easement is definitely becoming the land protection tool of choice for many Michigan property owners," said Conservancy executive director Tom Bailey. "Not only are private conservancies like ours involved, but the state acquired its first conservation easement in 1994."

Bailey expressed the Conservancy's thanks to all show donated land, conservation easement, or funds to buy property during the year. "The only reason we are able to accomplish so much," he said, "is because of the generosity of all the people who donate land, conservation easements, money, time and hard work to our cause."

The Conservancy, Bailey notes, works hard to establish a balance between development and preservation in the North. "We're working with private land owners to protect what they like most about the North, for themselves, their children, and more generations to come." At the same time, the organization makes its staff and expertise available to local units of government to come. "At the same time, the organization makes its staff and expertise available to local units of government who request help in obtaining land for parks and nature preserves. "We were pleased to help local units secure over $7 million in grants for park and preserve acquisition in 1994," Bailey said. "We also helped with a number of other ongoing local government projects with which we've been involved for a number of years." Bailey adds that the Conservancy offers all of its services to local government at no charge. "It's just another way in which we believe we can make a positive contribution to the community," Bailey observed.

In addition to the land protection programs, the Conservancy offered its free environmental education programs to over 5,000 northern Michigan school children through the year. "It's important to us to see to it that our nature preserves are used by the people," Bailey said, "and we can think of no better way than to open our preserves to school children interested in learning about animals, plants and the many wonders of the outdoors." Again citing service to the community, Bailey noted that the Conservancy obtained grant monies in order to help pay the cost of bus transportation for those school districts whose budgets would not allow them to transport their students to the Conservancy's outdoor classrooms.

Among the Conservancy's 1994 projects in Emmet and Charlevoix Counties:

South Arm Township Nature Preserve - The South Arm Township Board of Supervisors donated an eight acre wetland to the Conservancy. This donation protects an additional 1000 feet of shoreline within the Lake St. Clair - Six Mile Lake Natural Area.

Little Sand Bay - The Conservancy acquired a significant portion of Beaver Island's Little Sand Bay. This 60 acre parcel with 1,300 of Lake Michigan frontage is one of only 13 known sites in the world where the Michigan monkey flower can be found.

Foundation accepting grant requests

Schools, local municipalities, and nonprofit organizations seeking financial support for programs are invited to submit a request to the Charlevoix County Community Foundation. During the next two months, the Foundation and its Youth Advisory Committee will review funding applications, making grants to the tune of several thousand dollars later this spring.

Deadline for grant requests to the Foundation's Youth Advisory Committee is March 31, 1995. The youth group, made up of teens from each of the high schools in Charlevoix County, will fund programs and projects aimed specifically at helping young people. Special consideration is given to proposals that address those issues identified as "high priority" by the teen group's peer survey: Alcohol and drug abuse, drunk driving, child abuse, teen pregnancy, juvenile crime, environmental concern, and the need for more recreational activities. Applicants should be nonprofit groups, educational institutions, or municipal programs that serve children and teens in Charlevoix County.

The Foundation will also accept funding requests for a broader range of community projects through April 30, 1995. To be considered for general funds, a proposed project should promote and support education, community development, health, the arts & culture, social service programs, or civic improvement.

Foundation representatives are happy to provide advice and direction to those organizations wishing to apply for funds. Grant seekers are asked to call the office of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation at 616/536-2440 for information or to obtain a grant application.

More information about the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and its grantmaking activities is available by calling the office, or writing c/o P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI 49727.

BUSINESS

Two water problems to be fixed

By L. Scott Swanson

The city of Charlevoix is soliciting engineering proposals for water main improvements near the corner of Petoskey and Mercer and at Boulder Park near the hospital.

Seeking the proposals has been motivated by the need to improve lines to serve the new Sleep Inn motel going in near the corner of Petoskey and Mercer. The Boulder Park water line project is unrelated, but city officials feel the city may be able to save some money by doing both projects at the same time.

In a memo to council members, city manager Mike Wiesner explained that the motel will need more water than the city system is currently able to supply due to supply lines in the area being too small. Improvements to the system have already been planned, but the motel will require the timetable be moved up. The motel is to open this spring.

Solving the problem will involve constructing an eight inch line in Mercer Boulevard to replace an existing four inch line. One end of the eight inch line will hook into a 12 inch line on Division Street and the other end will hook into a 12 inch line at the C & O Club.

The estimated cost of the lines to be installed on city property is $25,500. The estimated cost of the lines across motel property (which the motel owners will pay) is

Previously the motel developer had asked the city to consider allowing $55,000 in water and sewer tap-in fees to be paid over time with interest rather than up front in a lump sum. Last month the city council discussed that proposal, but rejected it. Given the unanticipated $14,500 water line cost, the developer has asked the city to reconsider allowing the water and sewer tap-in fee proposal. City officials are unsure if the city can legally do that and if so what steps need to be taken. At the direction of Wiesner and the city council, city attorney Jim Young is reviewing the matter and will make a recommendation at a later date.

CPI tax abatement approved

A 12-year, 50 percent tax abatement for CPI Products L.C. was unanimously approved by the Charlevoix City Council Feb. 6.

The abatement is for a 20,000 square foot expansion of the plant which is located in the Charlevoix Industrial Park on Taylor Road. The expansion is expected to add 30 jobs to the plant, approximately doubling the number of employees. The estimated cost of the expansion is $1.9 million.

CPI manufactures press-line automation systems and components, including rubber rollers and vacuum cups, cast Urethane products and aluminum mounting arms, venturis and machine castings.

In considering whether or not to grant industrial tax abatements, the city has a point system for determining the length of an abatement. The point system includes among other things the number of jobs retained or created, the amount of the investment, landscaping above and beyond what is required by zoning and fire safety measures such as a sprinkler system. In order to qualify for the maximum abatement of 12 years, an application must score 110 points or better. The CPI application scored in excess of 200 points.

Second ward council member Gabe Campbell said that one thing Charlevoix certainly needs is more jobs and if someone wants to spend a million dollars to create 30 jobs, the city should let them.

Contracts for road work awarded

By L. Scott Swanson

The city council has awarded a contract to construct Gibbons Drive in the city industrial park to Basch and Sons, Inc., a Traverse City construction firm. The action occurred at the Feb. 6 council meeting.

Gibbons Drive is an undeveloped drive in the industrial park. Once constructed it will serve the new LexaLite facilities which are under construction and another currently vacant industrial park lot.

Basch and Sons bid of $70,532 was the lowest of four bids received. The three other bids were $73,245, $75,959 and $77,643. Construction will begin this spring and be completed shortly thereafter.

In a related matter, the council awarded the engineering contract on the project to Performance Engineering of Charlevoix. Performance Engineering bid $34 per hour for inspection services and $75 per hour for survey services. They were the lowest among three bidders.

Former city council member Bob Timms objected to the city's hiring Performance Engineering, saying he didn't like the engineering of a recent paving project at the south end of State Street.

Mayor pro-tem Butch Russell, who was filling in for mayor Josh Barnes who was absent from the meeting, asked city manager Mike Wiesner if he was comfortable with Performance Engineering.

Wiesner said the firm has done work on other city streets and has been thorough, cooperative and a good firm to work with.

Russell asked Wiesner if he felt a good job was done on State Street. Wiesner replied that if it was to be done again, it would be done differently. He explained that a different technique than usual was tried in regard to paving around the storm drains and he didn't really like the way it turned out. However, the street is still usable.

The city council approved hiring Performance Engineering by a 5-1 vote with second ward council member Gabe Campbell casting the dissenting vote.

The city has received an economic development grant from the state which will pay 90 percent of the construction and engineering costs on Gibbons Drive.

Local firms receive job training grant

The Michigan Jobs Commission awarded job training grants totaling up to $126,000 through North Central Community College to upgrade the skills of more than 300 workers at three companies in Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

A grant for up to $64,565 will help Control Engineering Co. of Harbor Springs train 200 existing employees in blueprint reading, welding and programmable logic controllers.

A grant for up to $31,939 will assist Allied Signal Aerospace of Boyne City to train 74 current workers in blueprint reading, computers and leadership skills.

And a grant for up to $30,211 will help DCL of Charlevoix train approximately 30 new and existing workers in blueprint reading, total quality management and computer-aided design.

The competitive grants come from Michigan's $40 million Economic Development Job Training program, one of the largest of its kind in the nation.

"These grants are designed for specific employers' needs and will allow our workers to meet the demands placed on them," said Doug Rothwell, CEO of the Jobs Commission. "By upgrading the skills of our workers, we're helping Michigan businesses become more competitive in this global economy."

Rayders stun Petoskey

Things did not look good for the Rayder basketball team. After losing to Petoskey by 52 points (Yes, that's no typo. It was 52 points.) earlier in the year, the Rayders fell behind early in the Jan. 31 rematch. But rather than letting the roof fall in again, the Rayders hung tough and in the final two minutes of the game came back and crafted one of northern Michigan basketball's most surprising upsets this year, by a score of 54-52. Surprise. Surprise.

Charlevoix trailed by six, 50-44 with two minutes left to play. Casey Crain cut that lead in half at the 1:15 with a three-point basket. With just less than a minute to play, Jerry Duhart dropped a short jumper to draw the Rayders within one at 50-49. In the last half minute of play George McClellan picked a Petoskey player and seconds later hit the go-ahead basket despite being fouled on the shot. He then hit the free throw to put Charlevoix up 52-50.

But Petoskey doesn't have one of the area's best records this season for nothing. With eight seconds left Kevin DeGroot (Is that Petoskey basketball program ever going to run out of DeGroots?) made two free throws to retie the game at 52.

Following the free throws, Petoskey called time out to set up their defense. While Petoskey worked out a defense, Charlevoix coach Jim Kanine dug deep into the Rayder play book to come up with the perfect play. The play called for Crain to heave up about a 20 footer, but to make sure not to make it. Instead, he was to have the ball glance off the rim. This wasn't an easy shot, because he had to hit the rim in just the right place so as to cause the ball to bounce into the hands of teammate Gary Leitner. Leitner's job was to rebound the ball while making sure that he wasn't too open and that he didn't shoot too soon. That way when he shot he would have defenders hanging on him and the shot would go in right at the buzzer and not a second sooner.

This isn't an easy play for a coach to diagram, but when done properly it's exciting and it's usually not something the defense is prepared for. The Rayders executed it to perfection.

The last-minute heroics capped off an evening where the Rayders got contributions from several players. Chuck Pop led the team in scoring with 12 points while Crain had 10 and Duhart and Leitner eight apiece. Trevor Williams had eight rebounds while Pop had six and McClellan and Duhart four apiece. McClellan also blocked three shots.

Charlevoix won the junior varsity game 48-41. Marc Jacobs led the Rayders with 13 points while Josh Miller had 10.

Friday evening the Rayders traveled to Traverse City to play Traverse City St. Francis. The Gladiators are ranked near the top of Class D polls and are undefeated in league play. Charlevoix's offense went stagnant in the second and third quarters to allow St. Francis to take a 64-45 win.

At the end of the first quarter the game was tied at 17, but in the second quarter Charlevoix only scored seven points and went into halftime trailing 30-24. St. Francis extended their lead to 45-29 by the end of the third quarter.

Crain was the only Rayder in double figures, scoring 11 points.

Charlevoix's junior varsity handed St. Francis its first loss of the season, 70-64. Miller scored 18 points for the Rayders while Jacobs had 15, Scott Smith 11 and Steve Carland 10.

School seeks $2 million

By L. Scott Swanson

Charlevoix school district voters will be deciding a $2 million question March 14. To be more exact, they will be deciding a $2,145,941 question.

At a March 14 special election, school voters will decide whether or not the school district will levy three additional mills for two years for technological improvements and structural repairs to the school's buildings.

In the Charlevoix school district each mill levied is projected to bring the school approximately $353,000 in revenue in 1995-96 and $362,000 in 1996-97. (See accompanying box for a definition of a mill.)

The school has developed a detailed line item list of plans to spend the money. Those expenditures include the following:

- Computer hardware - $529,500
- Telecommunications/networking equipment - $240,900
- Computer software - $73,000
- Staff training - $25,000
- Electrical rewiring - $252,400
- Asbestos abatement, lights and carpet at the high school - $540,000
- Mechanical work at the high school - $252,400

DDA discusses Bridge Park modifications

By L. Scott Swanson

Engineers are attempting to modify plans so that a proposed building in Bridge Park can be lowered to improve sight lines between Bridge Street and the harbor.

Prior to the Downtown Development Authority's (DDA) Feb. 8 meeting a yellow rope was put up in the park to show where the top edge of the building would be. Anything below the rope will not be visible once the building is erected.

At the Feb. 8 meeting, John Adams from the Ann Arbor engineering firm of McNamee, Porter & Seelye, told DDA members that engineers have revised plans and they lowered the building to some degree and are pursuing ways of lowering it more.

DDA member Jeanine Wallace said that at the present level, the building looks high. Dan Barron, another DDA member, concurred, questioning how much of the lake people will be able to see from an automobile on Bridge Street.

During a meeting which lasted for more than an hour DDA members suggested several modifications to the Bridge Park plan. One aspect of the plan which received a great deal of discussion is the location of a dumpster.

Currently, plans call for the dumpster to be put in a recessed area at the northeast corner of the building. Wallace and other DDA members weren't too thrilled about that. The roof of the building is supposed to be a viewing platform and DDA members didn't want one aspect of the view to be the top of dumpsters.

As an alternative, they suggested creating a courtyard in the recessed area and moving the dumpsters farther to the north, nearer to a dock loading area.

Another suggestion was to put openings in the rail which separates the parking lot from the alley at the back of the stores. Currently, people parking in the lot have to either hurdle the rail or walk all the way to the end.

Barron noted that one of the things he wants to see the Bridge Park project do is facilitate and promote the development of the back of the buildings on the east side of Bridge between Clinton and the bridge.

...school seeks money for technology and building repairs

school - $170,000
Structural repairs - $195,000
New carpet at the elementary school $120,000.

In a conversation with the Courier last week, Dr. Roberta Jackson, Charlevoix School Superintendent, explained the rationale behind the proposed expenditures. A committee of school and community members has drafted a long-range plan for school facilities. The items mentioned in the list above are taken from that plan.

The committee report was completed last summer, but has yet to be formally presented to the board of education. Shortly before the committee completed its report, the state of Michigan changed the way schools are financed. The school has waited to see how that's going to work out before putting any major facility proposals on the table.

The cornerstone of the facility committee plan calls for the eventual construction of a new middle school. However that's only part of the plan. The technical and structural work proposed for the three mills is also included in the plan.

If voters approve the $2.1 million March 14 proposal, the work listed will be done essentially on a pay-as-you-go basis rather than through bonding (i.e. borrowing through the sale of bonds). There's a significant financial advantage to doing the work on a pay-as-you-go basis. By doing the work pay-as-you-go, every $1 spent goes toward school improvements. If the project were bonded, for every $1 spent on improvements, an additional 18 cents (approximately) would have to be spent on bonding costs.

If the March 14 proposal is approved, the school would start receiving the construction money this summer and would begin work at that time.

A few years ago the school received a bit more than half of a mill for a couple of years for technology. Jackson said that gave the school a good beginning toward incorporating computers into Charlevoix's educational program. It put computer labs in all three schools and put a computer in each elementary classroom.

Money from the March 14 proposal would not only update Charlevoix schools technologically, but would take them a step farther. According to teachers and students, currently Charlevoix students have been introduced to computers and for the most part like them, but find it difficult to get enough time for them.

Money for telecommunications is also part of taking school technology a step forward. One of the things Jackson says she wants to see is classes accessible to parents by computer. For example, she would like to see a homework hotline where parents can dial into the school and find out what their children's homework assignment is.

The electrical wiring work is also to service increased technology needs. When Charlevoix school buildings were constructed, technology in the classroom meant an occasional movie or film strip. Now, technology is a whole new world and that new world requires additional outlets.

Putting in new wiring at the high school is going to require the removal of some asbestos. According to environmental laws, if you don't disturb asbestos you can leave it in a building. But if you disturb it, you have to remove it. Removing the asbestos is estimated to cost $450,000. Some lighting and carpeting work at the high school will cost an additional $90,000.

Additional mechanical work at the high school will include replacing a boiler and some corroded pipes at a cost of $170,000.

Structural work at the high school includes doing some work on the gym arches and some walls which have some minor problems. Plans also call for remodeling four bathrooms so the school will comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act. The total cost of the structural work is $195,000.

Replacing the carpet at the elementary school has an estimated cost of $120,000. The carpet is 26 years old.

Jackson said that in millage proposals taxpayers have asked the school system to tell them what is needed, why it's needed and what it will do for kids' education. She said the school is attempting to provide that information. She invites anyone with questions to call the school's central office at 547-3200.

Charlevoix High School performing arts students placed third in regional competition with their production of "Pirates of Penzance." The regional took place in St. Johns, Feb. 11. Charlevoix students will perform at the State Finals competition Feb. 17 and 18 at Hill Auditorium at the University of Michigan. The production will be performed for the public at Charlevoix High School Feb. 25 and 26. The Feb. 25 performance will be at 7:30 p.m. while the Feb. 26 performance will begin at 2 p.m. Tickets are $3.50 for students and senior citizens and $5 for adults. They are available at the high school office and at the door.

Jury convicts local woman on four drug charges

By L. Scott Swanson

Diane Psihopidas probably won't recall her most recent birthday as the best she's ever had. Nov. 11, on Psihopidas' birthday, officers from the Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement (SANE) team and the Charlevoix City Police raided her May Street apartment. The raid followed an arranged purchase of drugs from Psihopidas by a SANE informant.

During the raid, police officers found 13 eighth-ounce plastic bags of marijuana in a laundry basket, another small bag of marijuana on Psihopidas and some small envelopes of crack cocaine at other locations in the apartment. They also found a small set of hanging scales which are often used by drug dealers to measure and separate specific quantities of drugs. The total value of the drugs seized in the raid was estimated at between $800 and $900.

Psihopidas, 46, now faces a lengthy prison term after being found guilty of four drug charges last week. Following a three-day trial, a jury deliberated several hours and came back with guilty verdicts on charges of delivery of marijuana and cocaine and possession with intent to deliver marijuana and cocaine.

Prosecution of the case was handled by Maria Barton of Cheboygan County and Charlevoix County assistant prosecutor Mary Beth Kur. Barton handles the prosecution of SANE drug cases.

In her closing argument, Barton ran through a list of evidence supporting charges that Psihopidas knowingly possessed and intended to sell marijuana and cocaine. She noted the 13 bags of marijuana found in the defendant's residence and a fourteenth bag found on the defendant. Psihopidas' fingerprints were found on several of the bags.

Barton pointed out that the marijuana was packaged in eighth-ounce bags, a common unit for marijuana sales. She also said that the informant entered the apartment with money and came out minus the money, but with marijuana and cocaine.

Psihopidas' attorney, Mark Muniak, attempted to paint a different picture for the jury. He suggested that there was another reasonable theory as to why the drugs were found in the apartment.

Muniak suggested that the police informant, a 20-year-old man from Petoskey, may have planted the drugs in the apartment.

Muniak said even before the buy was arranged, police wanted to talk to the informant and the informant knew they wanted to talk to him. Muniak suggested that the informant, who stopped at Psihopidas' apartment prior to the buy, may have hidden drugs there because he was on his way to Mount Pleasant and didn't want to take the drugs with him or leave them at his apartment in Petoskey.

Muniak said the drugs were not well-hidden. He maintained they were found in places more consistent with someone tossing them somewhere in an apartment he's not real familiar with.

As for the marijuana found in Psihopidas' pocket, Muniak said he didn't have a good explanation for that. He noted that it was of better

DDA members also asked engineers to look into some alternatives to stone for the front of the building. They said they want it to look like an attractive waterfront build-

quality than that found in the bags in the laundry basket. He said it was a situation consistent with someone finding marijuana in their apartment and sifting out the good stuff for their own use.

Muniak said that not only sellers, but also drug buyers use scales. He said a pipe found in the apartment also is evidence of use, not selling.

Muniak also pointed out that the buy money the informant was sent into the apartment with was not found during the police search.

Muniak told the jury that if there is a reasonable theory for a not guilty verdict and a reasonable theory for a guilty verdict, then the jury should find the defendant not guilty due to a presumption of innocence.

In responding to Muniak's closing argument, Barton told jurors that in making their decision they should only consider the evidence presented in the case and not surmise. She said the evidence was that the drugs were in the apartment with Psihopidas' fingerprints on the bags.

The jury began deliberating late Wednesday afternoon, broke for the evening and then continued deliberating all Thursday morning, finally coming in with a verdict early in the afternoon.

Following the verdict, Barton and Kur issued a short press release

Arts need public funding

by EDITH GILBERT

It's puzzling to me that the same forces who decry the loss of family values — who complain about the glut of violence on television — are now attacking government funding for the arts!

No, it is not for the perfumed or tuxedoed audiences on opening nights that the National Endowment for the Arts exists! It's for those who sit in the peanut gallery. It exists to encourage artists, many of whom don't make the current hourly wage, if the truth be known. It exists to encourage youngsters to learn to hear the sound of music and begin to see line, form and scale. It exists to encourage such satisfying family values as creativity, originality, productivity, and responsibility. It exists to bring joy and happiness into our lives.

Let me describe to you the heart of some real family values!

Locally, there are over 200 youngsters enrolled in the winter term in the Community School for the Arts under the auspices of the Crooked Tree Arts Council. They study voice, piano, clarinet, violin, dance, painting and pottery. Last Saturday, the auditorium at the McCune Arts Center was packed with families and friends, who enjoyed Jody Adgate's Jazz Gallery Dancers. They performed for the benefit of the Community Foundation Youth Fund.

This year 46 students have applied for winter term scholarships, which is the highest number ever received in a single term. Only 18 scholarships, are available however. So much for the theory that art is only for the elite!

The monthly exhibits, which are always costly and often inspiring, are free to the public. Even though it stormed outside last Thursday, the opening show of nine area architects was well attended. Hundreds of schoolchildren will be bussed in the next couple of weeks to see how an idea for a house glides from a thought, to a sketch on paper, to a model, to a photograph of the finished design. And they will see on the wall a drawing of a house made by architect Dave Trautman when he was in kindergarten!

The sales gallery carries the work of many popular artists who live, and often teach in the area. Over the years a number of budding artists have gotten their start by showing their work at the Art Center first, and have now moved on to other major galleries outstate.

The Community Concert Series has recently featured a performance by the nationally recognized radio virtuoso, Karl Haas, among other artists. He received a standing ovation by an enthusiastic audience of music lovers.

In addition to the above, the Arts Center rents its comfortable auditorium at a very nominal fee for plays by the Little Traverse Civic Theater, to the Petoskey Film Theater for foreign and classic films, and in the summer plays are performed by students of Central Michigan University.

It was with the urging of the newly formed Michigan Council for the Arts in 1966, that the Crooked Tree Arts Council was founded in 1971. They planted the seed and we are now reaping the harvest in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties. Our children are bussed frequently to the McCune Arts Center for special exhibits, or, master classes in dance, music and drama are transported to our schools.

We may not be the brightest folks, but we're certainly a hardy lot

L. Scott Swanson

Whether or not northern Michigan people are the brightest folks in the world is a matter open to debate, but one thing's for certain - we're a hardy lot.

As clear and compelling evidence of this, consider this past Saturday. Cold, it was. Bitter, bitter, low-down, cold. There weren't enough degrees Fahrenheit to be worth mentioning and the Celsius reading was so far in the minus column that it was even more un-American than usual.

And if the cold temperatures weren't enough, there was the wind - blowing, blowing, blowing adding windsuit to injury. Many years ago, in the days before people knew about wind chill, this wouldn't have been a problem. But now that there's a windchill, and weather people are constantly harping about it, it's something you have to concern yourself with. It just adds to the burden.

If the cold and the wind weren't enough, there was snow too. It blew across the roads making visibility worse than that of a small bar during a smokers' convention. Out by the stop light on M-66 and US 31, people were stopping regardless of the color of the light just to look around and get their bearings.

Yet in the midst of this day, a day in which nonmigratory birds seriously considered changing their party alliance, plenty of Charlevoix people were out doing stuff and having fun.

There were cars parked down on Bridge Street and there were people around. This was no snow-white ghost town.

Lions aren't generally thought of as cold weather critters, but the Charlevoix Lions Club was out there on the hill helping run the various events. They were bundled up so heavily that they'd have never been able to run down any zebras or gazelles, but they ran the tubing races all right.

In the evening there were fireworks. Yep, they had 'em. Couldn't shoot 'em off the top of the hill like normal. Instead they had to bring them down to the bottom. And they were beautiful. It was kind of like watching a fireworks slide show. There would be a boom, a beautiful flash and then the plume of light would quickly slide to the left and be replaced by the next frame.

Life and winter in northern Michigan provide some challenges. But we're tough folks. We make some fun for ourselves and we endure.

Editor,

"Two roads diverged in a wood, and I took the one less traveled." Robert Frost

Today I hid the Charlevoix Courier, Jan. 25, from my 9 year old. With increasing sadness I have watched the Charlevoix Courier (and Petoskey News-Review) succumb to ever increasing sensationalism and profane language in journalism. Some loyal locals theorize that our home town paper is merely trying to compete with larger papers. If that is the case, please STOP!!!

I buy the Courier precisely because it is NOT the Flint Journal or the Detroit Free Press. Where else can I read that the kid down the street caught a 15-inch perch, or that Laura made 10 points in Junior High basketball, or that Ethan is maintaining his watchful vigil of the Mason Street drain, or that our High School Performing Arts placed first again, or that the Hospital is offering classes for new parents? And yes, responsible reporting demands that the less happy events also be reported. The accidents, crimes and sadly even murders, but please spare me the details. I do not need graphic descriptions of bodies, crime scenes and incidents. If in the interest of space a choice must be made between covering Odyssey of the Mind and a detailed description of a criminals' appearance, cover the hard work of the kids.

I do not want to see profanity in print in my local paper even if it is a quote.

I encourage the Courier staff to strive for excellence in their use of the English language and dignity and compassion in their reporting. It may be the road less traveled at this time, but it more accurately reflects the values of the regular decent people in our lovely little town. Maybe it could even invite us all to be a little kinder and gentler. That COULD make all the difference!!

Sincerely,
Jo Anne Beemon

Students want Club 77 saved

Editor,

Since 1991 my friends and I have been going to a place we thought of as a second home. Since then it has been open less and less every month, and, soon it might not be open at all. This place is Club 77. Because of a lack of people and funds we are losing our only teen center. Only $2,500 behind schedule, Club 77 will be closed for good. On Fridays and Saturdays about 30 people go here to dance and talk. Soon these 30 people will be doing the same thing they were doing five years ago. Walking around town and on the streets. We need teen centers as some place to go to do our homework, play sports and be with our friends. A group of middle schoolers is willing to fix this place up, but we need help from the businesses and parents of the community. Together we might be able to keep a positive place open for the future. If you think you can help with the $2,500 to keep them on their feet, or even if you can donate money for future expenses it would be greatly appreciated. Maybe someday we'll even get the number up to 100. If you can help call Kevin Janisse at 547-0525.

Yours truly,
Carrie Beemon

Editor,
Club 77 is real important to us teens of Charlevoix. It is one of the Sixth grade students voice concerns

Editor's note: The following letters were written by sixth grade students as an assignment for middle school teacher Kathy Gowell's English class.

Set times for rollerblading

Editor,

I am very concerned about rollerblading on the sidewalks. All of the people will still rollerblade on the sidewalk no matter what. Let there be certain times of the day when you can rollerblade.

Sincerely,

Kids need more jobs

Editor,

I think there should be more jobs in Charlevoix for kids, like newspaper routes, community services, etc. When kids are just sitting around playing games and watching T.V. they could be out doing a job. Kids should have more responsibility. Thank you for your help in this matter.

Yours truly,
Mike Grosberg

People are taxed to death

Editor,

I agree that the average person is being taxed to death. Everywhere you turn you're hit with taxes. You are taxed on interest, earnings, dividends and unearned income when you are retired. What are they spending all our money on?

The government taxes you so much you could go bankrupt. All the government wants is money.

Sincerely,
Bryan Burns

People need to wear seat belts

Editor,

I agree that officers should be allowed to stop those not wearing their seat belts. People can cause accidents. They don't understand that they will be the victims someday. The Michigan law says officers can only give a ticket to someone if they are only stopped for something else. We should have a device to alert police officers that the occupants are unbuckled. Then the offenders could be pulled over. I mean if someone is driving along not buckled in and, something goes wrong they crash into another car and it explodes. Don't you think that's a reasonable explanation? I understand people's rights. All I am just saying is, keep your seat belt on for your safety!

Sincerely,
Jessica Soullier

...Edith: arts need public funding

For many students, this is the first and only time the youngsters have seen a live performance.

The 38 board members of CTAC, who come from Boyne City, Charlevoix, East Jordan, Harbor Springs, and Petoskey, are well aware of the financial support generated by their open handed communities. These individuals and local businesses support many of CTAC's fund-raisers, including memberships and the endowment fund. But this is only a part of the budget.

Let's get the record straight. Without funding from these federal and state organizations, CTAC would have to do without these much needed grants. The amount of funding varies greatly from year to year. In 92-93, CTAC received $6,500. The following year CTAC was fortunate to receive $30,000. These unexpected variations are closely tied to political activity at the state and national level, and most importantly from the constant and repetitive pressure from supporters of the arts.

There have been times when closing the McCune Arts Center during the winter months was seriously considered. Fortunately, thanks to support from the National Endowment for the Arts and other grants from the state, the headquarters for the Crooked Tree Arts Council was able to remain open for the benefit of the public year round.

Let us offer our children an alternative to violence on television and lend our support to organizations that promote healthy family values in the arts.

Eastern Star meets

Mary Lee was welcomed as a new member of Charlevoix Chapter #72, Order of the Eastern Star at the organization's January meeting.

At the meeting, it was announced that the Sunshine collection for the December meeting had been donated to the Eastern Star Education Fund. Other reports were that the Sunshine/Caring Committee has sent 44 cards and made 25 calls to ill or shut-in members during the past month.

The Meguzee District meeting will take place in Petoskey, May 8.

The Charlevoix chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star will not be meeting in February or March.

Sled run provides the perfect wedding setting

Kim Rowe and John Taylor were married outdoors this past Saturday evening at the top of their sled run next to their home.

You may kiss the bride and prepare to slide. Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor's first wedding trip together was down a sled run.

Nerves had nothing to do with shivering at John Taylor and Kim Rowe's wedding Saturday. It was outdoors and it was cold.

Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor emerged from their post-nuptial sled run snow-covered, but very happy.

Murderer sentenced to 27 to 50 years

By Laurie Lounsbury

Daniel Sylvester Puroll will be spending 27 to 50 years in a Michigan prison for killing 81-year-old Clark Lee Washburn. Puroll received a 25 to 50 year sentence for second degree murder Friday from Charlevoix Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas. He was sentenced to a two year prison term for a felony firearms conviction. Pajtas explained that Puroll will get a credit on his two year sentence for 276 days served locally. The sentence for his murder conviction will be served consecutively, after the felony firearms sentence, with no credit for time served.

When Pajtas announced the sentence, he said he took into consideration Puroll's prior criminal record. Puroll had a prior felony conviction for attempted fourth degree criminal sexual conduct. He had three misdemeanor convictions for impaired driving, malicious destruction of property, and assault and battery. Puroll also had a juvenile record for larceny. Pajtas noted that Puroll is a 29-year-old man who has had a problem with alcohol since he was 14 years old. For those reasons, Pajtas gave Puroll the maximum sentence he could under the Michigan Supreme Court guidelines.

Following the sentencing, Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney Richard May said, "The sentence was appropriate. Mr. Puroll deserved to get the maximum."

Puroll is not done with the courts yet. He also faces a charge of carrying a concealed weapon. A trial date for that charge is set for March 6. May said he chose to prosecute on the concealed weapons charge because Puroll was already a known murder suspect, and had already been interviewed by the police when he was caught with the .357 Magnum pistol. On May 7, Puroll was interviewed by police regarding the death of Washburn. On May 11, he was found with the gun in his car, allegedly making statements about "taking care of" a woman who was indirectly involved in the case.

"A conviction on this charge would affect his chances for parole," said May. As it stands, Puroll would be eligible for parole in 21 years, with good time credit.

Grant will fund linking of law enforcement computers

Richard W. May, Charlevoix County Prosecutor, has announced that the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's Office has been awarded a Federal Grant of $21,075 to develop an integrated criminal justice system for Charlevoix County. The total cost for the project is $28,100 of which the federal government will be paying $21,075.00 and the county and local agencies $6,925.00.

Currently, for any arrest in Charlevoix County five different agencies must review, process and input the same data from the police incident report to sentencing. In Charlevoix County the Sheriff's Department, Prosecutor, and Courts are all located in different buildings and locations. The police agencies are located throughout the county. Each agency uses different computers or software. The paper transportation of information and multiple entry of data into each agency's computer results in delay and inefficient use of public employees.

Grant monies will be used to purchase the necessary hardware components and software to provide the necessary connection and interfaces to link all criminal justice agencies in Charlevoix County which includes police agencies, State Police, Sheriff's Department, Prosecutor, District Court, Circuit Court, and Probation Departments. A common criminal justice database will be created which will provide information, needed by each respective agency, 24 hours a day, to share information from the local police agency's original incident report through cases sentencing and transferring the sentencing information to the state L.I.E.N. system.

The benefits to the Charlevoix County criminal justice agencies include:

- Improved staff productivity by providing single data entry by the agency originating the information.

- Reducing the delays and number of inaccuracies by reducing the number of times the information has to be repeated.

- Reducing time to create and transfer paper records between police, prosecutor's office, and the courts.

- Increasing accuracy and timeliness of criminal history information submitted to the State Police

L.I.E.N. computer.

- Making dates that the court has scheduled cases immediately available to the Prosecutor and police agencies.

- Creating an E-Mail system so messages can be sent electronically between all criminal justice agencies.

- Expediting processing of criminal cases.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. DALE P. OSTEMA
Charlevoix United Methodist Church

Have you been keeping up on the tremendous growth in our country's "Men's Movement"? This phenomenon is occurring in both the secular and religious realm. In particular, I have been interested in the growth of the men's movement called "Promise Keepers." Started in 1990 by former Colorado head football coach, Bill McCartney, "Promise Keepers" is a non-denominational Christian Men's movement based on the premise that, "A man's man is a Godly man."

At recent rallies, more than 50,000 men packed both Colorado's Folsom Stadium and Indiana's Hoosier Dome. At the upcoming rally in the Silver Dome, estimates are that 80,000 men will fill the stadium to hear Christian preachers, teachers and musicians encourage them to fulfill God's purposes for their lives. "Promise Keepers" seeks to bring men to Jesus Christ and strengthen them to live for Christ in their daily lives.

Central to the successes of "Promise Keepers" are the promises which lie at the heart of the PK message. They are:

- 1) Honor Jesus Christ through prayer, worship and obedience to His Word, in the power of the Holy Spirit;
- 2) Pursue vital relationships with a few other men, understanding that I need brothers to help me keep my promises;
- 3) Practice spiritual moral, ethical and sexual purity;
- 4) Build strong marriages and families through love, protection and biblical values;
- 5) Support the mission of my church, by honoring and praying for my pastor and by actively giving my time and resources;
- 6) Reach beyond any racial and denominational barriers to demonstrate the power of biblical unity;
- 7) Influence my world, being obedient to the Great Commandment (Mark 12:30-31) and the Great Commission (Matthew 28:19-20);

What makes "Promise Keepers" work is accountability to one another. Men are encouraged to meet in small groups to grow in their relationship with God and become strong spiritual leaders in their family, church and community. I know a growing number of our churches have men's groups which incorporate the "Promise Keeper" message into their time together.

Think what you will about this phenomenon. I think it is a wonderful alternative to the spiritual void so often a part of the things men do and enjoy. The saying is still true today, "Blessed is the man who delights in the way of the Lord."

(Rev. Dale Ostema is pastor of the Charlevoix United Methodist Church. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Ostema and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

New business takes care of homes

By Laurie Lounsbury

Norm "Boogie" Carlson is one of the guys who used to paint the town. Now he's setting aside his paint brushes and strapping on a tool belt. Formerly one of the guys in "Three Guys Painting," Carlson sold his share of the business. Now he's in business for himself, doing a variety of maintenance and repair work.

Carlson's new business is Home Improvements & Complete Property Management. Improving homes is nothing new to Carlson. He's been in the construction field for 15 years. Carlson learned plumbing at his father's side, working with him since he was 12 years old.

Carlson has a maintenance and alteration contractor's license and he's planning to upgrade to a full builder's license. He's able to do minor plumbing and electrical work, along with hanging drywall, replacing and repairing woodwork, and a host of other fix up jobs.

Of course, any homeowner can tell you it's better to prevent damage to your home than repair damage after it's occurred. That's where the complete property management of Carlson's operation comes into play. He will act as caretaker and manager of cottages and resort homes. Carlson will check uninhabited homes to make sure pipes don't freeze and furnaces keep working during the cold winter months. If a homeowner plans a trip to their second home, Carlson will make sure the driveway is plowed and the heat is on, and the oil or gas tanks are filled.

...Carlson repairs and cares for homes

Another valuable service that

Carlson provides is home sales consulting. If you plan to sell your home, Carlson can come in, take a look around, and tell you what minor repairs or touch ups would make your home more saleable. Sometimes a fresh coat of paint or some new woodwork can make all the difference to potential buyers. Carlson can spot the trouble areas and fix them.

Carlson opened the door to his new business this week. The number for Home Improvement & Complete Property Management is 547-1938.

Volleyball team finishes second in league behind Elk Rapids

Charlevoix finished second to Elk Rapids in the conference volleyball tournament Saturday and ended up in the same place in the final conference volleyball standings.

Conference standings are determined by combining regular season records and the tournament record. Charlevoix entered the tournament needing to finish first and have Elk Rapids finish no higher than third in order to claim the league title. When Charlevoix and Elk Rapids both reached the tournament finals, Elk Rapids had already clinched the league title. Just to seal the deal, the Elks beat the Rayders 15-7, 15-8 in the finals.

Charlevoix played well in preliminary play beating Traverse City St. Francis, Harbor Springs and Kalkaska. In the semi-finals the Rayders beat Boyne City 15-12, 15-8.

Liz Grunch led the Rayders with 31 kills on the day. Gretchen Scott had 14 and Kris Blanchard eight. Blanchard and Jill Dreyer each served six aces. Grunch, Scott, Aprille Pischner and Liz Coen led the Rayder defense.

Haggard, Metiva, Reinhart and Harris wrestle well at league meet

Jason Metiva, wrestling at 160 pounds, and Ron Haggard, wrestling at 170 pounds, each took second place medals at the Great Northern Conference wrestling tournament in Rogers City Saturday. Bruce Reinhart placed third in the 275 pound weight class while Dan Harris was fourth at 215.

Metiva was leading 11-6 entering the last period in the finals match, but ran out of gas and ended up losing 13-11 to a wrestler from Mancelona. He opened the day seeded second and promptly pinned his first two opponents, one from Onaway and the other from Elk Rapids.

Haggard moved up a weight class to get better competition. He was seeded second at 170 pounds, drew a bye in his first match, pinning a Grayling opponent in 1:32 and lost a 10-4 decision in the finals to a two-time conference champion and state placer.

Reinhart was seeded third in his weight class. Following a first round bye, he lost on a pin in 1:02 to a Mancelona wrestler. He had beaten the same opponent earlier in the season, but a move that went awry cost him in the conference meet. The Mancelona wrestler is likely to be the top seed in the district tournament so Reinhart may get another shot at him within the next few weeks. In his second match, Reinhart pinned an Onaway wrestler in 1:40 and finished his day by pinning a Whittemore-Preseott wrestler in 2:17.

Harris has shown steady improvement throughout the season, but began the day unseeded. He lost a 1-0 decision in his first match to the wrestler who ended up losing in the finals by a point. In his second match, Harris pinned a Mancelona wrestler in 18 seconds. In the third match he took a 5-1 decision from an Elk Rapids wrestler. In the consolation finals, he lost to a Whittemore-Preseott wrestler on a 6-4 decision.

Haggard has a record of 28-3 on the season and is undefeated (17-0) when he wrestles at 160 pounds. Metiva is 20-5, Reinhart 22-10 and Harris 11-10.

Brian VanDeCar and Kyle Russell also wrestled for the Rayders at the conference meet, but did not place.

Charlevoix will wrestle in the team district Feb. 15 at St. Ignace.

Hayes Township opens fire barn

Hayes Township will host a ceremony to celebrate the opening of the township's new fire barn at 10 a.m., Saturday, Feb. 18.

Hayes Township is served by the Charlevoix Township Fire Department. Hayes Township built the fire barn, but it will be equipped with Charlevoix Township fire trucks.

Six of the Charlevoix Township Fire Department firefighters are residents of Hayes Township. With the addition of the fire barn, they will be able to quickly get the trucks from the Hayes Township barn to fires in Hayes and near Hayes Township.

The cost of building the new fire barn was about $46,000 according to township supervisor Paul Hoadley.

Two years ago the township changed from Charlevoix City to Township Fire Department protection following a dispute over the cost of protection.

Hoadley said increases in the cost of fire protection from year to year are now based on the cost of living rather than property values, which is what the township objected to.

As far as the township service, Hoadley said, "It's working great. No problems. No complaints."

Lake Michigan water levels remain high

During the month of January precipitation on each Great Lakes basin was above average, with the exception of the Lake Superior basin which was below average. For the year to date, precipitation is about 18 percent above average for the entire Great Lakes basin. The net supply of water to each of the Great Lakes in January was above average except for the Lake Superior basin which was below average.

In comparison to their long-term (1918-1994) averages, the January monthly mean water level of Lake Superior was 1 inch below average, Lakes Michigan-Huron, St. Clair and Erie were 7, 15 and 10 inches above average respectively, while Lake Ontario was at its long-term average. Shoreline residents are cautioned to be alert whenever adverse weather conditions exist, as these could cause rapid short-term rises in water levels. Should the lakes approach critically high levels, further information and advice will be provided by the Corps of Engineers.

A more detailed summary of Lakes Michigan-Huron water levels follows. All elevations are referenced to International Great Lakes Datum 1985.

Lakes Michigan-Huron at the end of January were at elevation 579.20 feet (176.54 meters) above the mean water level at Rimouski, Quebec, or about 20 inches (54 cm.) above Chart Datum. The January monthly mean level of 579.17 feet (176.53 meters) was about 7 inches (18 cm.) above the long-term average for January. The lakes were about 26 inches (65 cm.) below the all-time high January monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1987. The forecast shows that the February monthly mean level of Lakes Michigan-Huron will be about the same as what it was at Mid-January. The lakes are expected to begin their seasonal rise in March. The water level in Mid-July 1995 is expected to be about 7 inches (18 cm.) above the long-term average for that month, or about 1 inch (2 cm.) below what it was at the same time in 1994.

Friction continues between county board and road commission

By Laurie Lounsbury

Charlevoix County Commissioners took another step in the direction of removing Road Commissioner Robert Herrmann from his job. Commissioners scheduled a show cause public hearing for February 22, at the next commissioner meeting.

"The charge is that he (Herrmann) received favors and benefits far beyond what a road commissioner is entitled to," said Don Smith, County Commission Chairman. The purpose of the show cause hearing is to determine if Herrmann had a culvert installed on his property by road commission employees with road commission equipment. The allegations were made a few weeks ago by a road commission employee. Smith said he has two signed statements by two different road employees saying that they installed the culvert, and that they used county equipment to do so. One employee reportedly said he installed the culvert under the orders of Larry Hamlin, Road Manager.

Road Manager Larry Hamlin sent a letter to the board of commissioners saying that at no time were county employees or equipment used to install the culvert.

County Commissioner Jim Behling was the only commissioner to vote against the show cause hearing. "Are you sure you know what you're doing? You're raising a real question over a $100 item. A lot of reputations are at stake, and I don't know whose will suffer from this," Behling said. Behling suggested that quite a few county employees get perks from the county. He alleged that employees and other commissioners get their cars washed, driveways plowed, and order mechanical parts through the road commission to get a discount. "Don Smith has a grudge against one guy and now it will affect everybody," Behling said. Behling also said that Smith might be one person getting perks, like having his driveway plowed by one of the road foremen. Smith vehemently denied it. Independent snowplow Mike Hodge verified that he's been plowing Smith's driveway for about the last ten years.

Smith later said that he didn't know employees were getting perks through the county. "I never knew it existed. If it's above and beyond county policy, then they shouldn't continue to be doing it," Smith said.

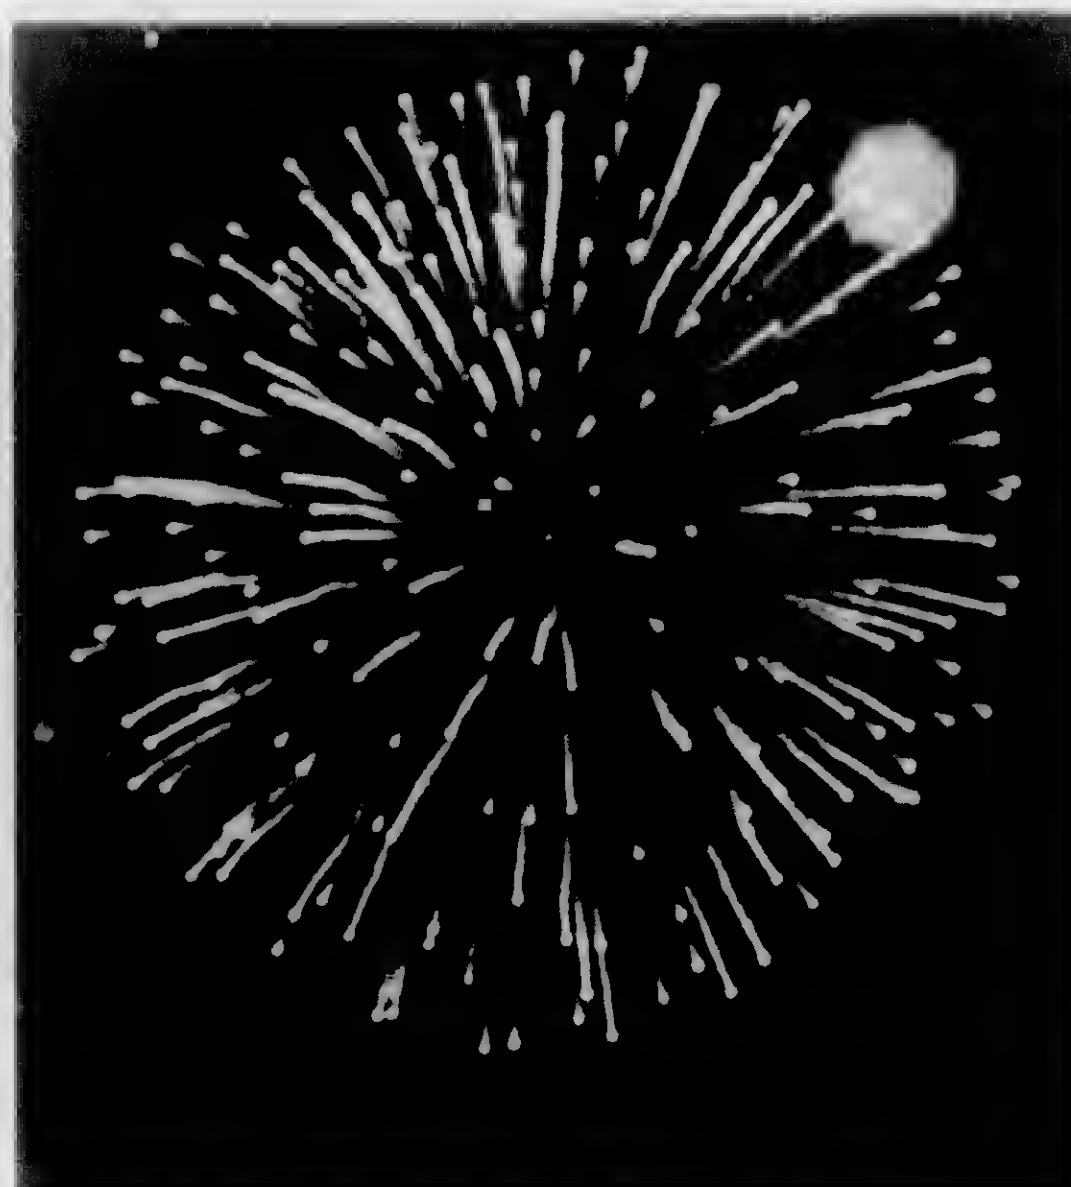

Phone calls to Robert Herrmann were not returned as of press time

Road commission receives grant to improve Burgess Road

The Charlevoix County Road Commission will be receiving a $148,869 grant from the Michigan State Transportation Commission to help widen and repave two miles of Burgess Road. Among other things, repaving the road will help provide better access to the Dunmaglas Resort.

According to a news release from the Michigan Department of Transportation, the entire project will cost $245,827. Charlevoix County Road Commission manager Larry Hamlin said work on the project is scheduled to begin late this coming summer.

City seeks grant to purchase and tear down former Parkside building

The city is applying for a federal grant which, if received, would help the city purchase and tear down the former Parkside Restaurant building.

At the Feb. 20 city council meeting, mayor Josh Barnes announced that the city council has discussed purchasing the building and tearing it down to enlarge the park.

He said a federal grant program for view corridors may pay up to 75 percent of the purchase and demolition cost. Barnes said the city has investigated the process for getting a grant to buy the building. He said first the city has to apply for the grant, then negotiate a purchase price. He said that strikes him as being kind of a backward order of doing things, but that's how the program works. The program is a view enhancement program which means that if grant money is used to purchase the building, it will have to be torn down.

City manager Mike Wiesner said he's been told that there is a program available and there have been few if any applications for the money in the past. The deadline for making the application is April 1 and the city would hear whether or not the application has been approved in June.

Second ward council member Gabe Campbell said, "I feel that if we could get the grant, it would make the city more attractive."

Former council member Bob

Timms questioned the proposal, saying he thinks the building is valuable on the tax rolls. He said the city already has a lot of property and he questions how much property the city should own, maintain and have off the tax rolls. He said he also suspects that if the city owned the Parkside, they would attempt to turn the end of Mason Street into a grassy area. He said he feels the end of Mason Street should be left as an access point to the harbor.

A motion to apply for the grant money was unanimously approved.

Merchants host Mardi Gras days

Enough of this hibernating stuff. It makes you fat and lazy. Get yourself up off that lounge chair, turn off the TV and head downtown this weekend and see what's going on.

The Charlevoix Retail Promotions Committee is sponsoring Mardi Gras days Feb. 24-26 in downtown Charlevoix. At heart, the Charlevoix Mardi Gras event is nothing more than an excuse for local restaurants and stores to have special events and sales and for local people to get out and have a good time.

"It's just something fun to counteract the winter blues," said Gina Whitney of Whitney's. "We're just trying to do something to get people out of the house and down-

Whitneys will be having a hat (or mask) contest Saturday night. The band Blue Rider will be playing. There will be a $2 charge at the door with the winner of the hat contest collecting the proceeds. The winner will be chosen at midnight.

Friday evening, Stafford's

Weathervane will be having their oyster bar with Charlie Smith playing guitar.

Kris Runblad, manager of Stafford's Weathervane and a member of the promotions committee, said about 30 different businesses will be participating in the Mardi Gras. (Several of the businesses are shown on pages 10, 11 and 20 of this week's Courier.)

"It fits in good (with other winter events)," she said. "It's time to have some fun, get out, get out on the streets."

Julia Tucker of 7-Eleven said the Retail Promotions Committee traditionally tries to do something in February to get people out and give Charlevoix's retail economy a mid-winter push.

Charlevoix personified

Serving up many years of smiles

By Laurie Lounsbury

Lori Brown has been serving food and beverages to folks in Charlevoix for the last 14 years. Brown hasn't changed much over the years, but her customers have. These days, they're a lot smaller.

Brown works in the elementary school cafeteria, serving hot lunches to 350 kids each day. Over the years, she has worked as a waitress or bartender at Duffy's, Alexander's, the Grey Gables, and the Bridge Club. Brown had no trouble adapting to her younger, shorter customers at school. "Actually, there's no difference. The grown ups in the bar act as young as the kids," Brown said.

Brown's former patrons at the neighborhood bars miss her sassy repartee and outrageous sense of humor. One devoted customer, Jim Bowerman, once said, "I love to laugh. For that, Lori is out of this world." Brown is still making her customers smile. She simply traded barroom humor for mom-style humor. Brown has two kids of her own at the elementary school, so she knows how to relate to that age group.

It's not likely that Brown will ever be lured back into the restaurant business. "This is my niche, right here," Brown said of the school cafeteria. She works part time now, but hopes it will become a full time position in the next few years. "Working with Martha Herboldsheimer and the rest of the kitchen staff is a real asset to the job," Brown said.

Brown can often be seen around town, leading with laughter at assorted community events. She heads the annual Labor Day Bridgewalk, and lends support at the town tug of war across the channel. Whatever the occasion, Brown is the one to add the key ingredient - humor.

Two Charlevoix High School alumni are among the Michigan Tech University students named to the fall semester dean's list. They are Ed McLenon, a senior majoring in mechanical engineering, and James Zeidler, a senior majoring in civil engineering. McLenon had a perfect 4 point grade point average for the semester. To be named to the dean's list a student must have a grade point average of 3.5 or better.

Amy Spang and Dan Spang of Charlevoix are among the students named to the Northern Michigan University fall semester dean's list. To be eligible for the list a student must have a grade point average of 3.25 or better on a 4 point grading scale.

Grant to allow hiring of sheriff's deputies

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department will be receiving a $63,900 federal grant which will allow the department to hire at least two and possibly three additional officers.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater said he recently received word of the grant from Washington. He said he was told that additional information will follow and he's waiting for that information.

Lasater said the grant will fund the addition of two or possibly three additional deputies to the 12 sworn deputies currently on the sheriff department force.

The grant program is called COPS FAST and is being administered by the Department of Justice. The program is part of last year's federal crime bill.

Lasater said the COPS FAST program emphasizes community policing. Among the things he hopes the program will allow the sheriff's department to do is to give additional emphasis to programs such as Neighborhood Watch and to reopen the East Jordan substation.

Local K-5 students compose music

By Laurie Lounsbury

Mozart had to compose with a quill pen and an ink blotter. He didn't even have any white-out to conceal his mistakes. Mozart would have loved being a student at Charlevoix's elementary school. Music teacher Marina LaBlance's music students are able to compose music on a computer. The budding young Mozart's can potentially write the musical score for an entire orchestra with the new computer program, "Music Studio."

LaBlance has expanded her music program to keep pace with technology. She teaches students the fundamentals of reading and writing music. With the basics under their belts, students can go to the computer and compose their own music. A quick click on the ear icon will give them immediate feedback. A music synthesizer connected to the computer will play back the song as it was written.

For kids who can't hear the music in their head, there is another way to compose. A keyboard connected to the computer allows them to play a song out loud. The notes they play will appear on the computer screen as the notes they've written.

Students can write music for any instrument. The synthesizer is able to create more than 1,000 different combinations of sounds. Kids feel right at home with the synthesized music. "Most of the music out there today is synthesized," LaBlance said.

LaBlance didn't miss a beat when she embarked on her lessons about composition. She discussed every aspect of music writing with her students, from titling music to plagiarism.

The expanding music program hasn't taken away from everyone's favorite

You could write your way to Ireland

North Central Michigan College and the Robert Emmet Committee are co-sponsoring an essay contest about the namesake of Emmet County. The winner of the Joseph W. McCarthy Memorial Essay Contest will receive a scholarship to study at University College in Galway, Ireland this summer. The award includes tuition, room and board and air fare.

The essay topic is "How do the political values of Robert Emmet relate to our lives today?" Emmet was an Irish patriot who was hanged and beheaded. He and other nationalists sought an end to British oppression in the first years of the 19th century, but their plan to oust the foreign rulers was uncovered and the rebellion was quickly crushed.

The contest is open to high school graduates and students graduating this year who reside in NCMC's service area, which includes Emmet, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, and Otsego counties and the northern third of Antrim County. Essays must be at least 1,000 words and must be received by March 1, 1995.

"This is an international experience and educational opportunity that should appeal to any student, regardless of ethnic heritage," said Larry Cummings, professor of history and geography at NCMC. Cummings is one of the essay contest's organizers.

Several books about Robert Emmet are on reserve at the NCMC library for contest entrants. For more information, contact Cummings at 616/338-6637.

OPINIONS

Editorial

Stop-on-a-whim seat belt laws can be done without

Society's self-designated big brothers and handholders are at it again. Certain they know what's best, they're trying to drum up support to trample on civil liberties for what they've declared to be for the good of the rest of us.

At the moment their mission is to not only require people to wear seat belts, but to go a step beyond that and allow police to pull people over pretty much any time they want, so they can check to see that seat belts are being worn. Anyone who values living in a free society should find this idea abhorrent.

Granted, any objective person reviewing research on the subject is bound to conclude that in the interest of personal safety, wearing seat belts is something you should do. But whether or not wearing seat belts makes you safer is not the key question in this issue. The key questions in this issue are:

1. Is a person's individual safety the responsibility of the government or of the individual?

2. Should police be able to pull drivers over and detain them even though there is little, if any, evidence that the driver is doing anything illegal?

Regarding the first question, nobody argues that government and law enforcement have a legitimate responsibility to intervene when people make choices that adversely affect the lives and well-being of others. But government intervention in choices people make when those choices affect only the people making them is more of a gray area. A theme we're now hearing in state and national politics is the theme of individual responsibility. Central to individual responsibility is allowing people to make their own choices and allowing them to accept either the rewards or consequences.

Individual responsibility and allowing people to make their own decisions and take risks are not new concepts in this nation. In fact, you can make a strong argument that allowing people to make their own decisions, even when those decisions didn't always seem to be safe, played a very important role in making this country one of the great nations of the world. Pilgrims, trappers, the pioneers of the west, those who participated in the gold rush, all would have been safer if they'd stayed home. If the people who favor mandatory seat belt usage and enforcement would have been in charge of Spain in 1492, Columbus never would have made it out of the harbor. They would have pulled him over and said, "Chris, you can't sail west. You'll fall off the edge of the world. It just ain't safe."

The second question is even more important than the first. Police simply should not be allowed to detain people unless they have reasonable cause to believe they are doing something illegal. Law abiding citizens should be allowed to go about their business without interruption. Last summer, Michigan State Police participated in a test program in downstate Michigan. They stopped people randomly and if they weren't wearing seat belts reminded them that they should be. Police who participated in this program (or at least the police agency administrators who approved the program) felt they were educating the public. As if any of the people stopped hadn't already heard somewhere that it's in their best interest to wear seat belts. In reality, all the police were doing was making a nuisance of themselves and making drivers late for appointments.

This year the State Police are promoting a "No Excuses—Buckle Up" campaign to encourage local police agencies to emphasize enforcement and education regarding seat belt use. As part of this program, the State Police will be awarding various prizes, such as speed detectors and in-car video cameras to participating police agencies based on a point system. If this campaign focuses on educational efforts that don't involve stopping people randomly, that's fine. If it's used to publicize incidents (and virtually any officer or news person can cite such an incident) where someone would have survived if they were wearing a seat belt, that's fine. But if the program is nothing more than a public relations ploy to build support for a stop-on-a-whim law for seat belt checks, then it should be discontinued.

If police are allowed to stop people just to check and see if they're wearing seat belts, police will essentially be able to stop people on a whim. Checking for seat belts will just be a convenient excuse.

If a police officer sees an attractive woman driving a car and wants to stop her, no problem. Just making sure she's wearing a seat belt.

If a police officer sees a young man who looks a little suspicious and wants to stop him, no problem. Just making sure he's wearing a seat belt.

If a police officer sees four or five teenagers in a car, no telling what they're up to. Better pull them over to check their seat belts.

If a police officer doesn't like the way you look, he could pull you over for 10 or 15 minutes to talk about seat belts.

That's not to say that local police officers would do that. At the moment, we're fortunate to have local police departments that conduct themselves professionally with the realization that there are real crimes to prevent and investigate and better things to do than annoy people. But there's no guarantee that things will always be that way. Or perhaps, the only guarantee we have is our own vigilance against the big brothers and handholders in our society.

Math students test their knowledge

Tyler Lieberman of Charlevoix placed fifth in the area Mathcounts competition at Petoskey, Feb. 11. Mathcounts is a math competition for seventh and eighth grade students. Area winners advance to state and national competition.

Charlevoix placed fourth as a team in the competition. Petoskey defended its title from last year taking five of the top six individual places. The Boyne City team was second while third place went to a second Petoskey team.

Fifty-one students participated in this year's competition. They were on teams from Charlevoix, Petoskey, Harbor Springs, Boyne City and Rudyard.

Charlevoix sent three teams to the event. The eighth grade team which finished fourth was made up of Lieberman, Levi Bakker, Kris Staton and Carrie Beemon and was coached by Kay Fiedorek. One of the seventh grade teams consisted of Tiffany Fisher, Kristy Shindorf, Kirsten Brendtro and Laura Schairbaum and was coached by Tori Fisher. A second seventh grade team was made up of Josh Moses, Luke Whitley, Jeremy Olach and Joel Trubilowicz and was also coached by Fisher.

The area competition was sponsored by: the Mackinac Straits Chapter of the Michigan Society of Professional Engineers; Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point Nuclear Plant of Charlevoix; Ferguson and Chamberlain Associates Inc.; Performance Engineering; and Durocher Dock and Dredge of Cheboygan.

Letters to the editor

What's on sixth graders' minds

Editor's note: The following letters were written by sixth grade students as an assignment for middle school teacher Kathy Gowell's English class.

Ban Rhino ammo

Editor,
I was reading an editorial from the Detroit Free Press and it was about Rhino Ammo. Rhino Ammo is being used in guns and should be banned from the United States. The splitting action tears away at human tissue and vital organs. If Rhino Ammo was used in the United States it should be used in the army's weapons not on the streets.

Sincerely yours,

Doug Rick

Limit spending on animals

Editor,
I feel as though there are many more animals being dropped off on the streets than in shelters. We should only spend so much on the animals like $20 on them. That would be enough for them to find a home. They should have to get them spayed or neutered unless they are raised to breed. That would bring down half the problems if not all. The people need to help be doing fund-raisers to get money for this project.

Kristine Johnson

Abortion is wrong

Editor,
In our country today, many babies die because of abortion. I think it is wrong that government has permitted abortion. Of all people, they should be the ones to know that abortion is the same as murder. It is like going and killing an innocent victim because of two people's carelessness. I realize that the two people have a choice in which to have the baby or not, but it was also their choice to do what they did before. If they get an abortion, it was obviously the wrong choice. If they can't take care of their child, put it up for adoption. Everyone deserves to live a life. Give everyone a chance.

Sincerely,
Meghan A. Vogel

Now things thwart, defy and dare me--

1994-95 Miss Teen of Charlevoix County.

Following high school graduation in June, Potter plans to attend college.

The Charlevoix Hospital doctors treated the nursing staff to a winter retreat at the Edgewater Inn. It's a three year old tradition for the doctors to fund a winter getaway for the nurses. The nurses have 24 hours to relax, play cards, swim and let their hair down. Odd Fellows extend cribbage lead

The Masons are looking more and more like cooks. With only three nights of play left in the annual Masons and Odd Fellows cribbage tournament, the Masons have fallen behind by 9-4 points. This past Thursday evening the Odd Fellows extended their lead by 2-1 points with five tables in play.

As is tradition in the more than six-decade-old tournament, the losing team will cook dinner for the winners.

Leading the Odd Fellows this past week was Charles Dhasseier with 9-0 points. The top man for the Masons was Russ Lewis with 4-5 points.

The tournament will continue at 7:30 p.m., Feb. 23 at the Masonic Temple.

Masons to sponsor diabetes clinic

The Michigan Masons, in conjunction with the Endocrinology Department of the Children's Hospital of Michigan, will sponsor a state-wide series of free clinics for children with diabetes. These all day clinics are an opportunity for patients and parents to meet with a diabetes team consisting of an endocrinologist, nurse clinician, and dietitian. The most up-to-date methods of diabetes management will be discussed, including adjusting insulin doses according to daily fluctuations in blood sugars, nutrition, and exercise. A social worker will also be available to assist families with emotional and financial stresses of having a diabetic child.

The Masons of the Charlevoix Masonic Lodge No. 282 encourage families in the Charlevoix area with children and adolescents who have diabetes requiring insulin to attend the Juvenile Diabetic clinic. It will be held at the Munson Hospital, March 29 and March 30. Children are seen by appointment only. Appointments can be made by contacting the master of the Masonic Lodge in your community who can also assist with transportation to and from Traverse City.

BEACONS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

To all who have sent word, thank you for your thoughts and prayers. They mean a lot. A week ago, on an otherwise fine afternoon, I suddenly found myself flat on my back on the sidewalk in pain. It seems a patch of ice outside the Chamber of Commerce took me by surprise. The resulting ride to the hospital revealed a dislocated right elbow.

After a week in a cast, you would be surprised at how much I have learned and how much I have had to yield to others in terms of getting things done. As one who fancies himself as something of a writer, picture me typing this on my word processor with one finger on my left hand doing the load. My dear wife is getting acquainted with her husband's bill paying system because I can't write any checks.

But the fun has been in other areas as well. Can you picture a minister trying to talk without using his hands? I never realized how much I used them until I couldn't in last weekend's messages. The bone itself has been talking to me as well. It popped out and back in again inside the cast once. It reminded me of the sound the coffee grinder makes at the supermarket.

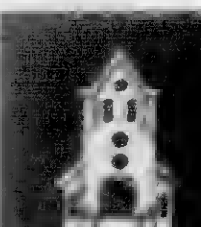

No, I'm not going to spend our whole visit recounting my current aches and pains. This very brief tale is just supposed to serve as a little reminder to you to stop and take a look at some of the things you do in life every day that are all too easily taken for granted. Besides paying bills, think of all the thank you notes you could write or cards of encouragement to others who might be having a hard time. Besides using both arms at a keyboard, think of all the hugs you could give to your spouse or your children or even a good friend.

And in the face of all the things an accident or illness might not let you do, it's so important to remember those things that you have never been stopped from doing. You can pray. You don't need two hands for that. You don't even need two eyes or ears. A grateful heart will do just fine. You can draw strength from God's Word. As I type this, a newscast playing in the background talked about a woman in France who will have lived longer than anyone in history if she reaches her 121st birthday next year. God's Word would tell you that people have lived longer than that. You can pray. You can read His Word. You can also lean on His family.

Twice now, members of my own church family have listened to their pastor pray for them, for our town, and beyond and after I have said, "Amen," they have stood up and said, "We want to pray for you too." The biggest lesson an accident can teach you may just be not what you cannot do for awhile. It may just be what you can still do with help, love, and prayers of those who surround you. No one need ever face a rough time in their lives alone.

(Rev. Bruce Hamilton is pastor of the Charlevoix Community Church of God. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Hamilton and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

City considers modifying purchasing policy

By L. Scott Swanson

The Charlevoix City Council is considering modifying its purchasing procedure. Currently department heads can spend up to $10,000 without council review. The council is considering lowering that to $5,000.

Second ward council member Gabe Campbell raised the issue for discussion at the Feb. 20 council meeting. He said the issue has nothing to do with mistrust, but is just a matter of good business and bringing bills to the council and reading them. Campbell suggested decreasing the discretionary spending cap from $10,000 to $5,000 except for electrical emergencies, in which case the city manager could spend up to $10,000 and inform the council at the next meeting.

"This doesn't tie anybody's hands. It promotes good government business," Campbell said.

Other members of the council expressed hesitance about changing the limit.

"I have a real reluctance to see us fix something that isn't broke," said mayor Josh Barnes. Barnes said he reviewed 24 spending items from the past year which fell between $5,000 and $10,000 and found that 17 of them were electrical.

Barnes and others pointed out that prior to making purchases in that price range, department heads have to get competitive price quotes and include the quotes with the purchase order. The purchases are reviewed by city treasurer Rick Brandi and also in some instances by city manager Mike Wiesner and the city is also audited by an accounting firm.

Barnes said, "I don't think we would have saved $100 had this (revised) procedure been in effect (during the past year)."

Third ward council member Bruce Reid said he works in purchasing and says he favors he prefers a reasonably high discretionary spending limit along with getting quotes. He said he's seen no evidence of any impropriety in the current system and therefore sees no reason to change it.

Second ward council member Butch Russell expressed concern about engineering contracts being awarded without bids and asked Wiesner how many times that had occurred in the previous year.

Wiesner said he thought that had happened three times in the past year. On all three items the contracts went to firms that had done work on items related to the projects the contracts were for. He said that on two of the three projects, the contracts were on a not to exceed a certain price basis and even though the engineers did additional work, the city paid only the agreed upon price.

"I'm not comfortable with giving the engineering out," Russell said. "I'm not sure we're getting the best price for the taxpayer."

Wiesner said his background is in engineering and he prides himself on getting good work on projects at the best price for taxpayers.

Council members also noted that some of the phrases contained in the city's purchasing policy were there at the recommendation of the state. Those phrases affect state revenue sharing. Barnes said some of the phrases aren't well written.

Council members weren't sure exactly what wording is required by the state and what the city is free to modify. They decided to have city attorney Jim Young review the purchase policy and let them know what can and can't be changed.

After hearing from Young, the council will again discuss the policy. If they decide to pursue making a change, they will set a date for a required public hearing.

Rayder rally falls four points short

Charlevoix rallied, but couldn't quite get over the top while East Jordan hit their free throws down the stretch to take a 67-63 win from the Rayders.

Neither team ever led by as much as ten points, although the Red Devils did extend their lead to eight points early in the third quarter. Charlevoix weathered the storm, refused to fold and got back to within three points 62-59 when Jerry Duhart stole the ball and hit a shot with 47 seconds left to play. Late last season East Jordan point guard Aaron Otis turned back a late game Rayder run by making crucial free throws as the clock wound down. Apparently the passage of a year hasn't harmed Otis' nerves. With 38 seconds left Friday evening, he hit two free throws to extend the Red Devils' lead back to five points.

Despite playing in a losing cause, Charlevoix forward Trevor Williams had perhaps the best game of his varsity career. Williams, a senior, has evolved into a very good forward over the past two seasons. Early in his junior year, Williams was a big strong player who thought he could shoot, but put up some ugly, off-balance shots - the kind players hesitate to rebound for fear of hurting their hands. As last season progressed he quit taking bad shots, but still got more points. How? He became a garbage player - a player who lurks around the basket, picks garbage shots off the glass or off the floor and puts them back up and in. It's basketball's version of recycling. Sometime between last season and this season Williams improved his footwork and got a real shot. In the first quarter against East Jordan, Williams had 10 points. He's still got the bump, thump and move-bodies work ethic he developed last year, but now he's also added some baseline pivot moves and a sweet little baby hook.

Charlie Pop, Williams' book-end at the other Rayder forward spot, also played well by streaks against East Jordan. Pop has struggled with consistency throughout his high school career. He will have streaks where he plays aggressively and is an opponent's nightmare. At other times, he fades into the background.

For a period in the third quarter, Williams and Pop were both on their game at the same time. The last time the Rayders had a set of forwards rebounding that well together was when Chad DeVries and Scott DeYoung played together four or five years ago.

The Rayders' senior point guard, Jerry Duhart, also played well in the third quarter. Duhart is nasty quick off the dribble and can find a shot for himself anytime he wants to. Were the Rayders ever to get Duhart, Williams and Pop playing well at the same time with somebody else, anybody else, contributing some perimeter shooting, the Rayders could be an offensively scary team.

Against East Jordan, Duhart led the Rayders with 18 points while Williams had 17 points and seven rebounds. Pop had a double-double with 11 points and 11 rebounds. Gary Leitner had five assists.

The Rayders won the junior varsity game 61-47. Josh Miller led the Rayders with 15 points while Steve Carland had 14 and Scott Smith 11.

Jerry Duhart got this shot to fall during the second half of Friday evening's 67-63 loss to East Jordan.

School board turns down teacher benefit request

By Laurie Lounsbury

The Charlevoix Board of Education voted to stick to the teacher's union contract instead of bending the rules in the case of teacher Jim Glynn. Glynn had requested that the school board purchase two year's worth of retirement benefits for him for the time he served in the military. The cost to the school board would have been about $3,500. The 1990 to 1993 teacher's contract allowed anyone who served in the military to receive up to four year's worth of credit towards their retirement. The contract specified that the deadline for applying for the benefits was June 15, 1992.

Glynn had taken a leave of absence from the Charlevoix school system to teach in Germany. He returned after the deadline. Glynn made his application for the military time credit in September of 1992, after the deadline had passed.

The school board deliberated about whether or not they had an obligation to inform Glynn about the benefit while he was overseas. Some board members said it was the teacher union's responsibility to inform Glynn of the benefit, while others maintained the board had at least a moral obligation to inform Glynn. Board member Ben Cunningham was opposed to making an exception to the contract in Glynn's case. "What's the point of setting a deadline if we're not going to live with it?" Cunningham asked other board members.

Board member Ardeth Wieland argued that Glynn had done the school system a favor by extending his leave for an extra year when no position was open for him. The board didn't want to let a teacher go in order to take Glynn back. Glynn agreed to stay abroad for one more year until a position opened up in the school system. Board member Sulane Hamilton agreed with Wieland, saying that the board had a moral obligation, if not a contractual obligation, to give the benefit to Glynn. Board member Larry Levensgood took the opposite position, saying that the board would be remiss if they took $3,500 away from the school and the students to pay for Glynn's retirement benefits.

The board turned down Glynn's request in a four to three vote, with Joan Buday, Larry Levensgood, Ben Cunningham, and Stephen Czerkes voting against the action.

In other business, the board voted to hire Joe Powers as the girl's junior varsity softball coach.

All three school building administrators, with Carol Elliott speaking for the elementary school, gave an update on their progress toward quality schools in Charlevoix. The review included updating curriculum to meet the state guidelines and building self-esteem for all students. Middle School Principal Dennis VanGuilder said the middle school has adopted a no cut policy for all middle school sports. VanGuilder said this policy allows students to grow into a sport and not feel badly about being cut at an early age.

Drug conviction brings 10 to 40 year sentence

Saying a sentence was needed that says "don't bring your drugs to Charlevoix County," Charlevoix Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas sentenced Diane Psihopidas to 10 to 40 years in prison.

Psihopidas, 46, of Charlevoix was sentenced Feb. 24. Earlier in February, a jury found her guilty of four charges involving delivery and possessing with intent to deliver marijuana and crack cocaine. Psihopidas was arrested in November of 1994 by Straits Area Narcotic Enforcement (SANE) and Charlevoix City Police officers after a police informant purchased drugs from her at her Charlevoix apartment. Law enforcement officers found 13 eighth-ounce bags of marijuana in a laundry basket and another bag of marijuana on Psihopidas. They also found some small envelopes of crack cocaine in the apartment.

The state guidelines for sentencing recommended a sentence of 60 to 160 months (i.e. five years to 13 years, four months). However, since Psihopidas is a repeat offender those guidelines are not binding and a judge may at his discretion give an enhanced sentence.

Maria Barton, who works with SANE and was the lead prosecutor in the case, argued for a minimum sentence of 15 years. Barton cited Psihopidas' past record which includes three felony convictions and noted that at the time of her arrest for these charges, she was on probation.

"This court needs to grab this defendant's attention," Barton said. She said she doesn't see any chance for rehabilitation, but by sending Psihopidas to prison, at least the court could keep her off the streets and keep her from selling drugs. She said a lengthy sentence would also send a strong message to other people in the community.

Psihopidas' attorney Mark Muniak said the defendant continues to maintain that even though drugs were found in her apartment, she is not a cocaine seller or dealer. Psihopidas submitted a letter to the judge prior to sentencing, but made no statement in court at the time of sentencing.

Prior to issuing his sentence, Pajtas said he received many letters re-

Road commissioner removed

By Laurie Lounsbury

Two completely different tales were told during a hearing to decide if road commissioner Robert Herrmann should be removed from his position. In the end, after four hours of testimony, Charlevoix County Commissioners decided there was more truth in the testimony of Lester McGeorge, a road employee, than in testimony presented in Herrmann's defense.

By a 4-1 vote, commissioners removed Herrmann from his position on the road commission board. Commissioner Phil Johnson cast the only dissenting vote, saying, "We have one person's word against another. I don't think that's enough to convict someone."

About sixty people sat through the Feb. 22 meeting which lasted until nearly midnight. County commissioners had charged Herrmann with misconduct, for receiving benefits above and beyond the entitlement of a road commissioner. Herrmann allegedly had a culvert installed at his son's property on Dietz Road by a county road employee, using a county road grader.

Herrmann's attorney Joseph Fisher of Elk Rapids began the hearing with three requests. He requested that chairman Don Smith disqualify himself from the hearing. Fisher said Smith had acted as an investigator against Herrmann, and therefore couldn't be objective. Smith refused to disqualify himself. Fisher asked that the hearing be postponed until a date when commissioner Jim Behling could be present. Behling is the liaison between the road commission and the county board. He is also a supporter of Herrmann's. Behling was unable to attend the Feb. 22 hearing. Smith denied that request, saying, "Jim Behling never asked for an adjournment. I want to get on with this, get it over with." The third request included a complaint against having county prosecutor Richard May representing the county board.

Testimony in the hearing presented two different stories about a culvert being installed at Robert Herrmann Jr.'s new home. Road commission employee McGeorge testified that he was told by road commission manager Larry Hamlin to dig a ditch and install the culvert at Herrmann's property. McGeorge produced documents supporting testimony. He showed the Miss Digg report that he filed for the Herrmann culvert, and his time sheet which showed that he had the county grader on Dietz Road on the day he reportedly installed the culvert. McGeorge claimed he dug a ditch, installed the culvert, and backfilled the ditch on April 30, 1993, at the request of Hamlin. When he finished the job, McGeorge said he reported back to Hamlin that he had installed the culvert. According to McGeorge, Hamlin said, "Good."

The Herrmann family presented quite a different scenario. Herrmann's sons Robert Jr. and Rich testified that they worked with their dad to install the culvert. Herrmann testified that a small slit ditch was cut by McGeorge to mark the spot for the culvert. Herrmann claimed that at an earlier date, he was unsure of where to put the culvert, so Hamlin and McGeorge visited the site to offer help in deciding where to dig the ditch. McGeorge allegedly offered to cut a slit ditch to mark the spot next time he was in the area with the grader. Hamlin said marking the spot with a grader was something the county would do for private citizens. Smith asked him how many times the road commission had cut slit ditches on private property in the past, and Hamlin said, "Never. No one else has ever asked me."

The Herrmanns maintained that they dug the ditch themselves, installed the culvert, and backfilled the ditch themselves. Rich Herrmann became confused about whether or not the culvert was new or used. Herrmann reminded his son that the culvert used in that situation was a new one. Apparently the Herrmanns installed a used culvert one year later at their sister's home.

When testimony was finished, Herrmann's attorney, Fisher, accused McGeorge of lying because of a hidden agenda. "Lester McGeorge has embellished considerably tonight in his testimony...He is lying because he wants to get rid of Hamlin," Fisher said.

Commissioner Richie Gillespie said, "There are too many coincidences on two different culverts installed at two similar locations within a year. I have no doubt that the Herrmanns installed a culvert, but it wasn't this culvert."

Smith gave his summary after the testimony. "We know Lester called Miss Digg. We know Lester scribed the ditch. And we know the road commission was involved in a big way with this culvert, which doesn't happen for a private citizen," Smith said.

Before commissioners took a vote, May reminded them that in a civil hearing, all the commissioners needed was a preponderance of evidence to remove Herrmann from his position.

Herrmann said after the meeting that he probably won't appeal the decision. "I wanted this hearing because I wanted people to know the commissioner's feelings," he said.

garding the case, most of which were not appropriate for him to consider in sentencing. He said there were some letters he could consider and read from two of them. The two letters painted starkly contrasting pictures of Psihpidas.

The first letter was from a friend of Psihpidas who is a nurse and was present at the birth of Psihpidas' daughter. In the letter, the friend said Psihpidas is "a weak person, not a wicked person." The friend said Psihpidas is easily influenced by those around her, but in the past has studied the Bible and enjoyed being with her children. According to the friend, Psihpidas' greatest regrets in the case are that she will not be around for her aging parents and her children.

The second letter said Psihpidas has shown contempt for the court and the entire community. The writer said in the letter, "A lot of people on both sides of the law are watching to see what will happen to the person who helped introduce crack to our community."

Following the sentence, Psihpidas wept and hugged her father, prior to being led from the courtroom to be taken back to jail.

Stay healthy during the winter

District Health Department No. 3 is stressing the importance of practicing good health habits. During the school months, viral diseases such as influenza, influenza like illnesses, measles, and chicken pox; and bacterial diseases such as streptococcal sore throat increase in frequency. Many of the diseases are spread by nose and throat secretions. In addition, individuals with an intestinal or diarrheal illness can spread illness to others.

Good health habits are important in preventing the spread of disease. They are common sense things taught to us as children and include: washing your hands before you eat; washing your hands after you use the bathroom; washing your hands before you prepare food for others; not sharing common personal items such as eating utensils, glasses, combs, towels, and food; keeping your fingernails clean and trimmed; not biting your fingernails; covering your mouth when you cough or sneeze; staying home when you are sick; avoiding others who are ill; and keeping small children from putting objects in their mouths.

City Police make arrest in armed robbery of 90-year-old

Matt Skippergosh, 17, of Charlevoix has been arrested by city police and charged with armed robbery and home invasion. Skippergosh is charged with entering the home of a 90-year-old Charlevoix man at about 11 p.m., Feb. 13 and holding a knife to the man's throat and demanding money. The man gave up his hillfold which contained about $6.

The assailant wore a mask at the time of the robbery. Asked what led police to Skippergosh, Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson said it was "kind of just nuts and bolts police work." He said police compiled a list of possible suspects and spent a lot of time talking to people and investigating.

Halverson said police have recovered some of the stolen property and some clothes which the suspect apparently tried to burn. He said the Michigan State Police dive team was scheduled to be in town Tuesday to look for the knife used in the robbery.

Halverson said police are continuing to investigate and he has ruled out the possibility of additional arrests in the case.

OPINIONS

Editorial

Purchasing question can be easily resolved

At the most recent Charlevoix City Council meeting, council members debated whether or not to amend the city's purchasing policy. Currently city department heads are allowed to spend up to $10,000 per item without formal council approval. Some council members, particularly Gabe Campbell and Butch Russell from the second ward, feel that figure is too high. They suggest reducing it, perhaps to $5,000.

During debate at the Feb. 20 council meeting, a number of points were raised. Among them:

-Department heads can't just go out and buy something on a whim. If they need an item, they must get price quotes from several sources.

-The city has a good auditing system to keep track of purchases. Although purchases of items costing less than $10,000 don't come before the council for approval, they are reviewed by city treasurer Rick Brandt and in some instances by city manager Mike Wiesner. The city also has an annual audit done by a CPA.

-There aren't that many purchases made in the $5,000 to $10,000 range. In the past year, there were 24. Of those, 17 were for electrical department equipment and supplies.

During discussion, mayor Josh Barnes said he reviewed the 24 items listed and concluded that if council approval had been required there would have been more council activity, but the city probably wouldn't have even saved $100.

Russell said he doesn't mind leaving the spending ceiling at $10,000 for electrical plant purchases, but he is concerned about letting out engineering contracts without bids or council approval. Wiesner said that as he recalls, the question had happened three times in the past year. In those cases, the engineering firm chosen was familiar with the project through prior work on the project or related projects.

Council members questioning the process for awarding engineering contracts for city projects is not new. Nor, is the answer they receive. On more than one occasion, Wiesner has cited an engineering firm's familiarity with a project and the city as a major reason for giving them the contract. Using that rationale in awarding contracts has both good and bad points. On the one hand, using a firm familiar with a project saves money by cutting down on the need to reinvent the wheel. On the other hand, if you make a habit of that, once a firm gets a foot in the door, they can lose incentive to control costs by realizing once they've got their foot in the door, you're probably not going to change firms.

Aside from engineering contracts, about the only time the discretionary spending cap has been questioned was two or three years back when Wiesner hired a consulting firm to study the fire and police departments and make a recommendation as to whether they should be combined into a public safety department. There again, the question involved the purchase of professional services rather than supplies and equipment.

The only conclusions that you can draw from discussion thus far is that there doesn't seem to be a problem with the way the city purchases supplies and equipment, although some council members have some reservations and would like to see the council have more control over the city's contracting for professional services.

That being the case, and given that professional services account for only a few of the handful of purchases between $5,000 and $10,000, it would seem there is a suitable compromise. The council should leave the discretionary spending limit for supplies and equipment at $10,000 and reduce the discretionary spending limit for professional services to $5,000 or whatever other figure council members are comfortable with.

Letters to the editor

Cover the good and the bad

Editor,

I read with interest the letter in the Feb. 15 issue from Jo Anne Beemon. Ms. Beemon is concerned over articles in the local papers which have been too detailed, thus subjecting her and her 9 year old son to too much of the unpleasant side of life. She suggested the Courier not carry such stories, or edit them to avoid offending people.

I have two concerns: the first is the obvious attempt to censor the stories printed by the paper. Any time some well meaning person wants to restrict what somebody can say or print, that is censorship. Have you considered the paper, rather than sensationalizing, is merely trying to print the truth?

My second concern is the rather naive notion a 9 year old can be

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

You may wonder why the National Register of Historic Places has just listed the RED FOX INN on the Boyne City Road as worthy of preservation.

There are many good reasons. For one, Ernest Hemingway was a familiar face in the kitchen of the popular restaurant. Legend has it that the owner Volllie Fox taught young Hemingway how to fish, and when Hemingway returned to Horton Bay in 1919 after being wounded in Italy, he gave a World War I helmet to Volllie Fox's nine year old son, Raymond. Volllie's sister-in-law wrote in her diary in May, "Saw Ernest (sic) Hemingway who was severely wounded in Italy. Has 237 wounds. One leg stiff, one kneecap gone, but looks just fine."

Long before the RED FOX INN became a favorite of Charlevoix's fashionable summer crowd, the building served as a boarding house for lumbermen and transient guests. It was built in 1878 and still has the wavy, irregular glass double hung windows.

The idea of opening a restaurant in 1919, according to historian William Ohle, resulted from a successful dinner which the Foxes put on at the Inn for wealthy summer visitors from St. Louis, the Alvin Goldmans. Mrs. Goldman is credited with giving Mrs. Fox the recipe for tomato pudding, which helped to make the restaurant famous. Years later, Mrs. Goldman shared this recipe with me and you will find it in my book, "All About Parties." Fried chicken, freshly picked corn on the cob, dumplings, cheese rolls, and other 'fixings', such as relishes, pickles and strawberry jam accounted for families making annual pilgrimages to this remote white-painted, clapboard building.

The first floor of the Inn still has a distinguished-looking forty-five foot porch where guests could have a cocktail before dinner — if they brought their own liquor. There were three small dining rooms, and in the back were several summer kitchens — a salad room, a main kitchen, a dishwashing room, the dumpling room, the pickle room and the chauffeurs' room. The latter was reserved exclusively for the drivers of the well-to-do resorts.

The first time I was taken to the Red Fox Inn by my father-in-law, Sam Gilbert, a cigar manufacturer, I recall that he brought a box of R.G. Dunn cigars to Volllie Fox. In exchange and according to tradition, Volllie gave Sam some freshly caught brook trout. We celebrated many birthdays and anniversaries during the summer months at this charming little restaurant. One must remember, too, that in those early days, there was no other dining competition, except perhaps the gambling casino, Koch's. Most summer people frequently entertained at home and borrowed each other's staff for large occasions.

In 1955, Mrs. Fox sold the Inn to her daughter, Marian Hartwell, who ran the restaurant very ably until the '70s. Since then, her son James, operates the property as a bed and breakfast inn during the warm-weather months. You will notice little change in the appearance either inside or out in recent years of either the Inn or the town of Horton's Bay. Nestled in a grove of pine, the interior of the Inn is filled with the original furniture, mirrors and pictures from those long ago days described by Hemingway in his first book published in 1923, "Three Stories and Ten Poems." "Horton's Bay, the town was only five houses on the main road between Boyne City and Charlevoix. There was a general store and a post office with a high false front and maybe a wagon hitched out in front, Smith's house, Stroud's

Book shop hosts reading hour

Bridge Street Book Shop, in Charlevoix, is pleased to announce "Bridge Street Story Time" - a read-aloud story hour for kids, by kids, on Sunday afternoons from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. at the Book Shop.

Fifty-five sixth grade students from Charlevoix Middle School have volunteered to read to children during Story Time. The idea was born when 104 sixth grade students visited Bridge Street Book Shop on a Reading Class field trip in January. "There are children out there who don't enjoy reading, but I haven't met a child yet who doesn't love to be read to," explained Dianne Foster, owner of Bridge Street Book Shop.

As an incentive to participate as a reader, each sixth grade student receives a Book Report credit in Mr. Hal Evans' Reading Class and a gift certificate from the Book Shop. The students select their favorite story to read-aloud and are encouraged to be creative and expressive in their story-telling. Several stories are read by different students during the hour and a light snack is provided. On February 12 the children enjoyed munching on apples while Emily Chulik read "Ten Apples on Top" by Dr. Seuss. Other readers included Matt Smith, Adam Kately and Melissa Hudson. Third grader Denise Barta even got into the act reading "The Little Engine That Could."

There is no cost or pre-registration and all children are welcome to attend. Story Time will continue every Sunday from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. through May 21. Children are encouraged to arrive early for the best seat in the Book Shop! Bridge Street Book Shop is located across from the Chamber of Commerce in downtown Charlevoix. protected from the seamy side of life by restricting what he reads at home. I'm sorry, Mrs. Beemoh, but your son has heard those words, as well as details of those crimes, from his friends at school, people on the street, or the television at a friend's house. If you are concerned over your son's reaction then TALK TO HIM. You might be surprised to find he shares your values, and would appreciate you taking the time to discuss these issues with him.

As a long time reader of the Courier, I have not seen a reduction in the 'happy' stories in the paper. I am pleased to see a better balance, since it seemed in the past the paper ignored some of the unhappy occurrences in town. Not every reader will want to see every article, but then the average reader can do what I do and simply not read articles which do not interest them.

Sincerely,
David M. Bowman

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

I was on the road coming back from Grand Rapids desperately searching for something intelligent on the radio to help the miles click by a little faster. Not familiar with where my favorite FM music was down there, I switched to the vast wasteland that AM radio is regrettably turning into. I found an interview going on with a man who talked about his book on "The Paganization of America."

Paganization? What happened to "one nation under God" in the pledge and "in God we trust" on the money in my pocket? As I listened, he spoke of how the faith and values of our nation have been subtly undermined almost without our knowledge. My first impressions were that this guy wouldn't possibly know what he was talking about and then I thought a little more about what he said.

We are blessed with some very precious teachers. They care about the Lord and doing more than teaching, they set before our children a godly example of what right living ought to be. But their hands have been tied in a lot of ways to where it is almost impossible for them to give specific insight or advice on where real hope is found.

It is official. One out of every two newweds will find themselves in divorce court quicker than they ever imagined. Raised in an era where sharing on faith, hope, and love has been severely restricted and where the definition of their own roles as husband and wife have become blurred, fewer couples really take the time to get beyond the magic of courtship to come to know each other as real people.

Some of you are old enough to remember when houses of worship were the centers of community life. Drive down any street in town at night and count the glow of the television sets in the windows you pass by. Am I going to get fanatical and tell you that television is to blame? No, not at all. But have you really listened to the spiritual diet you are being fed that passes under the guise of entertainment? God gets blasted and belittled. Prayer becomes farcical. As for a system of values and beliefs, what values do you see? What beliefs are practiced? You don't need me to explain it. You make your own decision.

If (and note I did say if) indeed America is being paganized, then those who know the Lord and realize what principles this nation was founded on need to get more proactive rather than reactive. Instead of responding to the challenges we see to what we hold dear, we need to be in the forefront sharing what we hold dear. I suspect there is a silent majority of caring, concerned folks out there. If enough of us get unsettled by the signs that we are seeing, then maybe we'll remember what Jesus said about being the salt of the earth and the leaven in the bread. We can't afford to sit on the sidelines. We've got to get involved.

Grant to help fund medical studies

An aspiring physician from Charlevoix County will soon get help with the high cost of medical school through a special scholarship fund established through the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

The Julius Gilbert Memorial Scholarship will award its first medical school scholarship in the amount of $500 this spring. The scholarship fund began several years ago to honor Julius Gilbert, a community activist and trustee of the Charlevoix Area Hospital. With current assets of nearly $10,000, the fund was transferred from the care of the hospital to management under the Community Foundation late last year.

Applicants must be from Charlevoix County and have completed their undergraduate degree. The future doctors will be rated on their academic performance, student service, personal interests, and letters of reference. A committee, representing the Charlevoix Area Hospital will evaluate applications and recommend a candidate to the Community Foundation for final approval.

Deadline for applications is May 1, 1995, and a decision will be announced by June 1, 1995. Those who are interested should contact Diane Kidder at the Charlevoix Area Hospital, 616/547-4024, or Robert Tambellini at the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, 616/536-2440.

The Julius Gilbert Fund joins several other designated endowments and scholarship funds held by the Community Foundation. The Foundation manages and invests various types of charitable funds on behalf of donors. Only income earned on the funds is used to support scholarships and other worthy programs — so the endowments live in perpetuity, continuing to give back to the community for many years to come. Those who wish to learn more about the Community Foundation, or who would like to make a contribution to the Gilbert Fund, should call the Foundation or write, c/o PO Box 718, East Jordan, Michigan 49727.

Norm Larson is the new investment representative at Edward D. Jones in the lower level of the Trademark Clothier building on Bridge Street.

Larson is new investment agent

By L. Scott Swanson

Norm Larson is the new Edward D. Jones investment representative in Charlevoix. Larson officially took over the business, which is located in the lower level of the Trademark Clothier building on Bridge Street, Jan. 3.

Larson and his wife live on Torch Lake. He had been planning to open an Edward D. Jones office in Bellaire when an opening came up in the Charlevoix office. In his first few weeks on the job, Larson has been out knocking on doors and getting acquainted with people. One of the things Edward D. Jones is known for is having investment people who go out and meet people face to face. Larson says that in his initial contacts he attempts to let people know what Edward D. Jones has to offer. He says Edward D. Jones is a national investment service that operates through a small local business. The company's motto is "Bringing Wall Street to Main Street."

From his office in Charlevoix, Larson is able to offer investors stocks, bonds and a wide variety of other investment instruments. The office has a satellite hook-up that allows a decision to be made in Charlevoix and the transaction to be completed in New York within a matter of seconds.

Larson has a plentiful supply of investment information to help investors with their decisions. That information includes lists of recommended stocks, videotapes about certain mutual funds and stock and mutual fund reports. Larson said he also hopes to offer some investment classes and seminars in the near future.

"We try to take the mystery out of investing," Larson said of Edward D. Jones. He added that many people have the misconception that only people with a lot of money do investments. He said that in reality many Edward D. Jones customers are small investors saving for retirement or are retired people.

Larson has an MBA degree from the University of Michigan. Prior to joining Edward D. Jones, he worked as a salesman and owned an executive search company in southeastern Michigan. He and his wife moved to this area from Rochester, Michigan.

Rayders fall to Harbor Springs

Normally, there's something to be said for consistency, but when you're a basketball team and consistency means you were outscored not just in a couple of quarters, but in all four...well, consistency isn't something to be too happy about.

Reinhart qualifies for state

Bruce Reinhart was the lone Charlevoix wrestler to qualify for the State Wrestling Meet March 10 at Battle Creek. Reinhart, a junior, went 2-2 in the heavyweight division at the Class C Regional Meet this past Saturday at Howard City.

Reinhart opened the day by pinning a Kelloggsville wrestler in 1:15. He then lost to a Leroy-Pine River Wrestler on a pin in 1:23. He then won a 6-4 decision over a Lakeview wrestler before losing to the same Kelloggsville wrestler on a pin in 54 seconds.

Reinhart will take a 27-13 record to the state finals.

Three other Rayder wrestlers participated in the regional meet.

Jason Metiva, a senior wrestler at 151 pounds, began the day with an 18-17 decision over an Allendale wrestler. He lost his second match on a pin in 1:30 to a Whittemore-Prentiss wrestler. He lost his third match on a 10-9 decision to a Benzie Central wrestler.

Metiva finished the year with a 24-8 record.

Ron Haggard entered the tournament unbeaten at 160 pounds. He lost his first match 8-7; beat his second opponent 5-1, then lost in the third match on a pin in 5:38 after leading the match 4-2 with less than a minute remaining.

Haggard finished the season at 33-5.

Dan Harris, a junior wrestling at 215 pounds, lost his first match to the eventual champion on a pin in 1:38. He then won on a pin in 3:40 and lost his third match 9-7. Harris finished the season at 15-14.

team was outscored in all four quarters and ended up losing 68-54 at Harbor Springs Friday night.

The Rayders fell behind 17-10 after the first quarter, 35-26 at the half and 49-37 entering the fourth quarter.

The win was Harbor Springs' seventh straight. The loss dropped Charlevoix's league record to 5-7 and season record to 8-11.

ders. Trevor Williams had 11 points and five rebounds. Pop had seven rebounds. George McClellan had six steals and Duhart had four assists.

Scholarship established in memory of Becky Bos

A new scholarship fund has been established with the Charlevoix County Community Foundation. The Becky Bos Memorial Scholarship Fund, named for a talented, well-liked East Jordan High School student who died in 1992, will help other East Jordan graduates attend college.

Bos, a 1991 graduate of the school, was killed in an auto accident. Her parents, Mike and Karen Bos of East Jordan, established the scholarship as a lasting tribute to their daughter and a way to help other young people achieve their educational goals.

Each year, a $750 Becky Bos Scholarship will be awarded to a deserving student. The selection is to be based on academic performance, as well as financial need. Scholarship recipients may use their award to attend the college or university of their choice.

Students who are interested in learning more about the scholarship should inquire at the East Jordan High School counselor's office. Applications are available, and the deadline for applying is May 1, 1995. Those who would like to help the Becky Bos Memorial Scholarship Fund grow are invited to make a contribution. Donations are fully tax-deductible and also qualify for a Michigan income tax credit.

Concert to benefit Jordan River

The River Tour Band of Traverse City, a folk and blues group, will be performing a benefit concert entitled "Sights and Sounds of the Jordan: A River Celebration" on Sunday, March 12 for the Friends of the Jordan River Watershed, Inc. (FOJ). The event kicks off at noon at the Jordan Valley Express American Music Center in East Jordan.

From noon to 1:30, audience members will have an opportunity to view wildlife and environmental art and photography exhibits displayed by local talent. Music begins at 1:30 p.m. The concert will feature Jim Crockett, Mary Anne Rivers, and Pat Niemisto performing a variety of river and environmental folk-style music. A slide show featuring many shots of the Jordan River Watershed and other nature scenes will be interwoven with the music. Narration will accompany the slides between music sets.

The program will also serve as a forum to propose the protection and preservation of the lower Jordan, including Deer Creek, through the DNR's Natural Rivers program. Currently, the Jordan River is designated as a "wild and scenic river" from the headwaters to Rogers Bridge. The original designation did not include the portion of the river from Rogers Bridge to its mouth at Lake Charlevoix.

Admission to the event is $6 for adults 18 and over. Students and seniors 60 and over get in for $3. Children five and under will be admitted free.

All proceeds will go toward the programs and projects of FOJ, whose mission is to protect the water quality and preserve the natural character of the Jordan River.

Ask the Charlevoix Historical Society and members of the Depot Restoration Committee what they need the most, and they are prompt to say, "We need information!"

"What did the inside of the depot look like? We know the entrance from the West side has been changed, but we have no way of knowing what the interior was like, or the furniture," says Van Smith, Vice-President of the Charlevoix Historical Society.

Van Smith and committee co-chairmen John Gaskin and Bill Price are asking residents of Charlevoix County and surrounding areas to come to the aid of the Depot restoration project with information or photos.

Stories they may have heard family members share, any information regarding the interior of the Charlevoix train depot.

"We're in the dark on what we're trying to do. We need guidance," says Price talking about plans for the restoration of the depot. Currently the committee is working to bring the depot structure "up to snuff," says Price, but the committee members need help in order to refurbish the depot to original design.

Some grant funds have been received and the committee is working to attract other funds through public and private donations, but the committee is hoping that area residents who may have some old photos of the interior of the Charlevoix depot will offer to donate or loan those photos so the committee will have guidance in their restoration project.

"What did the station master's office look like? And baggage room," says Smith. "We have nothing to guide us. The public is our only hope." The structural renovations are scheduled to start as soon as the weather allows, but work on interior restoration needs the guidance that old photos can provide.

"We're just kind of on bended knee," says Price. "Anyone with memories of the depot, anyone young enough to remember how things were at the depot we would really appreciate hearing from." Society members ask that anyone with information or photos of the interior contact the Charlevoix Historical Society at 547-0373. "If we could just come up with some photos we could have prints made and return the originals to the owner," says Smith. "The city of Charlevoix is very supportive. They will take care of the depot beach, but we need information from the public."

Committee members said the bids are in on the structure work and they are currently reviewing those. Anyone wanting to write the society regarding plans for the depot restoration or with offers of photo loans or donations of photos or other items can do so by writing to: Depot Restoration Committee, Charlevoix Historical Society, Harsha House Museum, 103 State Street, Charlevoix, Michigan 49720.

School asks for $2.1 million

By L. Scott Swanson

Charlevoix school district voters will cast ballots on a two-year, three-mill (i.e. $2.1 million) proposal Tuesday, March 14. If the school receives the money, it will be used for technology and facility improvements. (Please see accompanying list.)

The state school finance reform proposal adopted last year capped school operational millage at six mills for homesteads and 18 mills for nonhomestead property. (See accompanying box for definitions of mills and homesteads.) As a transitional measure, the reform package also gave school districts three years during which, with voter approval, they could levy up to three additional mills for other purposes.

poses. The term commonly used for that millage is "enhancement millage."

Last year Charlevoix voters approved levying the maximum amount for operational millage, but turned down a request for two enhancement mills. With one year of the three-year enhancement transition period now past, the school may only levy enhancement millage for two years.

Although enhancement millage will no longer be an option for school districts after two years, Charlevoix voters are very likely to be asked for additional money for facility renovation and construction. From the fall of 1992 through July of 1994 a committee of school and community members with the assistance of architect met and formulated an overall plan for school facilities. This facility committee submitted its report in July of 1994. During the past summer, the school board has been busy with matters such as adapting to school finance reform, hiring a new high school principal and working on a school improvement program. Consequently, the facility committee report has yet to be formally presented at a board meeting.

Although the report has not been formally presented to the board, the items which the $2.1 million will be spent on are taken directly from the facility committee recommendations. The facility committee report deals with all of the anticipated school facility needs. It looks at every building the school owns from the high school to the administration building to the bus garage. The cornerstone of the facility committee report is a recommendation to construct a new middle school at an estimated cost of $6,068,500. Additional projects on the list bring the estimated total price tag to $15,687,730. If the project is funded completely through bonding, (i.e. borrowing through the sale of bonds) that adds another 18 percent and brings the estimated total price to more than $18 million.

All of the financial numbers in the facility report are tentative. Before all is said and done those numbers could end up being more or being less. It's kind of like the sticker price on a car. School district residents could decide to add or subtract options and the price will vary accordingly. That's a debate which the community and school board will be grappling with in the next few years. For the moment, the relevance of the facility committee report is that it serves as the source for developing the expenditure list for the three mill enhancement proposal.

Continuing the new car analogy, parallels can be drawn between the March 14 election and a decision as to how large a down-payment to make and the effect that down-payment will have on interest and overall costs. The architect who worked with the facility committee estimated that for every $1 of work funded through bonding, it costs an additional 18 cents for bonding fees (i.e. attorney and finance charges). If the projects are funded on a cash basis, every $1 paid goes for construction cost.

If the March 14 proposal passes and the proposed work is done on a cash basis, the estimated cost would be $2,145,800. That figure would reduce the $15,687,730 figure to $13,541,930.

If the same proposed work were to be done later, but funded through bonding, the estimated cost would be $2,532,044, or $386,244 more.

"It's more cost effective to do it now," says Dr. Roberta Jackson, Charlevoix Schools Superintendent.

Jackson and other school administrators and faculty members have spoken about the bond issue at several community meetings. She said two areas of the proposal which have generated the most questions are asbestos removal at the high school ($450,000) and what is to become of computers purchased with a previous technology millage.

Jackson said people are aware that asbestos doesn't have to be removed from a building, provided it is not disturbed. With that in mind, people are asking why the school doesn't just leave the asbestos, which is in the school ceilings, in place and install the necessary new wiring elsewhere.

According to Jackson there are two reasons for removing the asbestos. The first is that running the wiring through the ceiling is the best way to do it. If the wiring is installed in conduit outside of the ceiling, future modifications become a major headache. Placing the wiring beneath the floors is a problem due to space constraints and exposure to heat and moisture.

Jackson says that even if the asbestos is left in place, it will eventually have to be encapsulated at a cost of $200,000 to $300,000. Even if the asbestos is encapsulated, it's still there and aside from safety concerns, messes up any future projects involving the high school ceiling.

As for the computers which were purchased with earlier technology millage, Jackson said those are still usable and being used. The proposed millage would update those computers and purchase additional ones.

Currently the elementary school has one or two computers in each classroom and 16 computers in the computer lab. The school would like to have three or four computers in each elementary classroom. The middle school has one computer (which is essentially used only by the teacher) in each classroom and a computer lab. The school would like to have two computers in each middle school classroom. At the high school there are two computer labs which are constantly in use and some other computers scattered around in classrooms throughout the building. The school would like for students to have a computer accessible in every classroom.

Jackson said school finance reform has made budgeting for operational expenses a challenge. She said school administrators and board members are currently doing budget planning for five years out and at three years out see difficulty in making ends meet operationally on the program the school has in place. The March 14 millage would help get the facility part of the program on stable ground.

Voting will take place at the Charlevoix Elementary School on Division Street. Polls will open at 7 a.m. and close at 8 p.m.

...thrilling comeback brings Rayders volleyball title

Bryan said that during the time out the Harbor Springs gym was so loud that she had to scream so her players could hear her. "I just told them to focus on one point at a time," Bryan said.

Coming out of the time out the Rayders took their coaches advice and took it one point at a time. First Swenor served one ace. Then they gave her the ball back and she served another.

Bryan and the Rayder players on the bench had to hurry to get to the floor in order to beat a rush of Rayder fans. As Rayder j.v. coach Gregg Swanson later commented, "It was a mob scene."

The Charlevoix and Elk Rapids showdown is one which has been brewing all year. Charlevoix finished second to Elk Rapids in the conference and split matches in tournaments. Bryan said that coming into the tournament her players were well aware that winning the title was going to require beating Elk Rapids. Not only were they aware of it, they were anxious to do it.

But the road to the finals wasn't without peril. In the opening round Charlevoix faced an East Jordan team which although it didn't have a stellar record is much improved from previous years and is the type of team that can pull an upset if you look past them. That was particularly frightening since Charlevoix, despite a record of 27-7-5 on the season, has at times this year shown a disturbing tendency to lose focus occasionally and play down to the level of their competition. In the preliminary rounds of Saturday's district tournament that wasn't a problem. The Rayder team played like guided missiles. They locked on to targets and destroyed them.

In the first round the Rayders swept East Jordan 15-4, 15-0. In the second round Charlevoix faced a Harbor Springs team which, in their first round match, eliminated last year's district champions Suttons Bay. Would Harbor Springs prove to be a stumbling block for the Rayders? Nope! Another two-game sweep. The scores were 15-1, 15-5.

In the first game of the finals the Rayders tasted defeat for the first time on the day, losing to Elk Rapids 12-15. Apparently it was a taste that did not sit well because in the second game Charlevoix spat back with a 15-1 win.

Bryan said that in the final game, even when the Rayders were down 8-0 and 14-10, the players didn't give up. "They just didn't lose their confidence. They stayed focused," she said.

Bryan didn't single out any players for special recognition in tournament play. She said they all played well. One of the real strengths of this year's team is depth. On this year's Rayder team, Bryan doesn't have anybody who's just keeping warm. She's got legitimate athletes not only out on the floor, but in every seat on the bench.

When the Rayders travel to Clare this Saturday to play in the regional tournament, several of the Rayder players will be playing in a familiar gym. Just a few months ago Liz Grunch, Jill Dreyer, Liz Kelly, Swenor, Liz Blanchard and Christy Kacynski were in the Clare gym playing in the regional basketball finals.

The volleyball team will travel to Clare Saturday afternoon. Charlevoix will open regional play at 10 a.m. Saturday against Coleman. The winner of that match will play in the finals against the winner of the game between the Tawas Area District champion and the Lake City Area District champion. The winner of the regional title advances to the state quarter finals March 17 at Vicksburg.

Bryan is optimistic entering the regionals. Asked what she's told the team in preparing for regionals, she said, "I've told them I think we can do this."

School request is a step forward

It's not an easy decision, but the March 14 school millage proposal probably deserves support. The proposal seeks three mills (a mill being $1 for every $1,000 of a property's state-equalized value) for two years. Over a two-year period it would generate approximately $2.1 million which the school would spend on building improvements and technology.

The best thing that can be said about the proposal is that it allows the school to make some needed repairs and updates on a cash basis rather than through borrowing. Were the school to fund the repairs through borrowing, every dollar's worth of repairs would cost about $1.18 with the additional eighteen cents going toward legal and finance fees.

The $2.1 million in repairs is part of a larger overall package of school facility problems. That package, depending on what you include and exclude, carries an estimated price tag in excess of $10 million. (See story on page 1) Among the key facility questions the Charlevoix community must address is the need for a new middle school. The present facility is older than most community members. It's reaching a point where something needs to be done about that building. It's time for the community to get this issue out on the table and talk it over. One of the things which should be noted is that of the $2.1 million, not much will be going into middle school repairs. You can't really put much money into that building until the community decides what is ultimately to become of it.

It would be nice if school systems, recognizing the fact that buildings and other hard assets get old and eventually need to be replaced, set aside some type of sinking fund for replacements. But try to think of a school system that's ever done that and you'll think for a long time. Normally, they just wait until a crisis develops and then come to voters asking to borrow money to fix it. In this situation, the Charlevoix school system has at least had a committee look at the problem and tried to look down the road to future needs. The school system is also attempting to pay for some of those needs on a cash basis rather than through borrowing. The March 14 school proposal isn't a perfect way of doing business, but it's a step in the right direction.

Superintendent requests election support

Editor,

I urge you to support the Charlevoix Public Schools Enhancement Millage Election on March 14, 1995. Facts for you to consider are:

—This enhancement millage for Charlevoix Schools is allowed for two years only. All the dollars will remain in Charlevoix.

—After two years, in order to provide needed structural, electrical, mechanical repairs, or technology, a bond issue would be our only option. This would increase the cost.

—Our students need access to computers and other technology in order to prepare them for their future. Computer skills are essential for our future workers.

—The asbestos at the high school must be encapsulated or abated. The cost will only continue to increase if we do not do it now.

Our students need your support. Please vote yes on March 14, 1995. Roberta Ann Jackson
Superintendent of Schools

Chamber supports school proposal

Editor,

On March 14th the electors of the Charlevoix Public Schools will have an opportunity to cast their vote for or against the Enhancement Millage. The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce encourages every eligible voter to make your feelings known, for or against, this proposition. As we all consider and evaluate the worthiness of such things as the abatement of asbestos and electrical problems, replacement of a boiler and deteriorated pipes, and the repair of building walls and the structural arches of the gymnasium, it is important that we are fully aware of a less publicized, but very important part of this proposition.

This proposition includes a significant amount of funds designated for the purpose of improving the employment opportunities of the future adult in our community. These same funds will also serve to provide a more talented and capable labor pool for our local businesses, help to ensure that the young people in our school system today can become the community leaders that live here tomorrow. This same money will help to maintain a level of technology as important to our economy as it is to all other cities. No matter where you live today or what your employment aspirations are, being computer literate is mandatory. This is not going to change.

As we consider our vote on this proposal we must not forget what our vote means. A "no" vote will certainly send a signal that we are serious about property tax relief. A "no" vote will allow all of us to flex our political muscle. But we must be aware that a "no" vote will also ensure that our students will not benefit from the most critical upgrading of computer systems so desperately needed. Voting against this proposition guarantees our students that they will not be as qualified as graduating students from other school systems.

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce believes that we should lend our support to any effort to enhance the technological education of our students and, ultimately, their ability to be employed gainfully in our high-technology society. They need more and better computers in the school system to accomplish this, and this proposal can help make that happen.

The computers and technology that will be purchased with this millage are necessary. If the millage does not pass at this time, the cost of acquiring this technology will only increase and our young people will be less able to compete.

Ambassadors support school proposal

Editor,

The Charlevoix Schools Ambassadors urge all parents and community members who care about the quality of our children's education to vote their support for the technology enhancement millage on March 14.

Our Schools are requesting three mills, for two years only, (that's $150 per year for a home with an SEV of $50,000) to fund computer purchases and other items necessary to update and efficiently operate the teaching and learning systems initiated several years ago. The money will also fund other needed work, like the electrical system upgrades necessary to bring our schools up to current standards.

The tasks planned for implementation are not a random selection from someone's wishlist. They are the items of highest priority, drawn from the facilities study prepared by a team of community members and professional planners. A detailed list of the planned improvements is available in a brochure at the school's administrative offices.

The brochure is informative, but fails to mention these few important facts:

Many of the physical repairs will have to be implemented regardless of the millage outcome. Assuming we insist on keeping our schools open, the challenge is deciding the smartest way to pay for the repairs.

This is a local millage, meaning we get to keep and use every dollar within our own community. After next year, millage requests will have to be for the district, not Charlevoix only. When that happens, the Charlevoix community will pay more than it receives.

The funding, as it is proposed, is one-hundred percent efficient. There is no borrowing, no bonding, and no interest to pay. Every dollar that goes into the kitty gets spent at our schools. Smart.

Help to keep our students in the modern world. Vote in favor of the millage on March 14th.

Drug Free Schools needed

Editor,

The purpose of this letter is to inform our community that the house Appropriation Subcommittee recently signed a bill to terminate Drug Free Schools and Communities Funds and it is now on its way to the Senate.

In 1986 Drug Free Schools Act was born with the addition of Drug Free Schools and Communities Act in 1988. This Act requires school districts to provide drug education to our children, develop policies for both the student and employee, form an advisory council, student intervention programs (commonly referred to as Student Assistance Program); and parent and community programs which include parenting and drug free activities.

Traverse Bay Area-IsD fulfilled a contract with our local schools from 1988 - October 1994. In October Char/Em ISD formed a separate DFSC consortium pursuing compliance of federal laws mandated for school systems. This DFSC Consortium consists of 18 school districts both public and private. The Drug Free Schools and Communities Act seeks to educate all students K-12 every year and empower communities to take an active role in addressing alcohol and drug issues. I realize that we are only beginning, however the progress that we have made since Oct. 94 is monumental compared to previous years. If you would like the opportunity to continue the progress we need your voice immediately. You can take a stand in fighting for our children today and our future tomorrow by calling Congressman Bark Stupak (202)225-4735; Senator Spencer Abraham (202)224-4822 and Senator Carl Levin (202)224-6221. Make sure these people know that you are opposed to the elimination of the Drug Free Schools and Communities funds. If you would like additional information regarding Drug Free Schools and Communities you can call me at (616)547-1144.

Respectfully submitted,
Celia Partida Kelly,
DFSC Liaison Char/Em ISD

What's on sixth graders' minds

Editor's note: The following letters were written by sixth grade students as an assignment for middle school teacher Kathy Gowell's English class.

Parents praised

Editor,

I am a sixth grade student at Charlevoix Middle School. I think your coverage on the Girls' Youth Basketball League should tell more about the parents who have volunteered all these years to help coach. The reason you should tell about those parents are because they help teach girls about basketball and help them. I also think that there should be equal pictures of Elementary and Jr. High. I think that you should tell about the refs and about how they ref.

Thank you for helping me by writing what I said.

Yours truly,
Stacy Skippergosh

Wal-Mart would be ok

Editor,

I am writing about Wal-Mart. We need a Wal-Mart in Petoskey. If you want to go to Walmart you have to go to Gaylord. That's why we need one in Petoskey. They should build it into the Glens/Kmart complex. I think if they did build one in Petoskey, they would get a lot of business because the people would go to a closer store.

School board reverses decision and grants teacher benefits

By Laurie Lounsbury

Two weeks ago the Charlevoix School Board voted against buying two years of military retirement benefits for teacher Jim Glynn. Monday evening, the board turned around and voted almost unanimously to grant Glynn's wish.

Board member Ben Cunningham was the sole board member to stick to his original no vote. Board members Joan Buday, Steve Czerkes and Larry Levensgood reversed their original vote. Ardeth Wieland, Sulane Hamilton and Mary Lee Campbell voted to grant the request the first time around. Campbell was absent Monday evening while Wieland and Hamilton stuck to their original position.

The issue resurfaced when Buday asked for a motion to reconsider the original motion to purchase Glynn's retirement benefits. Buday said the board just received new information, which justified the reconsideration. However, no new information was discussed before a vote was taken.

The original issue surrounded Glynn's three year leave of absence during the 1990-1993 teacher contract period. The contract allowed teachers who served in the military for up to four years to receive retirement benefits for their time served. Glynn was out of the country at the time. Glynn claimed that he was not notified of the benefit, and when he returned home he had missed the application deadline for the benefit.

Two weeks ago, the board voted four to three against granting Glynn the benefit. Monday the board reversed that decision. The cost to the school district is about $3,500.

Cunningham said before the vote was taken, "I'm still not in agreement with this. During an unpaid leave of absence, we don't pay benefits. We don't pay for medical or hospital insurance."

After the meeting, Buday would not comment on the new information she received which prompted her to change her vote. Buday said all questions regarding the issue were to be directed to Superintendent Dr. Roberta Jackson. "I'm not at liberty to comment on this," Buday said.

Jackson reported that Glynn asked to meet with the board after his request was initially turned down. According to Jackson, Glynn met with Jackson, board president Czerkes, and Levensgood. Jackson said the new information allegedly gleaned from the meeting was that the 1991-1992 board asked Glynn to extend his two year leave of absence by another year since no teaching position was available at the time.

As reported in the Feb. 22 Courier, Wieland discussed that information at the Feb. 20 board meeting.

Jackson also said that she had gone through Glynn's entire file and prepared a fact sheet which covered old and new information. Jackson was unable to provide the fact sheet at the meeting. After several attempts made the following morning, the Courier was still unable to obtain any fact sheet from Jackson.

Czerkes said the board had too many unanswered questions about the issue at the Feb. 20 meeting. However, no board member at that meeting asked to have the issue tabled for further consideration. According to Czerkes, one of the unanswered questions was whose responsibility it is to notify a teacher on an unpaid leave of absence about items in the union contract. At the Feb. 20 meeting and at earlier finance committee meetings that issue was discussed.

At the Feb. 20 board meeting Levensgood and Cunningham indicated it was the union's responsibility to notify union members of contract specifications. At the Feb. 20 meeting, Levensgood said, "We're taking $3,500 away from the community and the students (if the benefits were bought for Glynn) and I think we're remiss if we do that."

In other business, the board accepted the resignations of Mary Ann and Vincent Chew, both of whom have taught in the Charlevoix schools for 29 years. They also accepted the resignations of Edwin Crook, a 31 year teacher in Charlevoix, and Nelson Green. All of the teachers will retire at the end of the 1995 school year.

Big Rock submits decommissioning plan

By Laurie Lounsbury

Big Rock Power Plant is ready to shut down the nuclear reactor in the year 2000. The Big Rock decommissioning plan was submitted to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the Public Service Commission last week, which was right on schedule. But Big Rock's preparedness is being thwarted by the Federal Department of Energy's slow reaction to the decommissioning of nuclear plants. "There is a tremendous amount of heat on congress to fix this problem," said plant manager Patrick Donnelly. He was referring to the need for a permanent, safe storage site for high level nuclear waste.

Big Rock will have to store high level, radioactive waste on site until the DOE develops a permanent site for storage of high level waste. Local decommissioning planners say that high level waste will probably be stored at Big Rock until the year 2026. Low level waste may still be on site until 2029.

The high level waste includes the spent fuel rods used to generate power in the nuclear reactor. The rods will rest in the spent fuel pool for at least five years. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission requires that spent fuel rods have at least a five year period of decay in the spent fuel pool, where they lose some of their heat. If a safe, transportable canister is available after the five year cooling off period, the rods will be transferred to the transportable canisters and sit on site until a federal repository is ready to accept nuclear waste.

Low level waste includes the reactor itself and all the hardware and plumbing used in the reactor. The reactor will sit as it is until a low level waste facility is developed in the state of Michigan. It is the state's responsibility to find a permanent repository for low level waste.

Jim Rang, project manager of the decommissioning plan, reported that Consumers Power Company will look into the possibility of converting Big Rock to a natural gas generated power plant. The company must identify the electrical needs in the area and submit a report to the Public Service Commission. If a need is identified, then electric utility companies will bid for the opportunity to build a power plant. Big Rock would have an advantage in the bidding process because they already have property in the area. Some of the machinery used in the nuclear power plant could be used in a natural gas plant, which would be another cost savings.

Big Rock expects an answer from the Public Service Commission by the end of the year. Then they will proceed to the bidding process for a natural gas power plant.

If a natural gas power plant isn't built to replace the nuclear plant, over half of Big Rock's 220 employees will be out of work when the reactor shuts down. When the high level waste is moved from wet storage to dry canister storage, another 60 employees will be out of work. Within five years of reactor shutdown, the Big Rock staff will be reduced to about 25 employees, including the security staff.

A group of Kuk Sool Won Charlevoix members will travel to Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario April 8 for the 25th Anniversary Tournament under the direction of Master Rudy Timmerman. Competitors from all over the world will participate in the tournament which will be followed by a Masters demonstration.

This past week, several Kuk Sool Won members passed tests for advanced belts. Bob Struthers and Tom Butcher each received their red belts. In Kuk Sool Won, a red belt is two-thirds of the way toward the rank of black belt. Struthers also was presented a traditional Kuk Sool Won training sword as a going away present from the local club and his employer, Wolohan Lumber. Struthers is moving to Sault Ste. Marie to work at the Wolohan store there and so that his wife may attend Lake Superior State University.

Three Charlevoix club members will be testing for their black belts later this year. They are: Debbie Janisse, Bob Borths and Ryan Borths.

Bob Stuthers (left) is moving from Charlevoix to Sault Ste. Marie. The Kuk Sool Won Club and his employer, Wolohan Lumber, presented him a traditional sword to take with him.

Millage proposal rejected

Charlevoix school district voters said no in a big way to a school request for two mills for two years to fund facility repairs and technology purchases. Tuesday, voters rejected the proposal 871 to 584.

Had the vote passed, the additional property taxes would have generated revenue of approximately $2.1 million over two years. The school was going to use the money to purchase additional computers and network them as well as install wiring to support the computers. The money also would have been used to remove asbestos in the high school and make some structural and plumbing repairs.

Of 6,443 registered school district voters, 1,462 cast ballots Tuesday. There were seven spoiled ballots.

City begins review of $12.1 million budget

By L. Scott Swanson

Charlevoix's proposed city budget for the coming fiscal year is up by more than three million dollars from the current fiscal year. The primary reason for the increase is the Downtown Development Authority's (DDA) Bridge Park project.

The city's proposed budget for fiscal year 1995-96 is approximately $12.1 million. That is up from $8.7 million in 1994-95. The city's fiscal year begins April 1.

The Bridge Park project will add more than $3 million to DDA expenditures and will to a lesser degree increase expenditures in other budget areas. A small portion of those expenditures will be offset by revenues derived from investing the bond revenues until they are needed.

City council members spent approximately two hours reviewing the 144-page proposed budget Monday evening with city manager Mike Wiesner, city treasurer Rick Brandt and several city department heads.

The budget proposes a 3.2 percent increase in general fund expenditures, but a .28 overall millage reduction. Debt retirement millage will decrease from 1.33 mills to 1.05 mills due to lower payments on old bonds. Operational millage will remain at 8.5 mills while infrastructure millage will remain at 3.836 mills if the budget is adopted as proposed.

The city's operational tax base has increased from $115,705,882 in the current fiscal year to $119,764,705 in the coming fiscal year.

The proposed budget calls for a 12.5 percent increase in city water rates. In recent years the water fund's revenues have fallen behind expenditures.

Electric rates are also likely to increase. However, city staff members did not have those figures available Monday evening and they will be discussed at a later date.

Rates at city docks will also increase by five percent as allowed by the state waterways commission.

The budget proposes to raise rates charged to accident victims requiring the Jaws of Life for extrication from $200 to $450 for city residents and from $400 to $700 for nonresidents.

Pay increases of 3.5 percent for all city employees other than police and fire union members are proposed. The city is currently in negotiations regarding wage increases for city police and fire union members.

Following Monday's budget discussion, second ward council member Gabe Campbell suggested either cutting the city fire department from four employees to three or finding a way to allocate some of the manpower from the fire department to the street department during busy times of the year.

Campbell said that for many years the city fire department functioned with three employees. He said that in recent years the city no longer provides fire protection to Hayes Township. Consequently, the number of fire runs has decreased, but fire department manpower has increased.

Wiesner said that in the past the city had people available to fill in on a part-time basis when one of the fulltime firemen was on vacation, but now they do not. Consequently, covering vacations now means paying overtime wages. He said that depending on the fringe benefit figures you use savings from reducing the fire department from four to three fulltime firemen would probably be from $500 to $7,000 per year.

Third ward council member Bruce Reid said he can't see compromising public safety for $7,000. First ward council member Cheri Hoffman said that with four firemen more training and maintenance takes place.

Mayor Josh Barnes said he feels the fire department staffing issue is something which can be discussed at a later date and separately from the overall budget.

The city council also discussed renovation plans for city hall. The city has plans to renovate both city hall (at a total cost of $741,850) and renovate the public works site on Carpenter Street (at a total cost of $1,876,615). That work would take place over several years.

Monday evening Wiesner offered for council consideration a plan

Four considered for road commission

By Laurie Lounsbury

With the removal of Bob Herrmann from his road commission seat, the Charlevoix County Commissioners have an opening to fill. So far, four men have expressed an interest in the vacant seat on the road commission board. They are Bill Joy of Charlevoix, Bill Korthase of Boyne Valley, Rudolph Florenski of Boyne City, and Dave Duda of Beaver Island. The four applicants will meet with county commissioners at the next commissioner meeting, March 22, in Boyne City.

Joy is a Charlevoix resident who is vice-president and general manager of Petoskey Electric Motor. Joy said he was approached by a few people who asked him to seek the position. Joy said he thinks the job would be good experience for some of his future aspirations. Joy has 20 years of management experience, and seven years in the trucking industry.

Florenski is an independent contractor and carpenter. He said he felt it was his civic duty to apply for the road commission. Florenski said he served as a county commissioner about 20 years ago. He currently has no involvement with any other boards. Florenski said he doesn't know the road commission manager Larry Hamlin personally, but he would be in favor of hiring an engineer/manager in the future. Hamlin is not an engineer. Florenski maintains that it would save the road commission money if the manager was an engineer as well as a manager.

Korthase is a retired farmer living in Boyne Valley. He has 12 years of previous experience on the road commission board. It's been 14 years since he last served on the board. Korthase currently serves on the Top O' Michigan Electric board, the Wolverine Power board, and the Soil Conservation District board.

Dave Duda is a Beaver Island resident. He could not be reached for comment.

The new road commission manager will not receive health benefits for serving on the board. In the past, commissioners have received benefits along with an annual salary of about $1,600 for serving. Former road commissioner Herrmann received cash in lieu of benefits since he had benefits from his job. Reappointed commissioner Wayne Saunders will continue to receive benefits. The Charlevoix County Commissioners decided that Saunders was not a newly appointed but a reappointed commissioner and therefore could continue to receive benefits.

which would combine money from the public works site renovation fund with money from the city hall renovation fund so that city hall renovations could be done all at one time, beginning in 1997. That would push back the timetable on public works site improvements, but allow the city to avoid starting and stopping and starting and stopping on the city hall project.

Money for both projects is derived from other funds including the motor, pool, electric, water, sewer, infrastructure and general funds.

The city council will continue reviewing the budget Monday, March 20.

HIV prevention group to be established

The Regional Community Planning Group (RCPG) is seeking new members to participate in the development of a plan to prevent further HIV infection in the communities of Northern Lower Michigan. The planning group is charged with assessing prevention needs and planning strategies to implement prevention activities.

The RCPG was established last year as part of a statewide effort, funded by the Centers for Disease Control, to establish plans for the use of future HIV prevention resources. Region Seven includes all 25 counties in Northern Lower Michigan north of, and including, Isabella county.

The goal is to ensure the broadest possible community representation and encourage individuals from throughout the region to participate in this crucial planning process. Members are expected to attend monthly meetings and participate on ad hoc committees once or twice per month.

It is helpful for participants to have knowledge and familiarity with HIV prevention issues.

For more information regarding application to participate in these HIV prevention activities, please contact Marilyn Lawrence, Community Health Planner, District Health Department #3, at 547-6523.

Kindergarten aspirants sought

Aspiring Charlevoix kindergartners are invited to register for fall 1995 classes April 18 and 19. Registration will include a 90-minute mini kindergarten class for the enrolling child to give them a feel for what a day at kindergarten will be like.

Parents must phone the elementary school office at 547-3215 to reserve a space in one of the four mini sessions. Session times are April 18 and 19 from 9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. and from 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. Reservations should be made by April 12.

Parents will meet in the gym to register their child while the child is in the mini-session in the classroom.

Parents must bring the following information: certified copy of the child's birth certificate from the County Clerk's office with affixed seal; up-to-date immunization records; social security numbers of father, mother and child; photograph of the child which will be returned later.

The Charlevoix Board of Education recommends that children entering kindergarten be five years old by Sept. 1, 1995. If a child is to be registered and will not be living with the natural parents, it is required the guardianship papers or court placement papers be presented to school personnel at the time of registration.

For additional information, phone the school office at 547-3215.

Bodem appointed delegate to national tourism conference

Gov. John Engler has appointed state Rep. Beverly A. Bodem as one of 17 Michigan delegates to the White House Conference on Travel and Tourism, scheduled to convene Oct. 30-31 in Washington, D.C.

Bodem, who chairs the Michigan House Tourism and Recreation Committee, said the landmark event will help federal and state officials develop a strategy to lead the industry into the next century.

"It's important that our country increase its share of the international tourism market. Considering Michigan's location, it has tremendous potential and we must pursue such growth," said Bodem, R-Alpena.

Nine key travel issues on which the conference will focus are product development, promotion, infrastructure, barrier reduction, training, research, technology, traveler safety and environmental concerns.

Before the White House meeting, delegates from many states are scheduling local conferences to gather testimony from those involved in travel and tourism. Bodem, a member of the Task Force on Environmental concerns, has participated in a statewide series of hearings convening throughout the winter.

"The natural and cultural environments of many tourism destinations are part of the tourism industry's major assets," she said.

Bodem said Michigan is taking important steps to save these locations. Last year, she led a statewide effort to create the Genevieve Gillette State Parks Endowment Fund. The fund was a key part of Proposal P, which was overwhelmingly approved by voters in November.

"Without proper preservation of state parks and other natural areas, travel to these communities may decline. We have a responsibility to protect and ensure the appropriate use of these treasures. That's one of the messages I'll be sharing in Washington," Bodem concluded.

Bodem to be in Charlevoix

State Rep. Beverly A. Bodem, R-106th District, will conduct local office hours for Charlevoix County constituents March 17.

Each month, Bodem is available at two locations to discuss issues or solve problems. Her schedule for Friday is as follows:

- 9 a.m. - 10:30 a.m. in the law library at the Charlevoix County Building, Charlevoix.

- 11:30 a.m. - 1 p.m. at City Hall, 310 N. Lake St., Boyne City.

Lawsuit filed against city as a result of 1992 skiing accident

A 1992 ski accident at Mount McSaubia has resulted in a lawsuit being filed against the city. The suit, which lists five counts each seeking more than $10,000 in damages, was filed by Thomas Sikavitsas Feb. 23 in Charlevoix Circuit Court. It is the result of a ski accident in which Sikavitsas' son, Dustin Sikavitsas, was struck by another skier who was coming off a jump on Mount McSaubia. The suit names as defendants the City of Charlevoix, the city recreation director, the ski hill manager, the other skier and the other skier's parents.

According to the suit, Dustin Sikavitsas fell below the jump and another skier came off the jump and landed on his head. The ski manager brought Dustin down to the warming lodge and placed him on a picnic table. Dustin's older brother called his father, Tom. According to the suit, when Tom Sikavitsas arrived at Mount McSaubia he found Dustin on the table

"incoherently screaming with pain and uttering inhuman sounds." The suit says the boy's head was swollen and bloody.

Tom Sikavitsas rushed his son to the hospital and during the ride to the hospital the boy stopped breathing.

Doctors at Charlevoix Hospital attempted to stabilize the boy and determined that he should be seen by a neurologist immediately. The boy was taken by ambulance to Northern Michigan Hospitals in Petoskey.

Count one of the suit alleges that the city was in breach of the ski area safety act and allowed the ski area to operate with unsafe conditions and inadequate emergency equipment and procedures.

The suit alleges that, "On several other occasions prior to the date when Dustin Sikavitsas was injured, the City of Charlevoix had received complaints from other skiers or had otherwise been informed that Mount McSaubia was being operated unsafely and/or in an unsafe condition."

Counts two, three and four allege negligence or gross negligence by the defendants in the case. Count five alleges that by creating or allowing the jump to exist, the city created a nuisance.

As of yet, the city has not filed a response in the case. City manager said the case will be addressed by the city's insurer and attorneys.

how many we will be able to paint."

"One application for Charlevoix has already been received," said Kathy Johnson. "We hope that people will turn out and help us assure that these homes will get painted. Donations of paint and money are always appreciated, but the most critical part of the project is the volunteers. They make it happen."

Sponsorships of the homes are available for those wanting to make donations, but volunteer painters do not have to be able to provide the paint or a sponsorship. Anyone interested in volunteering for the project or wanting additional information on the Paint Blitz should contact either Hal or Kathy Johnson at 582-2715.

Anyone interested in applying to have their homes considered for the Charlevoix-Emmet Housing Coalition Paint Blitz should contact Executive Director, Vicki Morgan at 582-2894.

OPINIONS

Editorial

School board members bowed to pressure

Three Charlevoix school board members, Joan Buday, Larry Levengood and Steve Czerkes, deserve criticism while one, Ben Cunningham, deserves praise for an action taken at the March 6 school board meeting.

Sometime between Feb. 20 and March 6 pressure was applied, conversations took place outside of public earshot and at the March 6 school board meeting Levengood, Czerkes and Buday caved in and reversed their earlier vote while attempting to gloss over the action. Cunningham, on the other hand, stood his ground.

At the Feb. 20 school board meeting, Buday, Levengood, Czerkes joined Cunningham in voting against granting a benefit request made by teacher Jim Glynn. Board members Ardeth Wieland, Mary Lee Campbell and Sulane Hamilton voted in favor of granting the request. At the March 6 meeting Buday moved to reconsider and changed her vote, as did Levengood and Czerkes.

Granting the request will cost the school approximately $3,500. Whether or not the school board should have granted the request is something that can be argued either way. But when it was argued, it should have been argued in public.

When she moved at the March 6 meeting to reconsider the Feb. 20 decision, Buday said new information had come up. However, in subsequent discussion no new information was presented. Now, that's curious.

After the meeting, Courier reporter Laurie Lounsbury asked Buday what the new information was. Buday said she couldn't say because that information would have to come from Dr. Roberta Jackson, school superintendent. This is peculiar too. Assuming Buday cast a knowledgeable vote on the matter, she knew and was well versed in this new information. Assuming the new information led her to conclude that reversing her original vote was in the public's best interest, then she should have no problem revealing that information to a reporter or any other member of the public. After all the public is who put her in office and who she answers to, not Dr. Jackson. Theoretically, Dr. Jackson answers to her.

Even though it shouldn't have been necessary, Lounsbury asked Dr. Jackson. Jackson offered as new information some information which wasn't new at all. It had been discussed at the Feb. 20 meeting and was reported in the Feb. 22 Courier. Jackson said she'd compiled a fact sheet, but didn't have a copy available for Lounsbury at the board meeting, but would fax a copy to the Courier office first thing Tuesday morning. Lounsbury called Jackson's office three times on the morning of Tuesday, March 7, but no fact sheet was ever faxed.

While Lounsbury was talking to Jackson following the board meeting, Czerkes attempted to defend the decision reversal by saying that at the Feb. 20 meeting there were a lot of unanswered questions. These unanswered questions supposedly existed despite the fact that board members had been discussing Glynn's request in committee meetings for several months. If indeed there were unanswered questions Feb. 20, any board member could have made a motion to table the matter. None did.

What happened in this matter is painfully clear. Somebody didn't like the way the decision came out Feb. 20 so they contacted some board members. Discussions were held outside of public earshot and three board members, Buday, Levengood and Czerkes, caved in and reversed their decision. Cunningham, much to his credit, stood his ground.

As to there being new information, there either was none or if there was it wasn't anything the board cared to let the general public know about. Czerkes' claim that there were unanswered questions at the Feb. 20 meeting is an extremely weak defense. It boils down to him saying he was willing to reverse his vote March 6 because he had been willing to cast an uninformed vote Feb. 20. As a taxpayer entrusting school board members with an $8 million a year budget, seeing that kind of rationale used in decision making is just not very reassuring.

An added irony is that the cave-in and reversal occurred just eight days before an election in which the school board asked school district voters to trust their stewardship of an additional $2.1 million during the next two years. Talk about bad timing.

Public bodies often find themselves in a position where they must make a decision which will not appeal to everyone. That goes with the territory. When that happens a public body should sort out all of the information in the open, make a decision and stick to it. Cutting deals outside of the public eye, reversing decisions and then trying to gloss over the results isn't an acceptable practice and it's not something the public should quietly turn a blind eye to.

All of a sudden, radio and TV talk show hosts are keenly interested in the free Federal School Lunch Program! For those too young to remember, former President Truman launched the program because the Army found that many young men had to be rejected for the draft during World War II, simply because they were undernourished.

Yet today, some people in Congress feel deeply that the Federal Government, under the Agriculture Department, should no longer supervise this program. They suggest, instead, that the program should be turned over to the 50 states to administer, each in their own unfettered fashion.

Listening to the pros and cons of these passionate arguments, I am puzzled. Now the question is — where's the best place to get some straight answers? Why, right in our own backyard, of course. We checked into the free school lunch program in our Charlevoix Schools and with the Board of Education in Lansing to find out what is really going on here.

My first call is to Charlevoix Schools', Rich Kelly, Business Manager. He tells me that out of a total enrollment of 1,383, we have 194 youngsters participating in the free lunch program, and 66 in the reduced lunch program in our three Charlevoix schools. Applications are handed out on the first day of school and are carefully verified and checked in the fall. The income guidelines vary according to the number of children in the family. For example, a family of four with an income of up to $370 a week is eligible for the free program and a family of four with an income up to $527 is eligible for reduced price meals. In the middle and high school, lunches are priced at $1.50 and the reduced price is 40 cents. This includes three out of the five required food groups — vegetable, fruit, protein, bread, milk.

Kelly also informs us that Federal aid amounts to $57,382 and state aid amounts to $2,221.

My next call is to the head cook, Babs Sharrow, at the High School.

She tells me that starting last year, breakfast is also offered at all three schools. This includes cereal, egg McMuffin, bagels, fruit, milk, etc. She feels "it is very important for all children to have something in their stomach in the morning, because they can learn better. I can't believe they are talking about taking this away. Some children truly don't get enough to eat at home."

According to my sources, the catch with allocating funds to 50 states, is that each governor can decide how this money is to be spent, with no strings attached. Some say he can use it to pave roads or whatever he wants. Some say altering the free lunch program for children is a strange predicament for the richest country in the world to find itself in at this time. Some say, "If it ain't broke, why fix it?"

My next call is to Bill Coaster. He has the formidable title of Director, Regulatory and Ancillary Services, Char-Em Intermediate School District. This, as you know, covers eleven school districts, as well as a separate school for pregnant girls and school age parents. Of the 36 students registered here from two counties, 10 teenagers qualify for the free breakfast and lunch program and one qualifies for the reduced breakfast and lunch program.

Coaster maintains, "This program is desperately needed. We follow strict guidelines and I would hate to see too many changes. Nobody knows what is going to replace this program under the proposed block grant system."

Finally, I called the Department of Education in Lansing. It's interesting to note that government money is funneled through the state to the local school districts right now. Officially, the staff would have to be supportive of Governor Engler's block grant program, of course, which would mean more control for the state. On the other hand, several people I talked with feel that the current program is working smoothly. They said that the program has been running for so many years, that all the kinks have been worked out long ago. Any needed improvements could be easily made by Congress by merely amending the current law. Example, there is a duplication of effort in the verification process, and this could readily be corrected without discarding the whole Federal program.

So the answer to my question, "what is the advantage for state control?" seems to be "nobody knows."

Thus, if one concludes that current federal grants may only be used for meals, and nobody including Rush, knows what variable changes will be made under the proposed loose block grant system administered by fifty separate states — it seems reasonable to agree with those who say, "if it ain't broke, why fix it?"

State adopts bill to cut taxes

State Rep. Beverly A. Bodem joined Gov. John Engler and House and Senate leaders at a recent Lansing ceremony where legislation enacting a $1.5 billion tax cut was signed into law.

Bodem, who co-sponsored the package, called it a landmark event in Michigan history.

"This action demonstrates our commitment to families and job providers. These tax cuts will encourage the investment and savings that are the lifeblood of Michigan's financial health," said Bodem, R-Alpena.

The new laws address three of the top items on the House Republicans agenda for 1995: Single Business Tax reform, repeal of the intangibles tax and increasing the personal exemption.

"This is an excellent way to begin the new legislative session. We must continue to cut taxes and spending while improving our business climate, so that Michigan companies can thrive," Bodem said.

The tax package will:

- Increase the personal exemption to at least $2,400 this year and to $2,500 in 1997.
- Index the personal exemption to inflation starting in 1998.
- Reduce the Single Business Tax by removing FICA and Social Security payments from the SBT base.
- Offer a 4 percent credit starting this year for undergraduate college tuition and fees paid at a Michigan college or two-year institution. It is limited to $250 per student at a college or university that does not raise tuition by more than the rate of inflation. The credit could be claimed for four years and is limited to residents with household earnings of $200,000 or less.

- Increase the intangibles tax exemption from $5,000 to $8,000 for singles and $10,000 to $16,000 for joint filers. It also phases out the intangibles tax by Jan. 1, 1998.

Bodem has consistently advocated repealing or reducing the intangibles tax.

Church presents Christian play

John Bunyan's book, "Pilgrim's Progress," has endured the test of time. Written more than 300 years ago, the book today is considered a classic piece of Christian literature.

That story will come to life Sunday, March 19, when Ronald Smeenge does a one man performance telling the story of "Pilgrim's Progress." The performance will begin at 4 p.m. at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

I was flipping through the pages in the Phone Guide looking for a listing in the Ws. Much to my surprise, my eyes fell on a listing for West, Adam. Holy comic book characters! Isn't that Batman? My suddenly awakened super hero fantasies were further aroused when a closer inspection of the listing said, "see Wayne, Bruce - millionaire." Cosmic caped crusaders! Could this possibly be true?

Hurriedly changing pages, the millionaire's mythical appeal found me led ever onward in the chase. For under stately Wayne Manor's listing, the lure was Crimelights in the yellow pages. Thinking the end of my quest for reality therapy was near, the coveted advertisement referred me back to Batman in the White Pages!

My hopes for relief were dashed in the depths of another creative scribe's humor as the listing went me full circle to Bruce Wayne. Oh, tragedy of tragedies! Is there no hope for one seeking help in a world that abounds with such challenges?

All kidding aside folks. The Phone Guide listings are really there for those in need of a smile. But for those in need of real help and encouragement, you'll have to look elsewhere. As much as I appreciated the "tongue in cheek" nature of such entries, I wondered how many people actually found them? After all, most of us take the Phone Guide seriously. We go there looking for the real information we need.

I find myself occasionally wondering how seriously people take the Bible. Some folks think they get all they need of scripture by simply listening to the minister's weekly sermons. Those heartfelt messages were never supposed to be the main staple of anyone's spiritual diet. They were designed to be the appetizer. They hope to lure you into the Word of God for yourself so you can take advantage of the real meat and potatoes encouragement that awaits you.

As one who has spent the better part of his adult life working with the Bible, I'll be the first to admit that first timers looking at the Word might tend to be overwhelmed by its scope and language. But if it did not have a strong foundation, if it did not document every jot and tittle of the case for having faith in God, what good would it be?

I simply would challenge you to do more than take others' advice about what is in God's Word. Look into it for yourself. Become a student of the Bible. Make a focused effort to find out what its pages have to say about the things that are important to you. Unlike the merry-go-round search for the Caped Crusader, you will find the help, hope, and encouragement you need for anything you may face. You will find answers that will really work.

After dynamite failed, backhoes were called in to clear a channel for Harbor Lake.

Blast creates new lake at Bay Harbor

By L. Scott Swanson
Thirty-two sticks of explosives were carefully placed in a wall separating Lake Michigan from the empty bed of what was to become Harbor Lake. Hundreds of people watched as the explosives were touched off and tons of limestone rocketed into the air. Those assembled waited for the water to rush in, but when the dust settled only a trickle of water made its way through the wall.

Somewhere in that crowd an explosives expert was probably thinking to himself - "Damn! Should've used 33 sticks."

About 500 people turned out early Friday afternoon to watch the blast. There were a lot of men in suit coats and shiny shoes and a lot of women in fur coats. Contrasting with that attire were the white hardhats passed out for the affair.

CMS Energy Chairman Bill McCormick and developers Dave Johnson and Steve Kircher spoke at a brief ceremony prior to the explosion. McCormick said the filling of the lake was a key aspect of a project that will ultimately include a harbor, golf course and yacht club. "There's a little pool, I understand, about how many hours it's going to take (the new lake) to fill," McCormick joked. McCormick called the area's acceptance of the project, "truly outstanding."

...new lake created

Johnson said that eight months ago the Bay Harbor project seemed like a "distant dream of a village standing where a cement plant once stood." Johnson said the filling of the harbor represents the end of one phase of that dream. Johnson said the project is way ahead of schedule and things have gone very well.

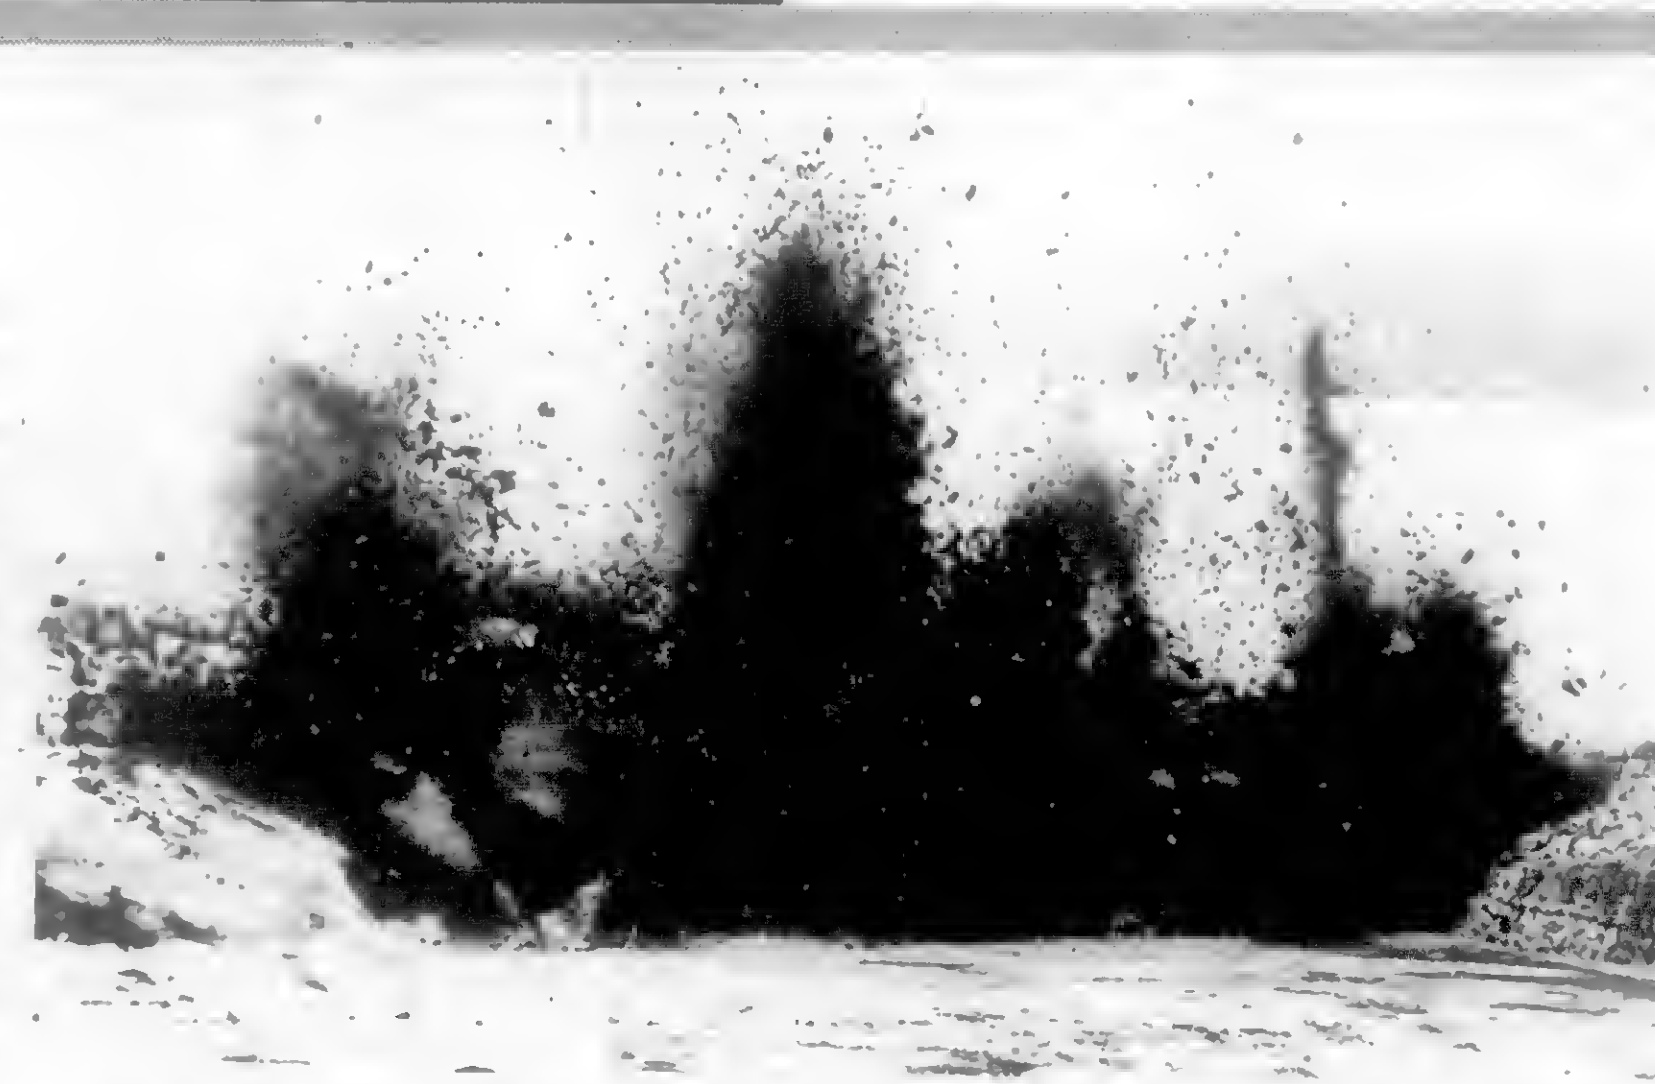

Kircher unveiled a drawing of a new inn which is proposed for the project. It will be called "The Inn at Bay Harbor." The drawing depicted a large, old-fashioned structure with a red roof. Kircher said the design is intended to "go back to the essence of northern Michigan heritage."

Friday's blast was by no means the first for the Bay Harbor project.

Construction workers said that aside from some gravel near the surface which could be moved with machinery, much of the work has required explosives. Part of the work prior to filling the harbor involved blasting a taper near the top edge of the quarry so the new lake would slope rather than being 80 feet deep at the edge.

This summer the harbor will have between 50 and 100 boat slips. When completed it will have between 400 and 450 slips and will handle boats up to 110-foot long. Harbor Lake encompasses approximately 90 acres. It is 83 feet deep at its deepest point and holds approximately 1.5 billion gallons of water.

Johnson said of the Bay Harbor project, "It will literally change boating in northern Michigan."

A lot of stone flew in the air, but backhoes were still required to clear a channel at Bay Harbor.

...Rayders fall in district basketball came into the game and didn't completely shut down, but at least slowed Hacker. Hacker had nine points in the first quarter and only eight more for the next three quarters. In order to control a very good offensive player, McClellan used the entire defensive repertoire. He played in front of him a little, slid down behind him now and then, tried a bit of guile here and touch of brute force there - whatever seemed appropriate to the occasion. Hacker and McClellan provided an entertaining match-up.

Fouls plagued the Rayders in the third quarter. Duhart picked up his fourth on an offensive foul midway through the quarter while Williams picked up his third at the end of the quarter.

A critical point in the game came late in the third and early in the fourth quarter. With 51 seconds left in the third quarter a Charlevoix basket put the Rayders up 44-39. Harbor Springs then turned the ball over. With less than 40 seconds left in the quarter, Kanine called for his team to take the last shot. But that didn't happen. The Rayders missed a shot with approximately 20 seconds left. Harbor Springs rebounded and took the ball down the floor. With 11 seconds left, Williams picked up his third foul and Harbor Springs made two free throws. Rather than Charlevoix leading 44 or 46 to 39, the quarter ended with the score 44-41 and another Rayder in foul trouble.

Thirteen seconds into the fourth quarter Harbor Springs made a basket and a free throw to tie the game at 44 all.

The remainder of the game was an exciting back and forth struggle. Momentum was with Harbor Springs, but Charlevoix refused to fold. At the 7:11 mark Harbor Springs took its first lead since the second quarter 46-45. A minute later Duhart put Charlevoix back in the lead 47-46. At the 4:10 mark Harbor Springs went up 50-47, but seconds later Charlevoix's Jason Smith answered with a basket that brought Charlevoix back within a point. With one minute left to play, a basket by McClellan tied the game at 53.

In the final minute, the game came down to free throws. With 50 seconds left, Harbor Springs' freshman John Flynn hit two free throws to put the Rams up 55-53. With 31 seconds left, Pop hit one of two to make the score 55-54. With 16 seconds left, Andy Kloss made two free throws to put Harbor Springs up by three 57-54.

Up by three, Bingham decided to have his team foul rather than risk giving up a three-point shot. Duhart was fouled with 12 seconds left and made both shots to make the score 57-56 in favor of Harbor Springs.

Following Duhart's free throws, Kanine had the Rayders attempt to deny the inbound pass and if that didn't work, foul immediately. Harbor Springs got the ball into Flynn. Duhart was on him, but with four fouls didn't want to get his fifth. Casey Crain rushed over and fouled Flynn with seven seconds left.

Flynn missed the free throw and Charlevoix got the rebound, but the Rams Nelson Greenier intercepted the outlet pass and scored to give Harbor Springs the 59-56 win.

For the night, Duhart led the Rayders with 25 points. McClellan and Smith each had eight. Mark Boss had seven points and played a steady game on both the offensive and defensive ends. Hacker led Harbor Springs with 17 points while Greenier and Mike Tippet each had 10.

The Rayders finished the season with a 9-12 record.

Wrestler draws tough bracket at state meet

Charlevoix wrestler Bruce Reinhart can chalk this year's trip to the state finals meet up to experience and look forward to next year. Reinhart competed in the state finals at Battle Creek Saturday in the 275 pound division and lost his first two matches.

In his opening match, Reinhart was pinned in 1:08 by an Olivet wrestler who ended up placing fourth overall. In his second match, Reinhart was pinned at 2:30 by a Hudson wrestler who ended up placing fifth overall.

Reinhart had the misfortune of wrestling in the tougher of two brackets in his weight class. Wrestlers in his bracket ended up claiming three of the top four places and five of the top seven places.

After a so-so start, Reinhart improved dramatically as the season progressed and finished the year with a 27-15 record.

It's time to register for Little League

Charlevoix Little League will host player sign-ups March 23 and 25 for all boys and girls between the ages of eight and 15. Sign up will be at the elementary school from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. March 23 and from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. March 25.

Player fees will be collected at sign-up. There is a fund-raising option available and arrangements can be made at the sign-up.

Try-outs for players entering the Major League will begin at 11 a.m. March 25 in the Elementary School gym. A player draft will follow the try-outs.

Anyone with questions or an interest in helping with the program this year should contact Bill Trubilowicz at 547-6662.

Volleyball team loses at regional Charlevoix's girls' volleyball team hadn't been to the regional volleyball tournament in years and Saturday they played like they were in unfamiliar territory. The Rayders traveled to Clare and were ousted in the opening round of the regional by Coleman.

Charlevoix started out slowly against Coleman and lost the first game 15-1. The Rayders played better in game two, but still came up short 15-11.

The Rayders finished their season with a 25-8-5 record.

Whitemore-Prescott defeated Coleman in the regional finals.

Area residents invited to summer tour of Japan

Petoskey's Sister-City Committee is looking for residents interested in joining this summer's goodwill mission to Japan, as well as hosts for sister-city middle school students when they visit northern Michigan this fall.

Area residents will visit Makino, Petoskey's sister city in the prefecture (state) of Shiga, Japan July 29 - August 9.

The trip begins with departure Saturday July 29 from Detroit for Kansai International Airport in Osaka, Japan. Participants will arrive in Osaka Sunday, July 30, and be transported to the Kyoto Grand Hotel. Buffet Dinner and breakfast will be followed by a Kyoto sightseeing tour.

The governor's reception will be Monday night, with dinner courtesy of Shiga. Trip planners are working to organize a cruise aboard the "Michigan," one of the large tour boats of the Biwako Kisen Steamship Co., fleet on Lake Biwa. Lake Biwa is Japan's largest freshwater lake and is one of the reasons Shiga was selected as Michigan's sister state in 1968.

Tuesday, area visitors will take the two-hour car trip to Makino, on the north end of Lake Biwa. Makino is a winter ski area and summer tourist center. After a city hall reception the guests will be hosted by Makino families, with whom they will stay until Monday, August 7. Group and family activities are scheduled during the six days and five nights of homestays.

Marking the end of the homestays, a complimentary buffet reception at the Otsu Prince Hotel will be offered for all the Michigan visitors Monday evening, followed by a trip to downtown Otsu for the Bon Dance and accompanying festivities. Michigan visitors will meet at the Keihan Lake Center on Lake Biwa for the annual fireworks display.

Approximately 100 Michigan residents will be going. The Petoskey area, which includes neighboring cities, is limited to 10. February precipitation was below normal on Great Lakes

During the month of February precipitation on each Great Lakes basin was below average, with the exception of the Lake Superior basin which was above average. For the year to date, precipitation is about 3 percent above average for the entire Great Lakes basin. The Early morning fire damages northside home

A house at 408 Burns Street was severely damaged by fire early Monday, March 13. The home, which belongs to Mr. and Mrs. Roger Knutson of Iowa was unoccupied at the time of the fire. It was being remodeled as a retirement home.

The fire was reported to the city fire department at 4:10 a.m. by a neighbor who heard glass breaking from the heat of the fire inside the house.

The fire department responded and extinguished the fire. City fire chief Doug Carver said much of the inside of the home incurred fire and water damage, however the house still appears to be structurally sound.

The exact cause of the fire is still under investigation, but as of now firemen don't believe the fire was caused by arson.

net supply of water to each of the Great Lakes in February was below average.

In comparison to their long-term (1918-1994) averages, the February monthly mean water level of Lake Superior was 2 inches below average, Lakes Michigan-Huron, St. Clair, Erie and Ontario were 6, 13, 11 and 6 inches above average respectively. Shoreline residents are cautioned to be alert whenever adverse weather conditions exist, as these could cause rapid short-term water levels. Should the lakes approach critically high levels, further information and advice will be provided by the Corps of Engineers.

A more detailed summary of Lakes Michigan-Huron water levels follows. All elevations are referenced to International Great Lakes Datum 1985 (IGLD 1985).

Lakes Michigan-Huron at the end of February were at elevation 578.90 feet (176.45 meters) above the mean water level at Rimouski, Quebec, or about 17 inches (45 cm.) above Chart Datum. The February monthly mean level of 579.04 feet (176.49 meters) was about 6 inches (16 cm.) above the long-term average for February.

The lakes were about 24 inches (62 cm.) below the all-time high February monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986. The forecast shows that the March monthly mean level of Lakes Michigan-Huron will be about 1 inch (2 cm.) below what it was at Mid-February. The lakes are expected to complete their seasonal decline in March. The water level in Mid-August 1995 is expected to be about 5 inches (12 cm.) above the long-term average for that month, or about 4 inches (9 cm.) below what it was at the same time in 1994.

City mourns death of Bob Clock

By L. Scott Swanson

During the past three decades, Bob Clock wove himself into the fabric of Charlevoix. At his funeral Monday afternoon, it wasn't so much the number of people who attended, but the cross section of people that was striking. Young and old and somebody from nearly every walk of life in this little northern Michigan community came to bid farewell to a friend. Clock died suddenly of heart failure in the early morning hours, March 16.

Clock and his wife Judy moved to Charlevoix from Holly in 1965. He became editor of the Courier and later was a journalist, columnist and news editor at the Petoskey News-Review until his retirement in 1990.

In more than 1,000 columns, most running under the heading "Clockwise," Clock, with a command of the English language revered by his newsroom cohorts, captured in words the ups and downs of life in northern Michigan.

His concern for his fellow man, quick wit and out-of-the-ordinary way of looking at things made not only for a good read in the paper, but also made him a pleasure to work with and swap tales.

Clock had a knack for spotting quirks in language and in life that slipped past the attention of other people. One day as he sat at his computer terminal in the news room reading wire copy, he suddenly looked up and asked, "Why is it that every time they find a murder victim, it's always in a 'shallow grave'?" He subsequently wondered aloud why he'd never read about even one murderer who took the time to do a decent job of burying the victim. He said it seemed the least a murderer could do.

In the News-Review newsroom if reporters had a question about grammar or the proper usage of some particular word, Clock was the man they sought. At the Cour-

Proposed budget rejected

By L. Scott Swanson

The city's proposed $12.1 million 1995-96 fiscal budget remains a proposed budget. By a 3-3 vote Monday evening the city council chose not to adopt the budget as proposed.

The city's fiscal year comes to an end March 31. City treasurer Rick Brandt said that if the city hasn't adopted a budget by April 1 the city would technically be out of compliance with the city charter. The next scheduled city council meeting is April 3. Following the 3-3 vote, mayor Josh Barnes said that at that time he saw no point in calling a special meeting. However, following the meeting some council members said they suspect a special meeting will be called prior to the end of March.

One of the key sticking points in the budget debate was fire department staffing and funding. Council members Gabe Campbell, Butch Russell and Don Meggison, the three members who voted against adoption of the budget, all spoke in favor of reducing the fire department's full time staff from four to three members.

Campbell noted that for many years the fire department functioned with three full time firemen. A couple of years ago the fire department expanded to four full time firemen, but since that time the city has lost the contract to provide fire protection to Hayes Township. Hayes Township now has a contract with the Charlevoix Township Fire Department for fire protection.

The fire department staffing issue was discussed at a March 13 budget hearing. At that time, city manager Mike Wiesner estimated that due to added costs from filling in for vacations and sick time, reducing the fire department staff from four to three would save approximately $7,000. At the March 20 meeting, Campbell said he still feels the staff reduction would save the city far more than $7,000.

Council member Bruce Reid disagreed with Campbell saying he felt Campbell was "barking up a

er, if any of the editors had a question about some aspect of Charlevoix, Clock was as good a source of information as any.

Clock's interest in what was going on in Charlevoix went beyond what was required for his profession. He and his wife raised their four children in Charlevoix and consequently followed the high school performing arts program and whatever else their kids became involved in.

Prior to moving to Charlevoix, Clock taught in the Holly school system. Following his retirement in 1990 he often filled in as a substitute teacher in the Charlevoix school system. Several Charlevoix High School students attended his funeral.

Although the Clocks only had four children of their own, there were other young people who through sharing their home or their friendship became like family members. One spring day in a conversation on the street with a friend, the subject of young people who had stayed at Clock's home or otherwise fallen under his blanket of friendship came up.

"Oh, you love 'em all," Clock said. He added that if it's not your own kid, if you're around them long enough you grow to care for them, "worry about them and help them out just like they were your own. He said there are always kids around who need somebody to care about them and lend a helping hand.

On one occasion a young man Clock knew got in trouble with the law and ended up in jail. Clock visited the young man regularly, took him things to read, talked to him and helped get him through the sentence.

One day a coworker asked Clock how the young guy was doing in jail. Clock said that generally speaking the guy was doing all right, but at the moment he was mad at the sheriff. The guy had been assigned one of the better prisoner jobs of working at the animal shelter. But when a prisoner who had served time for previous offenses got thrown back in jail, the young guy got bumped off his animal shelter job onto some other job he didn't like as well. Clock said he'd tried to explain to his jailed friend that the other guy had seniority and jobs in jail are just like anything else. You can't start out right at the top. You've gotta pay your dues.

In addition to helping out young people, Clock served on the city planning commission in recent years and back in the 1970s served on the city charter commission.

Clock being the wordsmith on the commission was instrumental in writing the charter. In fact, a few years ago Clock was in attendance at a city council meeting where some question about the charter arose. Clock was attempting to offer some insight when someone else in the room asked him if he'd read the charter. He smiled and said, "Read it? Why, I wrote it."

Retirement suited Clock well. He was far from sedentary. He was a familiar face hiking around town. As one local shop keeper said, he often stuck his head in the door to chat or just holler in a hello. He swam quite a bit in the summer and rode his bike out to tend his space at the city gardens by the airport.

In his columns Clock concocted the fictitious community of Neverville. For all his friends in Charlevoix know, Bob Clock's in Neverville now - alternately quoting Robert Burns' poetry and regaling people with stories about us.

lone tree" and that there isn't enough support to reduce the fire department staff. He said he felt Campbell's position was based on past controversies in the fire department.

In response to Reid's comments, Campbell shrugged his shoulders and told Reid, "That's your opinion."

Russell said his feelings on fire department staffing have nothing to do with past controversies, he just feels that with the loss of Hayes

Township it's time to go back to a staff of three full-time firemen.

Wiesner, Barnes and council member Cheri Hoffman said they felt the issue should be dealt with separately from the budget.

Hoffman said she feels the fire department is getting better training and record keeping among other things with a four person full time staff. She said the issue is a policy, not a budget matter.

Wiesner said his understanding coming into the meeting was that the fire department staffing issue was going to be dealt with separately, at a later date. He favored keeping the fire department staff at four people.

"If you don't leave four firemen there, I don't think you leave staff with the tools for public protection," he said.

During public comments, former council member Bob Timms disagreed with that position. "This thing of hanging your hat on we've got to have four or we're not going to be secure is just blowing smoke," he said.

Barnes said he wanted to pass the budget and talk about the fire department later. Campbell said he couldn't vote for a budget before a decision was made as to what the budget would include.

Hoffman made a motion to adopt the budget. The motion was supported by Reid. The vote ended up 3-3 with Hoffman, Reid and Jackie Cross supporting and Russell, Campbell and Meggison opposed. Unlike some issues in which a tie vote may be broken by the mayor, adopting a budget requires a majority of the six council members.

Kammermann named Foundation president

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation has a new president for 1995. Vel Kammermann, partner in the CPA firm Mason & Kammermann, has been chosen to lead the organization during this year. Kammermann takes over for retiring president, Scott Beatty, who had served in that post since the Foundation began in 1992.

William Sherman, president of Burnett Foods, has been named Corporate Secretary for the Foundation. Other officers who will continue in their positions are Vice President Mike Stowe, CEO of Industrial Magnetics, Inc., in Boyne City, and Treasurer William Lorne, vice-president for administrative affairs at the East Jordan Iron Works. Sherman and Lorne were re-appointed to three-year terms at the last meeting of the board of Trustees, along with Lou Hollow and Scott Beatty.

Commenting on the appointments, Foundation Executive Director Robert Tambellini said, "The Charlevoix County Community Foundation could never have come this far without the vision, dedication, and capable stewardship of our trustees. We're really fortunate that these busy people have chosen to take time to serve our organization." Tambellini praised outgoing president Scott Beatty's leadership, calling it critical to the Foundation's success.

Started in 1992 by a group of civic leaders, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation receives charitable donations and manages them in a permanent endowment.

Interest income on the endowment is used to fund a variety of projects in the area. To date, the Foundation has given more than $95,000 in grants and scholarships to young people and non-profit groups in the county.

OPINIONS

Editorial

Council needs to meet again

The city council should call a special meeting for this coming Monday evening to continue discussion of the proposed 1995-96 city budget. It's as simple as that.

Monday, March 20, by a 3-3 vote the city council chose not to adopt the budget as proposed by staff. The city's fiscal year ends March 31. Although city operations probably won't stop if no budget is adopted between now and the end of the month, to keep the city's fiscal house in order it would certainly be best to have a budget adopted by then.

Among the key sticking points in the budget debate has been staffing levels and consequent expenditures by the fire department. For years the fire department had three full-time firemen and a group of volunteers. A few years ago the staffing was changed to four full-time firemen and volunteers.

Three council members, Gabe Campbell, Butch Russell and Don Meggison, favor going back to three full-time firemen. They contend that in recent years the city lost a contract to provide fire protection to Hayes Township and consequently now has a larger staff and less demand for service.

Other council members, most vocally Cheri Hoffman and Bruce Reid, maintain that the fire department has better training, maintenance and record keeping with four full-time firemen and the savings resulting from reducing the staff from four to three is not worth the resulting diminishment in public safety.

Mayor Josh Barnes wants to pass the budget as proposed and argue about the fire department issue later. Campbell says he can't vote for a budget before the council has determined what that budget is going to include.

Whether the council leaves the fire department staff at three or four full-time firemen is something the city can probably live with either way. But Campbell is right in wanting the issue resolved as part of the budgetary process.

Determining how much money to spend on the fire department or any other department is clearly a council decision and should be decided as part of the council budgetary deliberations, not put off and handled piece meal.

The fact that the city is nearing the end of the fiscal year is not something Campbell or anyone else with concerns about what is in the proposed budget should let bother them. The proposed budget only came out a week or so ago and there has only been one hearing to discuss it. Campbell began raising concerns at that hearing, which was as soon as he reasonably could.

What needs to be done this year is for the council to call a special meeting and spend some time negotiating until the proposed budget can be changed to meet the desires of at least four of the six council members. In coming years, the council may wish to leave more time for discussion between the time the proposed budget is presented for debate and the end of the fiscal year. History indicates that budgets are often the subject of debate in Charlevoix. It just makes sense to leave enough time for that debate to occur without painting yourself into a corner.

CLOCKWISE

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary to hang it up - don't hesitate.

After more than 40 years in the newspaper business, including 25 years with the Charlevoix Courier and the Petoskey News-Review, I have decided to call it quits. This will be my last Clockwise column for the Courier.

Then it's farewell - at least for a while - to what has been a nice way to earn a living for an awful lot of years.

Looking back, I am astounded at the changes that have taken place in the newspaper business since I started as a reporter and ad salesman for the Cass City (Mich.) Chronicle in the summer of 1950.

I have watched newspapers go from hand-set type to totally computerized page makeup. And the changes are just starting.

Although I had a degree in journalism from Michigan State, my first job out of college was as a warehouseman for the Goebel Brewing Co. in Detroit. A recession was under way and news jobs were scarce.

The brewery pay was fantastic - about $60 a week - and the benefits were intoxicating: All the beer you could drink providing you stayed sober.

A guy who started with me was fired before noon because he couldn't stand up.

After a few weeks with Goebel, I received word from A.A. Applegate, head of MSC's journalism department, that Herb Lenzner, publisher of the Cass City Chronicle, was looking for someone. I borrowed my father's 1937 Ford and drove 100 miles north into the Thumb for an interview.

The Chronicle office had electric lights, but that was the most modern innovation. Furthermore, the pay was discouraging - $40 a week, one-third less than I earned at Goebel. Still, I preferred news work to wrestling beer kegs so I accepted Mr. Lenzner's offer.

I didn't particularly relish the idea of moving to a small town nestled amid endless miles of bean fields, but I had an out: The Korean War had just started and I was classified 1-A.

Of course, I fell in love with Cass City and when I was drafted the following January I was sad to leave.

In the Army I gravitated toward news-type work in various Public Information Offices in the states and overseas. At one point I edited the only two English language newspapers published in Yokohama, and ended my Army Career with Stars & Stripes in Tokyo.

After I was discharged, I stuck with newspapering and related fields: reporting and editing for the Pontiac Press, reporting for 29 in-house newspapers published by the Ford Motor Co., handling the radio wire for United Press International, teaching journalism, English and Sixth Grade at Holly, and finally moving to Northern Michigan.

The nicest part of newspapering is the people you work with. They're all a little off-the-wall, a little crazy. Cynical, yes. But also as caring as hell.

Why would anyone want to give up such a job and such friends?

For one thing, I am past the age when I can start drawing reduced-benefit Social Security. I am told that if one doesn't start drawing SS fairly soon after reaching age 62, it will take something like 13 years to make up the difference between reduced-benefit SS and full-benefit SS.

Secondly, I think I have said editorially just about everything I have to say. I know some folks in the trade continue to write columns even though they retire from active news work. They have one or two column ideas and repeat themselves endlessly until death mercifully sees them tucked away in the churchyard.

I would rather step aside while I still have a few fresh ideas.

There are other reasons, too, not the least of which is the weather. Twenty-five years ago, I couldn't get enough of winter. I loved it. I wallowed in it. But my enthusiasm has waned over the years. The thought of having to drive from Charlevoix to Petoskey in one more whitout gives me heart palpitations.

So this is it. After more than 1,100 Clockwise columns for the Courier and the News-Review, I'm retiring. It's been fun. And thanks.

Judge rules in favor of road commission

Island townships lose road suit

Two Beaver Island townships have lost their lawsuit against the Charlevoix County Road Commission, but the door remains open to solving their road problems.

"We will be totally receptive to anything the townships might propose," said road commission manager Larry Hamlin, adding that the road commission has always been willing and eager to work with the islanders.

The road suit was tried last August before Charlevoix County Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas. At the heart of the matter was King's Highway, the main thoroughfare on Beaver Island. The highway was once a paved road, badly in need of repair. The road commission tore up the paved highway and replaced it with a gravel road in 1990. Since then, islanders have battled with the road commission to get the highway repaved.

Although the lawsuit ruling is in favor of the road commission and does not compel the road commission to address the island's concerns, road commissioners say island road problems remain a high priority.

Road commissioner Wayne Saunders said, "I think we should address the issue soon and try to improve the road the best way we're able."

Island township supervisor Joan Petrak is hoping changes in the road commission board will ease relations between the islanders and the road commission. "There is nothing to do at this point but start over. We're hoping that with changes at the road commission we can work together and get a better response to our needs," she said.

The judge's decision indicates that by law road commissions have a great deal of discretion on how they maintain roads. The fact that King's Highway was once a paved road and is now a gravel road had no bearing on the case. The road commission has the power to decide how to build and finish roads. At issue in the trial was whether or not King's Highway was safe for public travel. The judge determined that King's Highway was a typical country gravel road. When dust and washerboard effect make driving treacherous, prudent drivers would simply slow down.

The judge did chastise the road commission for not securing funds to complete the paving of King's Highway when they had the chance. In his decision, Pajtas wrote, "This type of management lends credence to one witness' testimony that Beaver Island has long been treated by the road commission as a 'step-child.'"

Pajtas included testimony that claimed ambulance patients are further traumatized by being transported over "chatter bumps" in the road. "What mainland residents in Charlevoix County can make these claims - particularly with regard to their main thoroughfare? How many other county residents can claim that one of their main roads is now much worse off since the road commission has 'improved' it?" Pajtas wrote.

Pajtas urged both parties to arrive at a solution to a problem that won't go away by itself. He said it was not within the powers of his branch of government to find a remedy to the problem. He pointed out that the power to appropriate money (for road repairs) is exclusively legislative in character.

Hamlin is planning to seek grant funding to help pay for repairs to island roads. Island townships would probably have to match the grant money. This occurs routinely in other townships. Hamlin pointed out that the King's Highway work to date was funded 100 percent by grant money and the road commission.

Both sides agree on one thing. They wish they could have used the money they spent on legal fees on the roads. Petrak estimated that each township spent close to $10,000 in legal fees, for a total of close to $20,000. The road commission spent $37,549. Together the two parties spent close to $60,000 in legal fees.

Stories differ as to cause of road suit

It's hard to say exactly what led up to the Beaver Island lawsuit against the road commission. There are as many versions of the story as there are potholes in the island roads. Versions of the story vary depending upon who's telling it.

In 1988, former road commissioner John Kujawski reportedly told islanders that the road commission would tear up the potholed

King's Highway and build a new road. In 1990, the county road commission received grant money to tear apart and refinish Kings Highway. The road commission tore up a five mile section of the road in the fall of 1990. They put down new gravel in the fall. The road commission did no more to finish

Karley Pearsall weighed less than two pounds at birth. She is shown next to the hand of her father, Kevin Pearsall. Karley was born Feb. 16, three months premature, at Butterworth Hospital in Grand Rapids. She is gaining weight and making progress. Her parents are staying at the Ronald McDonald House in Grand Rapids to be near her.

Baby weighed less than two pounds at birth, but is making progress

One of Charlevoix's newest citizens hasn't made it to town yet. You might say she's growing into the community.

Karley Michael Pearsall, the daughter of Kevin and Vikki Pearsall, was born Feb. 16 in Grand Rapids. She was born three months early and weighed just one pound, nine and a-half ounces at birth. At birth, Karley was about as big as Kevin's band. After she was born her weight dropped to one and a-half pounds, but as of last week her mother reported that she is now up to one pound, 13 and a-half ounces.

Vikki was about six months into pregnancy when she began having pains. She went to Charlevoix Area Hospital and was immediately transported by ambulance to Northern Michigan Hospitals in Petoskey, and later taken by helicopter to Butterworth Hospital in Grand Rapids. Karley was born a short time after she and her mother landed in Grand Rapids.

Karley remains at the hospital. She's now breathing pretty much on her own. She had an infection following birth, but antibiotics cleared it up.

Kevin and Vikki have been staying at the Ronald McDonald house, a house which is set up for family members of patients who have extended hospital stays. Karley is the couple's first child.

In a phone conversation with the Courier, Vikki said the past month has been stressful, but added, "We're hanging in there." She said that for now they just try to take one day at a time. The couple has heard from several friends in Charlevoix.

Lynn Pearsall, Kevin's mother, said their phone starts ringing in the morning and doesn't stop until 11 o'clock at night. She said people call and ask how the baby's doing and express their concern.

The couple has been accumulating a stack of medical bills. Friends and family members hosted a spaghetti dinner last week to help raise money to defray some of the costs and are planning a dinner and auction next month.

Karley is expected to be in the hospital for at least another month. Kevin owns his own landscaping business and with spring being a busy time of year will return to Charlevoix to work during the week and will travel to Grand Rapids to be with his wife and daughter on weekends.

Vikki said she and Kevin see as much of the baby as they can in the hospital and help with her daily weigh-ins.

Club 77 suspends dances

The Club 77 teen center will be putting weekend social and dance activities on hold while the organization restructures. Other activities will go on as planned and new programs will be posted on the windows at the club.

Club 77 is committed to providing a safe place free of drugs, alcohol and tobacco for young people to gather. The dances have been drawing between 50 and 100 young people, but more adults are needed to chaperone. Parents who are willing to chaperone should contact JoAnn Beemon or Tamar Whitley at 547-2298.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

There is something about a beautiful painting that has always spoken to me. It's not the marvelous combination of colors that cannot help but catch your eye. It's not always even the scene that is portrayed. What talks to my heart is that captured on canvas is a view of the world that is interpreted by the heart and soul of the artist. You do more than look at a picture. You get to see the feelings and emotions that moved a gifted person to take up a brush and immortalize a moment in time forever.

Hanging on the wall in the living room, we have a picture we got at one of those "starving artist" sales over twenty years ago. To me, it looks remarkably like a sunset on Lake Michigan in the summer time. The intriguing thing is that when we bought it, we lived in Tennessee and had never considered that God would bring us to the north country one day.

These thoughts about art come to mind when I think about a master wordsmith, Bob Clock. Though I only had some passing encounters with him, I always valued a man who could through his vocabulary create all kinds of word pictures in his reader's minds. It is not the easiest thing in the world to create the hues and highlights of a setting or emotion in your thoughts. But that was what Bob did to perfection in any number of stories that he chronicled in the life of our town.

The place where real verbal mining could be done was in the Courier columns. As a news writer, he had to basically stick to the facts of whatever event he was covering. In his column, he could open up his heart and share the pulse of a spirit that took in every facet of life as it rolled before his eyes.

I thought of Bob as I stood before my English class at North Central Michigan College Monday. I am committed to sharing the joys of writing with my students just as he was committed to challenging, cajoling and inspiring our thoughts with his words. People like Bob make me want to stand up and remind each and everyone I meet of the power in their own words. Your thoughts are important. Your feelings are worth remembering. Sharing your "up" moments should give us all reason to rejoice. Sharing your "down" moments should remind us how very much we do need each other and should not be afraid to pull together.

Maybe that's why another collection of words means more and more to my heart every day. One of my favorite passages says, "for God so loved the world, He gave..." And I like to add, He gave and He gave and He continues to give... Thanks for giving us Bob, Lord. Though he may have put a journalistic "30" on his earthly walk, may his blessings continue.

ORDER FOR HEARING
No. 024315-17
In the Matter of the Partition of the State Treasurer of Michigan, in behalf of said State, for the sale of lands for unpaid property taxes.

The State Treasurer has petitioned this court for a judgment of sale of the State, against each parcel of land described in Schedule A, for the unpaid taxes, interest and charges on each parcel of land, and that the lands be sold for the amounts claimed due by the State.

It is ordered that the petition will be brought on for hearing and judgment at the April term of this court, to be held at Charlevoix, in the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan on the 11th day of April, 1995. At the opening of Court on that day, all persons who have an interest in the lands or any part thereof, who wish to contest the claim of the State, shall appear in this court and file their objections with the clerk on or before the first day of the term of the court mentioned above, and a judgment will be made as requested in the petition if the amounts due are not paid.

It is further ordered that the lands described in the petition, with all taxes, interest and charges on the 10:00 A.M. on that day or days after, that are necessary to complete the sale of each parcel, at the office of the County Treasurer, or at a place designated by the Treasurer, at the County seat of the County mentioned above.

This sale will be open to the public and each parcel described in the judgment shall be separately offered for sale to the highest bidder who pays the full amount claimed against the parcel and accepts the smallest unadvised interest in the property, any parcel of land, or any part thereof, shall be sold to the highest bidder, and the sale will be open to the public on the second offering of the County Treasurer shall bid off the parcel in the name of the State.

Witness the Hon. Richard M. Pajtas, Circuit Judge, and the seal of the said Circuit Court of Charlevoix County this 24th day of February, 1995.

Richard M. Pajtas, Circuit Judge
STATE OF MICHIGAN
STATE TREASURER PETITION
IN THE CIRCUIT COURT FOR THE COUNTY OF CHARLEVOIX

In the Matter of the Partition of the State Treasurer of Michigan, in behalf of said State, for the sale of lands for unpaid property taxes.

1. That he is the State Treasurer and has the person under the provisions of P.A. 208 of 1955, as amended, and P.A. 380 of 1965, as amended.

2. That the attached Schedule A is the tax return required by the law and contains a description of all lands in the above county upon which taxes were assessed for the year mentioned therein and have remained unpaid for more than one year after they were returned delinquent or for land identified as certified residential property under section 55, 90 days after the taxes were returned as delinquent.

3. That the amounts assessed each parcel of land are (a) the total amount of delinquent taxes which were assessed for the year mentioned therein, (b) interest calculated as provided in the law to the first day of May, (c) a county property tax administration fee of four percent with a minimum of $1.00, and $10.00 for expenses, all in accordance with the law mentioned above.

4. That all of the taxes, interest and charges are valid and have remained delinquent for sufficient time to require the sale of the lands against which they were assessed for the year mentioned above, and constitute a valid lien upon each of the parcels of land, and that a judgment be issued in favor of the State against the land for the amount of the taxes specified, and if not paid, the lands be sold.

Therefore your plaintiff requests:

a. That within the time provided by law this court determine that the above taxes, interest, and charges on lands described in Schedule A are valid and constitute a valid lien upon each of the parcels of land.

b. That within the time provided by law this court make a final judgment in favor of the State of Michigan against each parcel of land for the payment of the taxes, interest, and charges in Schedule A, and that the amounts listed in the column headed "Aggregate" shall constitute the amounts adjudged against the lands, unadvised by this court.

c. That if the amounts in this schedule are not paid, the lands, or the portion that is necessary to satisfy the amount adjudged against the lands, shall be offered separately at the tax sale as the law provides.

d. That your plaintiff may have such other and further relief that this court finds just and equitable.

Diabetes Outreach Network formed

Complications of diabetes, including hospitalizations, amputations, and death, can be dramatically reduced through direct education of both patients with diabetes and health care professionals, according to Michele Bonneville, RN, MSN, CDE, from Burns Clinic.

Bonneville and other regional health care professionals are part of the Advisory Council which helped launch TIPDON (Tip of Michigan's Diabetes Outreach Network) at an organizational meeting on February 28 in Gaylord.

The area was also represented by: Peggy Spang, RN, CDE, Charlevoix Area Hospitals; Mary Sciamanna, LNP, and mother of a child with diabetes, Petoskey; Mary Ward, RN, MS, Northern Michigan Hospitals; and Kaye MacMillian, RN, District Health Department #3.

TIPDON, which will coordinate this work in 28 Northern Lower Peninsula counties, is modeled on the highly successful Upper Peninsula diabetes outreach program, UPDON (UP Diabetes Outreach Network).

Since 1986, UPDON has seen dramatic reductions in complications from diabetes and has measurably improved the quality of life for thousands of people, according to Mary Snitgen, RN, UPDON Director.

A major main goal of this program is to identify people who are at risk for complications from diabetes and provide them with both education and higher standards of care, explained TIPDON Director Ann Scott, RN, MSN.

Educating both patients and health professionals is crucial, Scott told the gathering.

"People with diabetes need specialized care for such conditions as hypertension, eye disease and foot care. Patients, physicians, and nurses can benefit from the up to date information this project will provide."

Complications of diabetes have caused thousands of hospitalizations, amputations, and deaths in this region in the past year.

These concerns will be TIPDON's focus during its first year, Scott explained.

Funding for the diabetes outreach program comes from the Michigan Department of Public Health and the Healthy Michigan Fund. The increase in tobacco taxes, which was part of the Proposal A tax reform, passed by voters last year, helps underwrite the project.

District Health Department No. 3 was awarded $165,000 to oversee the project in the 28 Northern Lower Peninsula Counties.

the road. Fred Welch, who was road commission manager at the time, claimed the road commission didn't finish the road because the islanders insisted on asphalt and the commission could only get funding for triple sealcoat. Islanders maintain that this is not the case. Time marched on while the islanders and the road commission quarreled over the road surface.

In 1992, frustrated islanders filed a lawsuit against the road commission. Several opportunities for settling out of court fell through. Communication between the two sides was not good. As an example, both the islanders and the road commission will tell a story of coming to the table, ready to settle, and the opposite side not even showing up.

Spring break party story exposed!

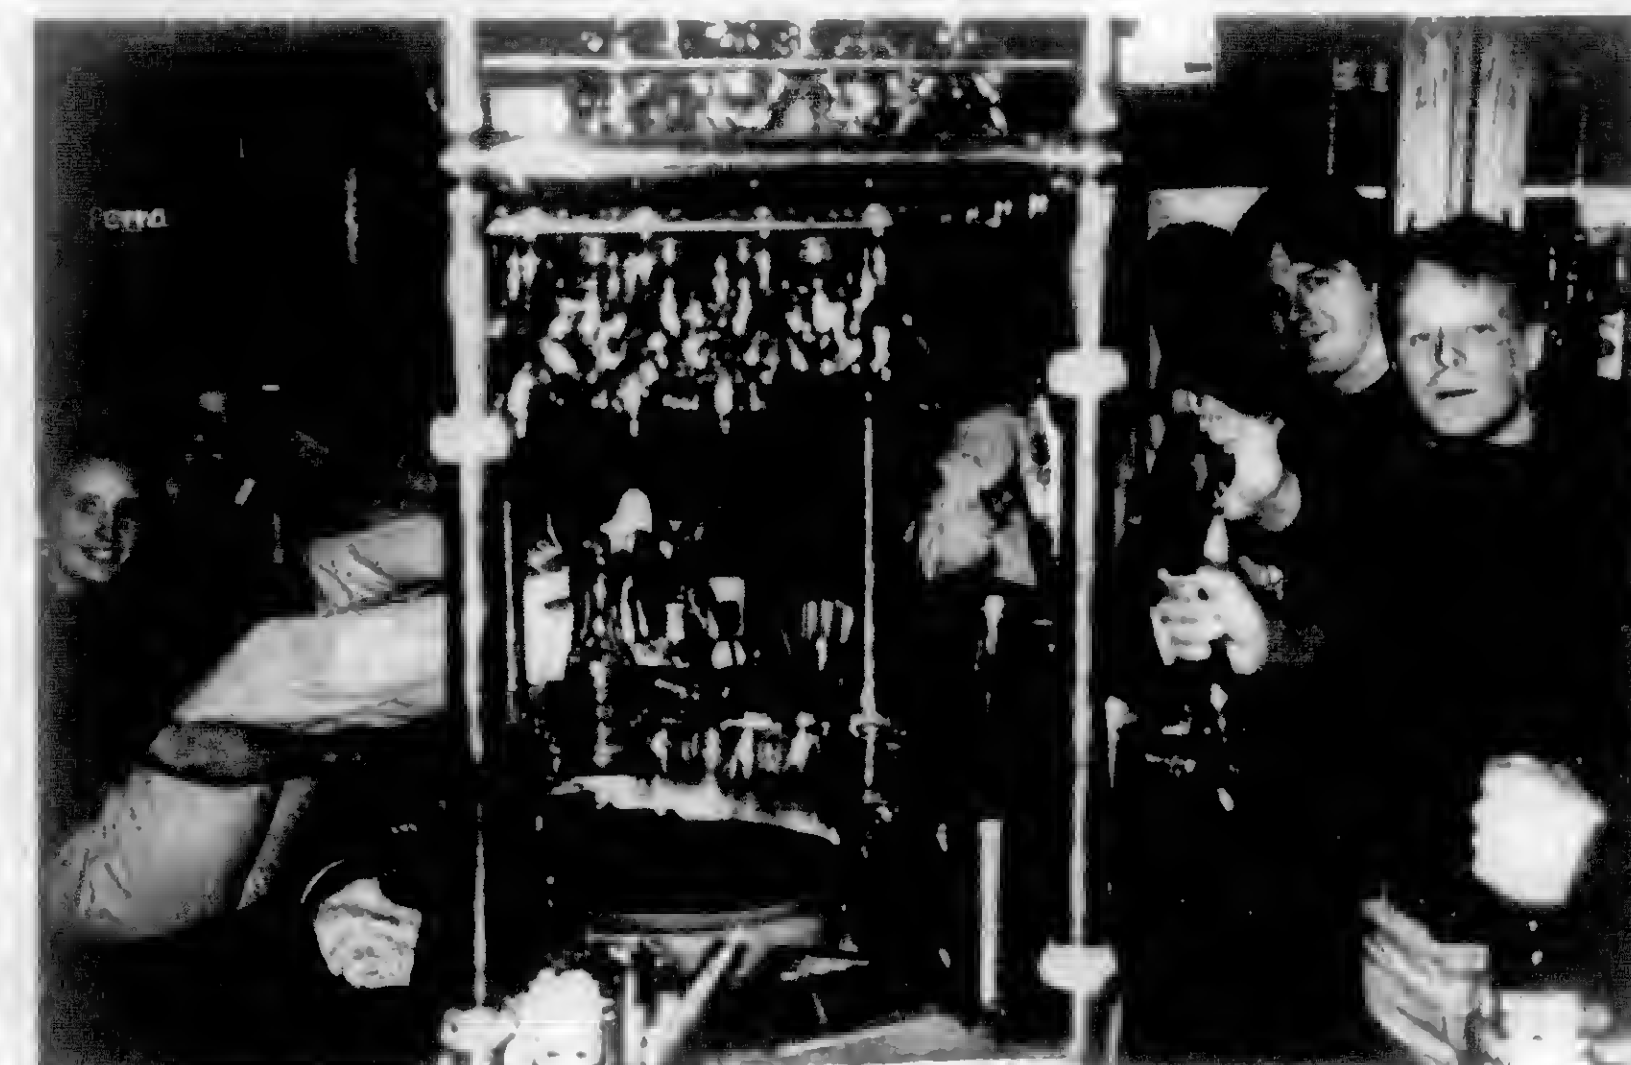

Charlevoix's week-long raucous bash

By L. Scott Swanson
It's a story which has been kept under wraps for decades. But now, following weeks and weeks of slinking around in trench coats and big brimmed hats and countless covert interviews in dark, out-of-the-way places, the Courier's crack investigative reporting unit is bringing this story to light. As one Courier staff member said, "When we break this one, don't be surprised if the O.J. trial soon finds itself relegated to the back pages."

Up until now they've never known about it, but people who leave Charlevoix for spring break miss one of northern Michigan's wildest week-long parties. That's right. As soon as the people leaving Charlevoix to spend spring break in warmer parts of the world get out of town, those of us who are left cast responsible and productive behavior unto the wind. The whole city of Charlevoix becomes the setting for a week-long raucous party filled with fun and merriment the likes of which have never been seen in Florida or Cancun.

The reason for the party is simple. One reveler who has stayed in Charlevoix during spring break for years explains it by saying, "What do those people who are leaving for Florida to play and soak up sunshine think the rest of us are going to do while they're away. Sit around in the cold and work hard? Guess again!"

To keep the party a secret, one of Charlevoix hosts an annual spring break week-long bash for those of us who don't go anywhere for spring break. Nobody works during that week, so all of the local bars, restaurants etc. are serve-yourself. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury) the first things that happens is that the police chief gets out some of that yellow crime scene tape and cordons off the whole town. This is just a Charlevoix party. People from other towns aren't invited.

After the borders are secured the festivities begin. (For an idea of some of the main activities, see the accompanying schedule of events.)

Among the first problems to be dealt with is the cold temperatures of Charlevoix in the early spring. To get the temperature up to a comfortable level, a delegation is dispatched to open up all of the houses of people who are on vacation, turn their thermostats way up and open their windows to heat the outside world.

No work gets done. Oh, people go to places where they work, but they don't work while they're there. For waitresses and bartenders this is a real good deal since restaurants and bars are pretty fun places to hang out when you don't have to work. Other businesses aren't innately entertaining so the employees have to be a little more creative.

At car dealerships, the salesmen either go joyriding or drag racing in the shiny new cars. Local factories square off in the Charlevoix Industrial Games. It's kind of like the Olympics, but the emphasis is on mayhem rather than athletic ability. The double-dutch jump roping competition is popular and some of the finest engineering minds in Charlevoix use high powered industrial computers to calculate the best trajectory to win the distance

City budget adopted at special meeting

By L. Scott Swanson

At a special Saturday noon meeting the city council approved the 1995-96 fiscal year budget. The motion to adopt the budget passed by a 4-1 vote. Second ward council member Gabe Campbell voted against adopting the budget and the other second ward council member, Butch Russell was absent.

Campbell had voiced concern about staffing levels at the city fire department. At the March 20 council meeting, Campbell was joined by Russell and first ward council member Don Meggison in voting against adoption of the budget. Meggison voted in favor of adopting the budget Saturday.

At Saturday's special meeting the issue of fire department staffing was again discussed. Campbell favored cutting the number of full-time firemen from four to three members to reduce costs. He pointed out that up until approximately two years ago the fire department functioned with three full time firemen. After a fourth was hired the city lost the contract to provide fire protection for Hayes Township. Campbell's position was that the fire department now has a larger staff to do less work.

Approximately 20 full time and volunteer firemen wearing red jackets attended the meeting. Lyle Gennett, one of the fulltime firemen, argued against reducing staff levels.

Gennett said that when there was a three-man staff it was almost impossible to take time off.

"I think the people (who staff the fire department) are entitled to some rest and a normal way of life," he said.

Gennett said that even on days off, one of the firemen must be

Charlevoix spring break party schedule

All of the scheduled events for spring break are completely unscheduled, since everyone is following their riotous, anti-rules and regulations instincts. For those who find themselves cordoned into town for the first time on spring break, here's a rough outline of the unscheduled events: (See related story and photos on pages 1 and 3)

FRIDAY, 5P.M. - People sneak into the homes of departed vacationers and turn the heat up to 90 degrees, then throw open the windows, run outside, and bask in the artificial outdoor warmth.

FRIDAY, 6P.M. - Happy Hour starts downtown. Bar tenders, waiters and waitresses will be relaxing with their feet up on the bar for the last time until next September, so locals are expected to serve themselves. The honor system should be abided by with regard to purchasing drinks. Anyone not playing fairly will be pelted with aging road kill.

SATURDAY, 9A.M. - The Norwegians For A Nude Society will be holding a peaceful demonstration in East Park, weather permitting. Business owners across the street are encouraged to turn their heat up really high and point window fans at the park. Note: This would be April 1 and by this time it should dawn on you that this is the Courier's annual April Fools story.

SATURDAY, Noon - Industrial park businesses will host their double dutch jump roping contest. Spectators are welcome to view the event from the business rooftops.

SATURDAY, After noon, sometime - A big tank truck will cruise through the neighborhoods, playing the 'Barney' theme song and watering the locals. The actual liquid contents of the truck aren't known, but bring your own mug to the street for curbside service.

SATURDAY, evening - Hot Tub Hopping commences as soon as someone finds the keys to the area hot tubs under the owners' back door mats. Bathing suits and flippers are optional. Shatterproof margarita glasses are recommended.

MONDAY, all day - Car dealer employees and their immediate family and friends meet on U.S. 31 to drag race the new, 1995 models. Spectators may ride along provided they bring their own motion sickness bags.

TUESDAY THROUGH FRIDAY - Limbo dancing and Jimmy Buffet look-alike contests held on the shuffleboard courts in East Park. Sunbathing allowed on the docks of the city marina. The city's "Thong Bikinis Permitted Here" ordinance will be strictly adhered to.

FRIDAY, after dark - Iceberg diving exhibitions held off the stern of the Acacia. Similar to the cliff diving exhibitions held in Alcapulco, these divers must try to find open water to hit between the ice floes. A dramatic light show will be produced by the eight middle school students left in town. They will be using wooden matches, sticks of punk, and underwater flashlights to create the spectacular, laser-like, lighting extravaganza.

SATURDAY, all day - 'Chicken' contests with the big snowplows will take place on Bridge Street. Spectators should not stand too close to the curbs for this event. Losers will be sent to Beaver Island to grade King's Highway.

SUNDAY - Community Clean-up Day. Similar to Petunia planting day, everyone should report curbside with a broom and a trash bag. All of the week's litter will be picked up in one hour. After the garbage truck passes your block, please go in your neighbor's house and turn the thermostats back to normal. Close all doors and windows, and turn off the lights on your way out.

signed on for ambulance service. He said that although the fire department functioned for years with only three fulltime firemen, it never functioned properly.

Don Meggison said he feels the department has additional state mandates that it didn't have to contend with for many of the years when it was staffed by three people.

Jerry Meggison, president of the fire department volunteers spoke in favor of leaving the fulltime staff level at four. He said with staff levels at four, the volunteer firemen receive more training, the fire department equipment is better maintained and the department can provide more services such as arson investigation.

Former mayor Dave Novotny, reading from a prepared statement, said the move to cut the fire department from four to three staff members is not motivated by budgetary considerations, but instead is residue from a fire department controversy which occurred during his administration. He characterized it as a vendetta by a small group of uninformed people.

Third ward council member Bruce Reid, first ward council member Cheri Hoffman and mayor Josh Barnes said they felt the issue was a policy rather than a budgetary matter and should be discussed separately from budgetary considerations.

Prior to adopting the budget, the council briefly discussed a proposed 12.5 percent increase in water rates. Council members said the increase is necessary to keep the water fund solvent and have cash reserves increase to the level recommended by auditors.

The city's fiscal year begins April 1.

event in the water balloon competition. A lot of thought also goes into designing cars for the soapbox derby down Bridge Street Hill. In recent years speeds have improved, partially because drivers now all compete naked to cut down wind resistance.

The downtown area is kind of loud during spring break week. People toot car horns a lot and blow the sirens on emergency vehicles whenever the mood strikes them. The noon whistle blows out about a half dozen times each day and every time it does, people throw down what they're doing and go find something to eat. In Charlevoix, that's just force of habit.

All of the stores, restaurants and bars are serve yourself. Payment is on the honor system. You just leave the cash and the business owners count it up when they get around to it at the end of the week. The system works out well. People are having too much fun to try anything dishonest. If anybody ever did try stealing anything, they'd probably be arrested by the kids who want to grow up to be policemen and consequently are filling in for the real police force during spring break week.

Almost as if the place were Beaver Island, normal rules of civilization are relaxed a bit in Charlevoix during the week-long party. Still, there are still a few rules that have to be followed. For example, even though anybody can go for a ride on a fire truck or semi truck whenever they want to, you have to be at least ten years old to drive.

At a preset time at the end of the week, everybody turns out and cleans up the place in one hour. The organization and efficiency of the effort is amazing. It serves as a great rehearsal for Operation Petunia.

After the party is over and all of the evidence is buried, people settle back into their normal routine, resting up and preparing to lie to the people who left town upon their return. When people return from spring vacation they always brag about how warm it was and how much fun they had and then ask, "So what went on in town while I was away?"

In Charlevoix, people who stayed just shrug their shoulders and say, "Oh, not much. It was pretty quiet, pretty quiet." Meanwhile, on the inside they're laughing over what has up until now been Charlevoix's best kept secret.

Editor's note: For those of you who have yet to figure this out, this is the Courier's last edition prior to April 1. If we were going to do an April Fools' story, now would be the time to do it. For those of you who are leaving town and those of you who are staying, we wish you a wonderful spring vacation and Happy April Fools' Day.

OPINIONS

Editor's notes

One of the things you discover as the parent of pre-school children is how dependent your schedule becomes on day-care. Currently the challenge is spring break. With the babysitter on vacation with her family during spring break, provisions need to be made for alternate day care. As parents you soon develop a Plan B and a Plan C should that not work out. If you're fortunate enough to have grandmas in the area, that's always a great help. Nieces are another alternative.

At least babysitter vacations come with due warning. Having your child become ill in the middle of the night is a bigger adventure. Then, alternative plans have to be made fast.

The two-parent working family and the accompanying challenges it brings are without a doubt one of the most interesting societal aspects of this era.

Once again the NCAA basketball tournament is being followed closely at the Courier office. We've got six people in a contest to pick the winners. Courier staff members Laurie Lounsbury, Kyle Smith and L. Scott Swanson have been joined by Tom Kenny, Bill Dreyer and Dave McCormick. This year we've added a new twist to the contest. Last year we just picked the winners in each round. The number of points you got was equivalent to the number of games you picked correctly. The problem with that system was that even if you didn't know much about the teams, all you had to do was pick the favorites and you still had a pretty good shot. This year we decided to award extra points for picking upsets. This year if you pick a favored team and it wins, you get one point. But if you pick an underdog and it wins, you get one point plus the difference of points in the ranking of the two teams. For example when number 12 ranked Stanford beat number 3 ranked University of North Carolina Charlotte in the first round, those who had picked Stanford picked up 12 points. Interestingly enough, four out of six people had picked Stanford. On the other hand nobody envisioned Weber State beating Michigan State.

Going into the final four Kenny leads with 59, Smith has 58, McCormick 53, Swanson 50, Lounsbury 50 and Dreyer 42. We've still got to polish the system a bit more since it now offers too much of a reward for picking upsets. Perhaps next year we'll have it to the point where we can open it up to the public and do something similar to the Courier football contest we do in the fall.

As the weather warms up, both people and animals are coming out for the spring. On warm days Charlevoix sidewalks have been active with walkers. Bicyclers and roller bladers are also beginning to appear. Softball and baseball players are just now beginning to get outdoors to tune up their arms for the coming season. The first time you go out and play catch in the spring is always interesting. Your arm tends to feel like a noodle until it gets back in shape.

Deer can be seen almost any evening in the fields in the country surrounding Charlevoix. Turkeys, which only a few years ago were a novelty, are also easy to spot during an evening drive. With this year's mild winter, hunters can expect plenty of game in the field during hunting season this year.

EDITH

by EDITH GILBERT

The new Charlevoix Country Club opened its doors to an enthusiastic group of members on St. Patrick's Day. Guests mingled at the impressive hand-carved bar and strolled through the spacious dining room, which is surrounded by a wide porch. The burgundy and hunter green decor is restful. The high beamed ceiling catches the sound. A massive stone fireplace in the center of the room gives a sense of intimacy. The dining room seats 100 with additional room for 100 more diners on the glassed in porch.

Kevin Dunn is the happy chef in charge of the dining room and he proudly greeted his guests. A graduate of Notre Dame, he majored in economics, business and law. He abandoned the corporate world in favor of returning to school at the Culinary Institute at Hyde Park. Since graduation, he has been associated with various four star restaurants, and for the last four years, he was executive chef and general manager for the Kellogg Company. He is pleased to bring his sous chef, Harry Wine, with him from Battle Creek.

It makes one's mouth water to hear Dunn talk about his specialties — wood grilled salmon with a light basil sauce, roasted sweet corn soup with cilantro pesto, and fieldstone bread that is crisp on the outside, brushed with olive oil, basil, oregano, Parmesan cheese and served with Amish butter.

Best of all, his attitude toward any special diet is refreshing. He also plans to offer a free style, low fat/cholesterol menu prepared with natural foods, fresh herbs and no added salt.

The charming white clubhouse is set on 550 acres, surrounded by an 18 hole rolling golf course, off US 31. The dream began in 1987 by a small group of visionaries. This far, 43 lots have been sold on the surrounding property and 10 attractive homes have been built, one of which has an indoor swimming pool. Various types of memberships are available such as full memberships, seasonal memberships or social memberships for non golfers. A swimming pool for members only is in the offing as are tennis courts.

The Charlevoix County Club ushers in a new era in the social life of this tightly knit community. Not since the Colonial Club was raided for gambling in 1947, has there been a posh gathering place in Charlevoix for both year 'round residents and summer visitors. Before that, early in this century, the fancy Inn Hotel and the Beach Hotel catered to the summer crowd in dining rooms that accommodated 500 people. Here they held tango teas during prohibition on summer afternoons.

An article from the Charlevoix Courier, dated August 1919, describes one of the functions at the Inn Hotel.

"The grand ball of the season was held in the Inn ballroom for the benefit of the Charlevoix Hospital, Saturday evening, Aug. 7. Dancing started at 8:30 and lasted until 11:30. There were hundreds present, beautifully frocked ladies and society from all sides of Charlevoix — Belvedere, Chicago Club, Beach, Pine lake and inside. The cottages were well represented also."

Not to be out-done, the annual Charlevoix Chauffeur's Ball proved to be equally successful in behalf of the local hospital. Jules Stein's "jazz band" from the Beach Hotel "made a big hit with the crowd!"

Between Prohibition, two World Wars and a Depression, seventy five years have passed since the grand ball of the season was mentioned in the Courier. It's now possible, as they say, that what goes around, comes around and we may again see "some beautifully frocked ladies and society from all sides of Charlevoix" socializing together as they did before at the very attractive, new Charlevoix Country Club.

Letters to the editor

Islander disagrees with road decision

Editor,

On March 13, 1995 Judge Richard Pajtas, Circuit Court Judge for the County of Charlevoix, entered a decision against the residents and visitors of Beaver Island that will have an effect on the Island, perhaps the county, for the foreseeable future.

I have the highest respect for Judge Pajtas, the questions that he asked during our litigation, showed that he was truly interested in making a just decision. However, I can not agree with his ruling.

The last line of his order states that "This case warrants attention from another branch of government." I cannot help but wonder where that "branch of government" resides. The very fact that the people of Beaver Island had to take the Charlevoix County Road Commission to this level of action is almost beyond the comprehension of most citizens, let alone any level of elected official we approached about this situation.

Judge Pajtas has basically said that no matter how poorly the County Road Commission carries out its financial duties, no matter how badly they destroy a road, the people who drive the road in question apparently have no legal recourse that holds the road commission accountable to their assigned task, i.e., to maintain the roads in a manner safe and convenient for public travel.

The law that the court quotes, stating that a Road Commission may make "improvements" at its discretion (MCL 224.19, MSA 9.119), has been stretched to its "legal breaking" point by this order. The Legislators that passed this law couldn't have imagined that a road commission would come in and destroy a hard surfaced main thoroughfare, replace it with gravel, and call it an "improvement."

I can only imagine what the court would have ruled had this road been the main thoroughfare going into Boyne City, East Jordan, or perhaps even a side street that runs past the Charlevoix Township Fire Dept. If the Charlevoix County Road Commission ever decides to "improve" these roads in the same manner they "improved" the main road leading into St. James, past our school, past our Medical Center and the only reasonable way for our fire department to access the homes and property south of Town, just remember (paraphrasing the court's ruling, pg. 9, 2nd paragraph) you are only being inconvenienced in the colloquial sense and not in the statutory sense.

Apparently, it does not matter how dusty, or muddy, the road gets. It does not matter how severely your vehicle bounces on the washboard. It does not matter how slowly fire trucks and ambulances have to drive to respond to emergencies. All of these conditions are considered "SAFE AND CONVENIENT" in the eyes of the law, and an improvement in the eyes of the Charlevoix County Road Commission.

Editor,

My brother and I live in New York, but go to Charlevoix during the summer. We've spent every summer there (we are 10 and 8). My Mom has spent all her summers in Charlevoix as well as our grandparents, great-grandparents, and great-great grandparents.

A lot has changed in the last couple of years in Charlevoix. A few years ago the drug store in town closed where we used to get sodas at the counter. It was replaced by a Subway shop, a big chain. Big, huge houses have been built by the lake and really close to the water so that you can see them from all over. We don't see as many trees as we used to out on the lake. This last summer, Bellingers and the Parkside both said they were closing. Bellingers will be replaced by another big house and the Parkside to become another store. We liked having Bellingers on Round Lake. Round Lake is special and until the past few years it was in some parts untouched.

My Dad has a subscription to the Courier and we were very sad when we saw the headline "City seeks grant to purchase and tear down former Parkside Restaurant." We hate to see the building torn down, but we really hope you will not build another new building in its place. The Parkside looks like all the buildings in town. The mall across the street looks too new, and we also read a new movie theater will be built. What was wrong with the old theater? Soon the only original structure will be the bridge!! How will the town remain pretty?

For all the kids in Charlevoix, year around and summer kids please don't build another building where the Parkside stands. You ought to think what "Keep Charlevoix Beautiful" will mean to the next generation.

Sincerely,
Jocelyn and Bennet Florence

Middle school wrestling coach appreciated

Editor,

Many Charlevoix citizens may not know that over a decade, Gregg Whitley has taken about 3 hours daily away from his business during the month of February and March. His time and efforts are for the youth of Charlevoix.

Saturday, March 18, he successfully guided two dozen boys from Charlevoix and other area schools in a fine wrestling tournament. He was assisted by high school grapplers as well as past wrestlers.

They put together 34 weight divisions involving 261 young boys and girls from nine other schools from northern Michigan. There were a total of 498 bouts including a blind person from Rogers City who placed 4th in an eight person bracket.

Gregg has been taking almost every Saturday in March so our young grapplers can compete in area tournaments.

Take some time to thank this young businessman who becomes a big brother, guardian and an adopted parent in formulating self pride and commitment.

Gregg Whitley has exemplified Charlevoix Community Spirit.

Health Department home health care accredited

Full accreditation with special commendations has been awarded to the Home Health Division of District Health Department No. 3, by the Community Health Accreditation Program, Inc. (CHAP), a division of the National League for Nursing.

The Home Health Division of the Health Department provides a full range of health care services, from nursing to IV therapy, rehabilitation to recovery services for home bound people, from senior citizens to newborns.

CHAP especially commended the Home Health Division for "providing quality services regardless of ability to pay."

According to spokespersons for CHAP, this accreditation "ensures that the care you are receiving is the best you can get."

"CHAP accredited organizations earn this gold seal by providing high quality care and having the financial resources to maintain a high level of quality."

CHAP's standards for accreditation meet or are higher than all government requirements for Medicare certification, according to the organization's literature.

Accreditation is only awarded after an exhaustive study of the agency, a complete review of all its practices which includes unannounced visits.

"Accreditation tells our clients and their families that they are receiving the highest quality care in their homes and that our services are recognized and reimbursable by such insurers as Medicare, Medicaid, and Blue Cross-Blue Shield," according to Nancy Bottomley, R.N., Adult Health Services Director.

Some 62 nurses, therapists, social workers, nutritionists and other health care professionals make up the Home Health Services Division. They work directly with a client's personal physician as well as the family to provide the best possible care for people in the comfort of their own home.

"It is well known that people get better quicker and are able to live independently for a longer period in the comfort of their own home," noted Bottomley.

She explained that while the majority of the Home Health Services clients were home bound older adults, the services are available to people of all ages.

"A client may be an older adult who is recovering from a stroke, an auto accident victim who needs physical therapy at home, a newborn with special needs, someone dealing with a serious illness such as cancer who needs IV therapy, or a person with diabetes who needs help as they learn to manage their condition," the director explained.

"Our staff works as a team, constantly assessing how we can better serve our clients."

Field of eight quickly trimmed down to one

Following the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners' appointment of Bill Korthase to the Charlevoix County Road Commission, Dan Skrzeczkoski commented, "I see the good ol' boy system is alive and working well."

No bus shows for Islanders

The Beaver Islanders haven't had much luck dealing with the county on transportation matters lately. In the last two weeks they lost their lawsuit with the Charlevoix County Road Commission, they had their candidate for the road commission rejected, and then they got stood up by the Charlevoix County Transit Bus System. A group of islanders flew into the Boyne City airport for the March 22 county commissioner meeting. Peaine Township Supervisor Joan Petrak had made arrangements for the transit bus to pick the islanders up at the airport and drive them the two miles into town. Petrak said she repeatedly told the dispatcher they would be flying into the Boyne City airport. In spite of it all, the dispatcher sent a bus to the Charlevoix airport, where it sat for 30 minutes while the driver watched for incoming planes. Transit director Art Sawarski maintained that no specific airport had been mentioned, and the busy dispatcher assumed the islanders would fly into Charlevoix.

When the Islanders found no green bus at the airport, they started walking into town. Paul Nelson, who owns a second home on Beaver Island, saw the islanders making their trek down the road and gave them a ride to the meeting. "This is the straw that broke the camel's back," islander Richie Gillespie said of the incident. "We've paid nearly $180,000 in transit mileage for the last 15 years and we couldn't even get one ride on a bus."

12 years experience with the road commission. With a field of eight men to consider, the commissioners wasted no time appointing Korthase to the job. Commissioners waived the opportunity to postpone their decision two weeks so they could consider the candidates.

"I can't believe you're going to make this appointment without more interviews and deliberation," Skrzeczkoski said to the board. Skrzeczkoski is the chairman of the Charlevoix county chapter of the Michigan Township Association.

Korthase was the unanimous choice after the board rejected commissioner Richard Gillespie's nomination, Dave Duda of Beaver Island. "Why did I have to go through all of that when it was already decided that Bill Korthase would get the appointment?" Gillespie asked the day after the meeting. "I can't believe the county chairman did not take the time to inform me that this was a done deal, so I could have spared the islanders making an unnecessary trip," he added. Ten islanders flew to Boyne City in order to attend the commissioner meeting. Duda said, "I hope whoever you appoint is fair and equitable. Not just considering population but in the number of dollars the townships bring into the county."

Korthase was chairman Don

Smith's selection for the job because he has road commission experience and is a good friend of road commissioner Wayne Saunders. "Bill Korthase and Wayne Saunders will work together to get this problem resolved," Smith said after the appointment was made. The problem Smith referred to was road manager Larry Hamlin. Hamlin has been accused of being the cause of low morale and communication problems at the road commission. During a question and answer period with the candidates, Korthase was the only nominee to say that he was aware of the problem with the manager and thought it should be tended to quickly.

Other candidates for the road commission seat were Errol Lee, chairman of the Melrose Township Zoning Board of Appeals and retired construction supervisor; Joseph Donnellan, a Wilson Township Trustee; James Wiltjer of Bay Township, retired owner of an excavation company with road construction experience; Wayne Boss, a land surveyor, and civil engineer. Bill Joy of Charlevoix Township, vice president of Petoskey Electric Motor, and Duda, a retired project engineer from Wisconsin, and Keith Ogden of Wilson Township, a recently retired foreman and manager of the Oakland County Road Commission.

BUSINESS

Julia Tucker

Charlevoix personified

Staying busy is not a problem for Tucker

By Laurie Lounsbury
When Julia Tucker rolled the dice seven years ago, they came up 7-Eleven. Tucker used to be an employee of 7-Eleven in Hillsdale. When Tucker reached the top of the management ladder downstate, she decided to roll the dice and take a chance at being a franchise owner. The 7-Eleven mini mart in Charlevoix was available. So Tucker, her husband Tom, and daughter Autumn came to Charlevoix in 1988. Since then, Tucker has quickly become a valuable member of the community.

Tucker recently won two awards from the 7-Eleven parent company, Garb-Ko Inc. One award was the Excellence and Quality award for the high standards Tucker maintains in her store. The other award came as a complete surprise to Tucker. She received the President's Award, which commended her community service and extra efforts at the store and with her customers.

In a small town like Charlevoix, it doesn't take long for people to get to know a new face in town. Especially when that face is Tucker's and she's greeting customers at 7-Eleven for ten to 12 hours a day. Tucker works brutally long days in the summer, but still finds time to be involved with the community. She served three years on the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce board. She devotes a great deal of time to the Merchants Retail Promotion Committee. Most recently, Tucker accepted a seat on the planning commission and the transportation committee. "The only thing I've stayed away from is the Venetian committee. I'm afraid they might catch me this year," Tucker said lightly.

Tucker's husband Tom is a Great Lakes seaman, spending most of his summer working on commercial freighters. "He's gone all summer, which is probably a good thing, since I'm gone so much and when I come home I'm whipped," Tucker said.

Tucker is glad she added a take out liquor license to the business. The liquor sales have provided enough additional income to let her take a few hours off every now and then. Her goal this year is to get out on the water and take sailing lessons. "Usually, in the summer I'm so busy if I can get my lawn mowed, I'm lucky," she said.

Pat McKeown

The Pat McKeown Ford Dealership in Charlevoix was selected as one of the nation's outstanding Ford dealerships and will receive Ford Motor Company's Distinguished Achievement Award For Quality. This award is presented in recognition of progressive management, sound merchandising practices, high quality standards, and continuing interest in rendering superior service to Ford owners.

Joe Trojanek, who owns and operates the Sears retail dealer store in Charlevoix, recently completed a three-day, advanced training course that further developed expertise for name-brand products offered at the store. This specialized Sears training, known as "Dealerama," occurs twice per year and is available for Sears authorized retail dealers nationwide.

"These training sessions provide in-depth reviews of exclusive Sears brands, along with products from leading manufacturers such as General Electric, Whirlpool, RCA and others," said Beverly Chaney, national training manager for Sears dealer stores. "Sears dealers leave with a stronger brand knowledge so they can offer the best product solutions to customers in their local stores."

Realtors with Re/Max of Charlevoix were recently honored by the Re/Max Real Estate system for outstanding sales and service in 1994. They received their awards at the Re/Max of Michigan 16th Annual Regional Conference held February 9-11, 1995 at the Grand Traverse Resort in Traverse City.

Katherine Engle received the Re/Max President's Club Award for helping between 12-21 families with their real estate transactions in 1994, which is above the national industry average of 7.6 transactions per year. Gregory Bryan and Judy Petkewicz were each awarded Executive Club honors for 22-35 real estate transactions (3 to 5 times the industry average). Broker/Owner

Dave Campbell, Steve Andreae, and Joseph Vogelhelm were each presented with the prestigious Re/Max 100 Percent Club Award for helping 36 or more families with their real estate transactions (5 times the industry average).

Ross Gibson, M.A., LLP, has accepted the position of Adult Services Director for the Community Consultation and Treatment division of Northern Michigan Community Mental Health. The appointment became effective March 13. Gibson was the former Center Supervisor for the Otsego office of Community Mental Health.

Middle School wrestlers complete their season

Anthony Cesaro, a sixth grader wrestling at 70 pounds entered the Benzie tournament undefeated. He left the Benzie tournament the same way - undefeated. Cesaro took first place in all three tournaments the Rayders participated in this year. Saturday he pinned his first opponent and decided the next two, 9-2 and 7-3.

Brett Probert also took first place for the Rayders Saturday. Probert got a bye in the first match, won his second on a 9-8 decision and took the championship on a pin.

Charlevoix wrestlers placing second at the Benzie meet were Tony Miller, Josh Christ, Tyson Potter, Jordan Burke, James Pop and Derrick Leitner.

Whitley noted that when Christ received his medal, he was smiling from ear to ear - and was nearly as happy and excited as his father, Phil Christ, a former high school and college wrestler who helps Whitley with the middle school team.

Pop went two and one on the day, losing for only the second time this season. Whiteley said the opponent Pop lost to took third in the state free style tournament last year. Leitner's only loss Saturday also was to a state free style medalist. In the match he won on a pin, Leitner executed a front cradle hold so well that as soon as he got it, coaches watching the match were thinking to themselves - This party's over. It's only a matter of time until that other guy's pinned.

Whitley said that Pop, Leitner, Brian Thanisiu and Jarrod Hoffman are part of a promising eighth grade group he's looking forward to working with in the high school program.

Hoffman placed third Saturday while Thanius went two and two took a fourth. Whitley said Thanius is wrestling for the first time this year. In his first meet at Cheboygan he got thrashed. Whitley said that after the first meet, he was kind of afraid the kid might pack it in and go home. But that didn't happen. Thanius stuck around, paid attention, worked hard and learned. In the Charlevoix and Benzie Central meets Thanius wrestled tough. For Thanius the difference from the beginning of the year to the end of the year was like night and day. Whitley said his progress was a real tough. For Thanisiu the difference from the beginning of the year to the end of the year was like night and day. Whitley said his progress was a real bright spot for the Charlevoix team.

Seventh grade wrestler John Belfy, like Thanisnu, had to do a character check after a loss. Saturday, Belfy suffered a tough 5-2 loss in his opening match and Whitley wasn't sure how he would respond in his next match. But things worked out. After a bye in the second round, Belfy won on a pin in the third round and on a 14-3 decision in his final match. "He came on like a true champion when he got beat," Whitley said. "He's coming along by leaps and bounds."

Burke, a sixth grader, is a first year wrestler who finished the season with only one loss. Jarrod Hodge, Steve Hart and Ben Spiegel each placed third Saturday and wrestled very well.

Whitley said Luke Whitley had a tough day Saturday, but on the season wrestled well. At every meet this year, Luke Whitley has found himself one of the meet's toughest groups, but still gets on the mat and rumbles. On one of his matches Saturday, he was leading 10-8, but made a mistake and ended up getting pinned.

Also wrestling for Charlevoix Saturday, but not receiving medals were Delos Lanterman, Russell Williams, Andrew Lemon and Jeffery Golovich.

Assisting Whitley in coaching the middle school team were Jason Whitley, Phil Christ and Pat Whitley.

Whitley said the Charlevoix Middle School tournament is one of the best in Michigan and one that other schools envy and attempt to emulate. He said that the tournament is similar to the one he coached at in recent years.

said the tournament's success is due to the involvement of parents, Charlevoix High School wrestling alumni and other people who support wrestling in Charlevoix. As an example of what makes the tournament successful, Whitley said former coach Norm Probert spends the entire day at the microphone serving as tournament announcer. He said that with Probert's knowledge of both the sport and tournament logistics, he's able to keep both participants and spectators informed and either correct or head off any wrinkles in the tournament.

Christ will be working with a group of wrestlers in a greco and free style club which will be starting in the next few weeks. For additional information, phone 547-5816.

Camp Daggett registering 1995 campers

Camp Daggett is now accepting registrations for its 70th season. Located on the western shore of Walloon Lake, Camp Daggett's mission is "to provide a quality, character-building experience for children which fosters respect for the out-of-doors through educational and recreational activities."

Sessions begin June 18 and end August 12. Both boys and girls, ages 7 to 14, are accepted for the one-week sessions, arriving on Sunday and departing on Saturday. Emmet and Charlevoix County youngsters pay $160 for a one week session; children who do not reside in this area pay $240.

Camp director Scott Okerlund encourages campers to sign-up early to ensure an opening will be available. Registration forms are available from Okerlund at 347-9742.

Burning to be banned

The Department of Natural Resources and area fire departments are reminding people who are doing spring cleaning on their lawns that, if they plan to burn grass, leaves or brush, they first need to obtain a burning permit. To obtain a permit, phone 547-0086.

There will be a moratorium on burning permits from April 15 through May 14. In an effort to prevent spring grass fires, no burning will be allowed for that month.

City revises purchasing policy, lowers spending limit

By a 4-2 vote the city council has taken the first step toward reducing the discretionary spending limit for city department heads from $10,000 to $5,000. At the March 20 council meeting the council directed city attorney Jim Young to draft an ordinance change that would require all city purchases in excess of $5,000 to have council approval.

Currently purchases of less than $10,000 can be made with the approval of department heads and not the council. However there are provisions requiring department heads to get competitive price quotes before making the purchases. There are also provisions for those quotes and purchasing decisions to be reviewed by the city treasurer, city manager and ultimately by the council when bills are approved. However those reviews are done after the fact.

Second ward council member Gabe Campbell, who was joined in supporting the reduction by Butch Russell, Jackie Cross and Don Meggison, raised the issue at the Feb. 20 council meeting. At that time, he said he doesn't see the issue as one of mistrust, but just as a matter of good business. He said he feels that purchases costing more than $5,000 should be brought before the council for consideration.

At the March 20 meeting, Campbell suggested having all purchases in excess of $5,000 with the exception of purchases for electrical emergencies approved by council. Mayor Josh Barnes said he doesn't like to see spending limits that include subjective terms such as emergency.

Council members Cheri Hoffman and Bruce Reid opposed reducing the discretionary spending limit. Hoffman said she has no problem with the current policy. Reid said,

"If it ain't broke, don't fix it. I've never seen any impropriety or anything to warrant change."

At the February meeting, Russell said he had reservations about awarding engineering contracts without competitive bids. Cross said much of the debate about the discretionary purchasing limit goes back to a public safety study which city manager Mike Wiesner authorized a couple of years ago. Cross said he views that as a past and dead issue. However he added that people in his ward had told him they feel a $10,000 discretionary limit is too high.

Cross said that personally, he doesn't see a problem with a $10,000 limit, but added, "If people in my ward want to see something dropped, I've got to go that way."

Wiesner opposed the change. In regard to the engineering issue, he said that engineering is a professional service and consequently something where the lowest price doesn't always equate to the best deal. He said the city has several projects in the works and that city staff members are working at a maximum level, some routinely working 50 to 60 hours per week. He said that city spending records have been reviewed and he feels city money is being well spent.

"Please don't tie our hands further. Let us work for you and get these projects out," Wiesner said to the council.

Campbell said he doesn't wish to require sealed competitive bids for all purchases of more than $5,000 nor does he wish to lock the city into taking the lowest bid. However, he wants to have all purchases of items costing more than $5,000 come before the city council.

Official Notice

ORDINANCE NO. 621 AN ORDINANCE TO ACKNOWLEDGE LIENS FOR WATER AND/OR SEWER SERVICE, TO SET CONDITIONS FOR INSTALLMENT PAYMENTS OF CERTAIN CONNECTION FEES AND TO PROVIDE FOR LIEN ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

THE CITY OF CHARLEVOIX ORDAINS THAT SECTIONS 2.141, 2.142, 2.143 AND 2.144 ARE HEREBY ADDED TO CHAPTER 24 OF TITLE II OF THE CHARLEVOIX CITY CODE AND THESE SECTIONS SHALL READ AS FOLLOWS:

2.141 Liens. Pursuant to Act 178 of 1939, as amended, the City shall have a lien for the collections of water or sewer system rates, assessments, tap-in fees, privilege fees or any other fee or charge relating to water or sewer services or connections. This lien shall be on any structure, lot or lots on which a structure is located, or on any land to which sewer system service or water service has been connected or supplied. This lien shall become effective immediately upon the distribution or connection of the water or sewer service in the property being supplied, but shall not be enforceable for more than three (3) years. The City Manager or a designee of the City Manager is authorized, but not required, to file a notice of lien with the Register of Deeds to give notice of the existence of any lien or liens. When connection fees may be paid in installments pursuant to Section 2.142, a notice of lien must be filed with the Register of Deeds.

2.142 Installment Payments. I connection fees to a commercial or industrial facility exceed Twenty-five thousand and 00/100 ($25,000.00) Dollars and if in the determination of the City Council the construction or expansion of the facility will create jobs and provide significant economic benefit to the City, then the Council may permit by resolution the installment payment of connection fees as follows: Not less than one-third (1/3) of all connection fees shall be paid periodically as determined by the Council as long as all connection fees plus interest are fully paid on or before two (2) years from the date of water and/or sewer connection. The resolution shall describe the conditions under which the Council is willing to accept installment payments and shall include, but is not limited to the number of installments, the due date of each installment, the interest rate to be charged, and the amount of each installment payment. The interest rate shall be the bank prime loan rate which is applicable to the week in which the resolution authorizing installment payments has been adopted as published in the Federal Reserve Statistical Release for Selected Interest Rates. A written agreement shall be executed between the City and the owner of the land to which the water and/or sewer service will be connected which contains the terms of the resolution and which grants to the City the right to accelerate unpaid connection fees and which also grants to the City the power of sale to foreclose on the lien; and further provides that these rights may be exercised if there is a default in the terms of the agreement by the owner or assignee of the owner. The agreement shall be in a form approved by the City attorney. The City shall adopt by resolution criteria similar to those criteria used in the City's Industrial Tax Abatement Policy which will be used to determine when a commercial or industrial facility construction or expansion will create jobs and provide significant economic benefit to the City. The term "connection fees" as used in this Ordinance shall mean tap-in fees, privilege fees, or any other fee or charge which arises by virtue of the mere connection to City water and/or sewer services.

2.143 Enforcement.

A. Installment Payments - Acceleration.

If installment payments have been authorized pursuant to Section

2.142 and a default in the installment payment agreement occurs, then the City in its discretion may elect to accelerate the unpaid connection fees. Notice of the acceleration shall be sent by first-class mail to the address shown on City tax rolls.

B. Installment Payments - Foreclosure by Advertisement.

If the City elects to foreclose on a lien for which installment payments have been accelerated, then the procedure for foreclosure by advertisement as described in MCL 600.3201 through MCL 600.3280; MSA 27A.3201 through MSA 27A.3280, as currently amended or later amended, shall be used except as follows:

- (1) Any reference to a Sheriff shall mean the City's Police Chief or the designee of the Police Chief;
- (2) Any reference to a mortgage shall mean the lien described in this Ordinance. The term "mortgagor" shall mean the owner of the land which is subject to the lien at the time the lien came into existence as provided in Section 2.141 and the term "mortgagee" shall mean the City of Charlevoix;
- (3) All lands subject to the lien shall be treated as one (1) parcel and may be sold as one (1) parcel;
- (4) If the City elects to commence foreclosure, then the sum of Seven Hundred and 00/100 ($700.00) Dollars shall be added to the amount owing for unpaid connection fees and unpaid interest. This amount shall be deemed to reimburse the City for staff time, attorney fees, and other expenses not otherwise reimbursed to the City under the foreclosure by advertisement statute.

C. Liens Not Involving Installment Payments.

The City may enforce liens which do not involve installment payments by using the general laws of the State which provide for the enforcement of tax liens.

D. Alternate Remedy.

As an alternative to the procedures provided in subsections B or C above, the City may elect to treat the lien as a debt and may commence legal action against the proper parties to collect such debt.

2.144 Improvement Payments. Often, industrial or commercial property owners considering new construction or significant expansion request that significant improvements or extensions be made to public services or utilities provided by the City such as water, sewer or electric services as well as public roads. As an incentive for the City to undertake such improvements and to complete them promptly, an industrial or commercial property owner typically offers and then agrees to pay for all or part of the cost of the improvements. The City may execute a contract with the industrial or commercial property owner regarding their improvements to be made, the amount which will be paid by the industrial or commercial property owner toward the cost of the improvement and when such payment is due. The contract shall require complete payment of the cost of the improvement at least prior to the commencement of water and/or sewer service to the property.

Charlevoix ponders traffic changes

By L. Scott Swanson

The City of Charlevoix has asked the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) to look at the possibility of changing the traffic flow in downtown Charlevoix. The primary option MDOT will look at is creating a traffic loop by making Bridge Street and State Street one way streets between Park Avenue and either Antrim or Hurlbut. Bridge Street would be one way traveling north and State Street would be one way traveling south.

Dan Lund, MDOT District Traffic Engineer out of MDOT's Cadillac office, said the city's request has been forwarded to Lansing for review. He said he's not sure how long it would take to gather the information. The time frame would depend upon, among other things, whether engineers could use information available from previous traffic studies or have to do additional on-site studies.

Lund said that in southern Michigan, there are a lot of communities that have one-way loop traffic systems in their business district. While not as common in northern Michigan, there are some communities such as Traverse City that have one-way loop traffic patterns.

In addition to moving traffic more efficiently, one of the main benefits is that a one-way loop system can be implemented without having much of an impact on parking. Lund said the only reduction in parking would be near intersections where people have to make turns.

Changing to a loop system also would more than likely affect Park, Clinton, Mason and Antrim Streets between State and Bridge Streets. Those one-block sections of Park and Clinton would be one way streets traveling west while Mason and Antrim would become one-way streets traveling east.

At this time the proposal hasn't been approved by either the state or the city, but is simply being studied.

Council deals with a variety of issues

By L. Scott Swanson

It was hard to define a main item. It was more a matter of a variety of odds and ends on the city council agenda Monday evening.

*The council approved a request from Harbor Industries to temporarily park some environmental equipment on airport property. Ed May, Harbor Industries environmental manager, said the plant needs an area to place equipment while they're cleaning up some soil contamination. May said the company discovered some PCE and TCE in soil around the plant and has been working with the Department of Natural Resources to clean up the soil.

Harbor Industries will be bringing in equipment to clean the soil on site and then return the soil to its present location. A portion of the equipment will be placed on airport property south of the Harbor Industries building, out in front of where the semi trucks are parked. The equipment will cause minimal, if any, disruption of airport traffic. Harbor Industries hopes to start the clean up within the next couple of weeks and finish within 30 days of when they start.

*A public hearing to amend the city's purchasing policy was tabled until the next meeting due to the absence of third ward council member Jackie Cross.

*The council approved a contract with Sleep Inn which calls for Sleep Inn to pay $12,400 (approximately 35 percent) for water line improvements near the intersection of Mercer and Petoskey. The improvements will tie together some existing lines which will help the Sleep Inn project as well as the city water system in general. The contract calls for Sleep Inn to pay the $12,400 at the signing of the contract to do the work. Sleep Inn had forwarded a letter indicating they wanted to pay within seven days of the completion of the work, but the council said no, the city wants the money before work begins.

The water main work is part of a two-project package with the other project involving water main work on Park Avenue near Boulder Park. The council approved a bid of $51,885 from CH Smith to do the work. Work on the Mercer project is to be completed by May 15. Work on the Park project is to be completed by June 15.

*City street superintendent John Martin issued a report on the city's research into a new public refuse pick-up contract. Currently the city has a contract with Waste Management to pick up used appliances, furniture, tires, boards etc. The city and Waste Management have been working on a month-to-month basis. What the city is planning to do now is let a three-year contract out for bids among area waste haulers. Martin explained that in determining what to include in the bid specs, he and other city officials concluded that roadside recycling and hazardous waste collection should be left out. Martin said the county has discussed setting up a roadside recycling program and most household items can be mixed with other household items so they are not liquid and then not be considered hazardous waste. Council members approved putting the contract out for bids without including roadside recycling or hazardous waste collection.

*Council members also discussed work at the airport. An additional expenditure of $32,000 to purchase necessary land and easements was approved. Council members also discussed the need to lengthen the new airport runway by 200 feet in order to allow larger planes to legally use the runway. Mayor Josh Barnes explained that when the survey of the airport was done prior to the improvements, it indicated that the runway only needed to be 4,300 feet long. However, the survey didn't take into consideration some larger airplanes which have used the airport for years and which require a 4,500 foot runway. The city is now considering various means of correcting the problem. Barnes said the airport advisory committee is scheduled to meet and discuss the problem within the next few weeks.

*During public comments the council was questioned and criticized by Bob Timms and Billie Smith for waiting until the last minute to review and adopt the city budget. Timms questioned why a special meeting took place at noon

Castle Farm continues to seek funding

By Laurie Lounsbury

Castle Farms may find itself under new ownership in the near future. It may become the property of Marion Township - it also may revert back into the hands of Art Reibel. It will continue to be owned by the Castle Farms group if they are able to come up with the second payment installment of $250,000 by June 21. The new executive director of the project, John Porter, is looking at all of the options.

One option being pursued by Porter and the new castle board is to get Department of Natural Resources (DNR) grant funding. In order for Castle Farms to qualify for the DNR grant money, the Castle must be owned by a governmental agency. Marion Township supervisors have taken the first step towards ownership of Castle Farms. The township board passed a resolution to adopt the county recreation plan, which was a necessary step to qualify for DNR grant money. According to Porter, the township doesn't need to make a commitment to own the property until the DNR approves the grant. "This is a fall back position as far as I'm concerned," Porter said of the arrangement with Marion Township.

Sonja Martin, Marion Township treasurer, was the only township board member to vote against adopting the county recreation plan. "I don't think it's something the township should be involved with. We're not a landlord," Martin said. Martin expressed concern about what would happen in the future if the Castle board abandoned the project. "They haven't presented us with a plan yet. They basically said 'trust us,'" Martin said.

Township board members Jerry Dohm and Joanne Jones voted to adopt the county recreation plan, but had cold feet about Marion Township becoming owner of the castle. "It's got a lot of potential..."

I'm just shying away from making the township responsible and liable," Dohm said. Jones expressed the same concerns, saying, "In the end, we've got to do what the population of the township wants us to do."

In any event, the DNR grant funding would take at least a year to get. The Castle Farms group needs to come up with a quarter of a million dollars by June 21 in order to hang on to the property. If the group misses the payment, the property, purchased on a land contract, will revert back to Reibel. "If they don't come up with the money, I'd be happy to take it back in a minute," Reibel said recently. "I'd open on the Fourth of July with rock and roll concerts."

Reibel also quickly added that he doesn't expect to get the property back. "I think it's a good cause, and I don't want it back, not really. But I won't give them an extension. Why should I? A deal's a deal," Reibel said. He also indicated some people in the community with access to necessary financing want to see the castle owned and operated as a community center. Reibel noted, "These people said to me, 'Don't plan on coming back, Art.'"

...city council budget timing criticized

on Saturday rather than on a Monday evening when council meetings normally take place. Barnes said he had to be out of town on Monday evening.

Smith said that according to the city charter a proposed budget is supposed to be presented to the council by Feb. 15, yet council members did not receive a proposed budget until well after that.

City attorney Jim Young said the fact that the proposed budget was presented late does not make the adopted budget illegal. It just says that the charter was not followed and the council needs to decide how serious of a problem that is and how to deal with it. Young said the council should not permit charter deadlines to be ignored on a regular basis. If the deadlines are unrealistic, the council should consider asking voters to amend the charter.

Barnes said there's an incongruity on this issue in the charter. He said the charter requires the council to adopt a budget at least 15 days prior to April 1. However, the budget is an ordinance and elsewhere in the charter it says that any new ordinance doesn't take effect until 30 days after it's adopted.

Editorial

Michigan senate action shortchanges public interest

The Michigan legislature is moving backwards toward putting Michigan taxpayers a bit more in the dark about how tax dollars are spent.

Last Thursday the Michigan senate voted to allow state universities to go behind closed doors to select university presidents. The 28 Michigan senators who voted for passage of Senate Bill 211 included this area's senator Walter North. They weighed the desire of university presidents and board members to conduct interviews in private against the desire of Michigan taxpayers and students to know the rationale behind decisions regarding how tax and tuition dollars are spent. Unfortunately, North and company gave greater weight to their academia friends in their ivory towers while scorping parents saving to send their children to college and students working long hours to pay tuition rates that over recent decades have increased at a rate that has left inflation eating dust behind them.

The rationale used by academics and legislators supporting the bill is that in order to draw good candidates, it is necessary to conduct interviews in private. They maintain that good candidates working at other universities will hesitate to apply to Michigan universities if that means their current employers will find out they're job hunting. On the surface, that might sound like a reasonable argument. But if you look it over a bit, some big holes soon become apparent and the argument quickly crumbles.

What SB 211 seeks to do is take a little bite out of Michigan's Open Meetings Act. Michigan's Open Meetings Act was passed by the legislature in 1976. It has a very basic premise. That premise is that when public bodies are making decisions which involve spending public money or will affect the lives of members of the public, then members of the public have a right to know what those decisions are and why they're being made.

L. Scott Swanson

Knowing not only what the final decision is, but why that decision was made is very important. The cornerstone of the elective process in the United States is clearly an informed electorate. Voters elect governmental officials in the hopes that these officials will make decisions which represent their interests and views. If these officials don't make decisions which represent voters' interests and views, then voters can vote someone else into office. But how do you as a voter know if a public official is making decisions you're comfortable with? You watch them. You take a look at not only the decisions they make, but the thought process that goes into those decisions. Watching that thought process is critical. How can you as a voter know if you're comfortable with a public official's decision when that public official isn't willing to let you know the criteria upon which that decision was made? There's no way you can know. You're left in the dark.

In order to avoid this problem, Michigan's Open Meetings Act mandates that interviews of public officials be done in public. This doesn't just apply to university presidents. It's not like they're being picked on. As a member of the public, the next time a school superintendent, a high school principal, a city manager, a city treasurer, police chief, fire chief or whatever is being interviewed you can sit in. As a member of the public, those people are going to be working for you. Consequently, you are allowed to take a look at the person you're hiring and also at the people you're passing over. It's the law...at least for the moment.

What SB 211 proposes to do is allow closed interviews of university presidential candidates. After the field is pared to one, then there will be a 30 day public viewing period before the person is actually hired. As a member of the public you won't know what questions were asked in interviews and you won't know what other candidates were passed over. Consequently, the public will have no way of knowing just what the university board was looking for in a new president, nor will the public have any way of judging for themselves whether or not the best candidate was chosen. North and his senate colleagues are willing to leave the public in the dark.

Why are they willing to leave the public in the dark? So a university president won't have to let his current employers know he's job hunting.

What does a university president do? He or she is instrumental in formulating educational policies which set the tone and direction for how state university students will be educated. That's a pretty important job and not something you want just anybody doing. People who are able to do that job effectively are much sought after and paid quite handsomely - six figures.

Put yourself in the position of a university board member at a university that has an effective president. Under Michigan's present law, if that president applied at a Michigan public university, odds are word would get back to you. Now, if that president was doing a good job at your university would you dismiss him simply because he had applied at another? Probably not. In fact, you might offer him (or her) some additional incentive to stay with you.

Now put yourself in the position of a university board member at a university that is seeking a new president. Say one of your candidates is on such shaky ground at the university they're at so that his job would be in jeopardy if that university board found out he was interviewing with you. Is that somebody you'd really want to hire?

The Michigan Open Meetings Act should remain as it is. Decisions, such as hiring university presidents, which affect public policy and the spending of public money should be made in public. Unfortunately, this area's senator did not see things that way. The issue has not yet been voted on in the house, nor has it been sent to the governor. Hopefully, this area's representative, Bev Bodem, and Governor John Engler will give greater weight to the public's need to be informed than to the desires of a few to conduct public business behind closed doors.

Citizens attending hearings favor leaving deer baiting laws alone

As the Department of Natural Resources continues to take testimony regarding the future of deer baiting in Michigan, a preliminary survey shows that those attending the hearings prefer the current system.

State Rep. Beverly A. Bodem, who serves on the House Conservation, Environment and Great Lakes Committee, said cards submitted during the recent series of public meetings favor the status quo.

In Cheboygan, 332 of the 477 respondents supported the current deer-haunting system while 66 favored a limited ban, 73 backed a full ban and six had no preference. The results were similar at hearings in Acme, Marquette, Pontiac and Saginaw.

Grand Rapids was the only site where a ban was favored by a margin of 106-73, with another 47 supporting some limits.

Out of 2,850 cards turned in during the hearings, 1,664 want to leave the system as is, Bodem explained.

The DNR Wildlife Division also received 3,536 cards and letters by early March with 1,885 urging that the current plan remain in place.

"These hearings were vital. Public input is important and must be a crucial factor in the decision-making process," said Bodem, R-Alpena. "The DNR's policy will have a dramatic impact on the state's economy, especially in northern Michigan. This is a complex issue that merits careful consideration. The future of hunting, agriculture, tourism and the deer population are at stake."

As part of its 25th anniversary celebration, Northern Michigan Planned Parenthood will hold a Volunteer Open House to honor past and current volunteers. The Open House will be Wednesday April 5 at 5:30 p.m. at NMPP's Petoskey health center at 1003 Spring St.

"We will be thanking the hundreds of volunteers who have helped Northern Michigan Planned Parenthood become the area's leading provider of women's health care," says Martha Lancaster, NMPP's Associate Director.

"Invitations were sent to all of the past volunteers we could identify," continued Lancaster. "If we missed anyone, we hope they will attend, as well. The Open House will also give inactive volunteers or people interested in volunteering in the future the opportunity to learn about volunteer roles at Planned Parenthood."

Volunteers of the Year for 1994 and a Volunteer of the Quarter-Century will receive special awards at the Open House. Refreshments will be served and tours of the health center will be given. To RSVP, call 347-9692.

A complete series of classes and lessons in art, music, and dance begins Monday, April 10 at the Virginia McCune Arts Center's Community School of the Arts. The Arts Center is located at 461 E. Mitchell Street, Petoskey. The Spring Term lasts for six weeks and ends on May 20. Crooked Tree Arts Council operates the Community School, open to students of all ages and experience.

In Visual Arts, two classes are offered by local artist Ken Christensen. A class in Oil Painting meets on Wednesdays, 7-9 p.m.; and a class in Linoleum Block Printing meets Tuesday mornings, 10:30-11:30 a.m. Christensen has studied extensively in Europe, as a resident artist in Spain and France.

Artist Jacqueline Goswick offers a class in Drawing and Illustration, meeting on Monday, 7-9 p.m. Goswick is a graduate of Ferris State University and is currently employed in Petoskey as a professional graphic designer. Artist Catherine Carey offers two sections of Watercolor, one for students grade 9 through adult on Tuesday evenings, 7-9 p.m., and Wednesday mornings for Adults, 10 a.m. to noon. Watercolor classes will concentrate on color mixing and composition, using colors through layering, mixing greens and colorful greys. Students learn methods of saving whites and importance of value contrasts. Photographs are used as a painting tool to depict atmosphere, color and shape in a personal style that fits the individual student.

David Otis continues Pottery Instruction in the Arts Center's Pottery Studio, on Mondays 4-6 p.m. for children, and Mondays 7-10 p.m. for adults. A session of Children's Art, taught by Charlevoix instructor Eileen Heck, will be held on Tuesdays, 3:30-5:30 p.m.

Arts Center Dance Instructors present an extensive schedule of instruction in all levels of ballet, creative movement, jazz, tap dance and choreography as taught by Jody Adgate, Toni Moriarity-Smith, and Dianna Heinzelman. Most dance classes meet in the late afternoon and evening to accommodate parents and students, on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Selected classes for preschool age students meet early in the day.

New to dance teaching faculty this spring is Lauren Tepper, who offers a new adult beginner-level jazz class, beginning Monday, April 10, 6:30-7:30 p.m. This is an excellent opportunity to learn basic dance movement and technique in a fun and informal setting. The class includes warm-up and placement exercises, strength and conditioning work, and instruction in the fundamentals of jazz dance. No prior experience is required. An intermediate class follows at 7:30-9 p.m.

Dance classes are held in the Community Room of the Arts Center.

Individual music lessons are scheduled each week in Piano with Janis Ley, Marti Krusell, and Steve August; in voice, with Fran Tollas; French Horn, Trumpet and Low Brass instruments with Janis Ley; Flute, with Bonietta Benn; and Violin, with Maggie Poxson. Students should call the Arts Center to be assigned an individual lesson time.

Maggie Poxson offers violin classes on Mondays, with a Children's String Orchestra meeting on Saturday mornings.

The Burns Clinic Medical Center, P.C. provides scholarship funds covering up to 75 percent of tuition for qualified students through high school age. To apply, students or parents must visit the Arts Center in person and complete an application form before the deadline for the Spring term, which is 5 p.m. Friday, April 7.

Freestyle wrestlers compete at Lowell tournament

Six Charlevoix freestyle wrestlers traveled to Lowell this past Saturday to compete in a freestyle and greco-roman tournament.

"All of them wrestled real well for their first time," said freestyle club coach Phil Christ. "We were the farthest north team to come down there."

Ron Haggard, wrestling at 165 pounds, took first in greco-roman wrestling and third in freestyle. Christ said Haggard competed against excellent competition and had some very close, hard-fought matches.

Josh Christ placed first in the elementary heavyweight division.

Erin Christ broke new ground in becoming Charlevoix's first female wrestler. Competing in a division with eight other wrestlers she placed fourth.

Russell Williams also had a big day, going 3-1 and placing second in his division.

Luke Whitley and James Pop each placed sixth in their divisions.

The freestyle club is cosponsored by the Charlevoix Mat Club and the Silverbirch Motel. They will be traveling to Grand Ledge this coming Saturday.

Fish and Wildlife Service discusses ways to control ruffe

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Department of Natural Resources will host a public meeting April 27 to provide information and an opportunity for public comment on a proposed program to control the ruffe, a nuisance fish accidentally introduced into the Great Lakes.

The meeting, which begins at 7 p.m. at the Bay Valley Resort Hotel (located off M-84 west of I-75 at 2470 Old Bridge Road in Bay City), will focus on management strategies to control the ruffe and prevent its spread throughout the Great Lakes. The use of chemicals, known as piscicides, to control the ruffe will be discussed.

The ruffe is a member of the perch family and is believed to have been introduced into the Great Lakes via ballast water discharge from transoceanic shipping during the early 1980s.

This small Eurasean fish was first identified in North America in 1987 by the Wisconsin DNR in a collection from the Duluth/Superior Harbor. Since 1989, the ruffe population in the harbor has increased dramatically, while native fish populations, including yellow perch, trout-perch, spottail shiner and emerald shiner, show declines. Today, ruffe are more abundant in collection surveys of the harbor than all other species combined.

In 1992, the Federal Aquatic Nuisance Species Task force formed a Ruffe Control Committee, which has been working to develop and oversee implementation of a Ruffe Control Program. The goal of the program is to prevent or delay the spread of ruffe through the Great Lakes and inland waters by containing the species to its current range.

This nuisance species has already spread east along the southern Lake Superior shoreline and is now found in Michigan's Ontonagon River. If the ruffe population is not controlled, Lakes Erie, Huron, and Michigan are also vulnerable to ruffe colonization because of the temperature preferences of the species, which is similar to those of walleye and yellow perch. The ruffe is capable of successfully adapting and thriving in areas of introduction and may out-compete yellow perch.

Preventing the deliberate or inadvertent spread of ruffe by anglers or bait dealers is one of the principal strategies to be pursued under the plan. Several meetings have been conducted to take comments on the proposed program and to provide information to the public.

Copies of the Ruffe Control Program and information on costs and benefits will be available at the meeting. For further information, contact John Schrouder at 517-275-5151.

April 10 filing deadline for school board vacancy

If you've been thinking about running for a seat on the Charlevoix school board, now's the time to make a move. Completed nominating petitions are due by April 10.

There is one four-year-term up for election in the June 1995 election. The seat is currently held by Ben Cunningham. Cunningham is not seeking re-election.

Candidates who wish to have their name on the election ballot must turn in a completed nominating petition to the school's central office by 4 p.m. April 10. Blank nominating petitions may be picked up at the school's central office at 208 Clinton Street. To complete the petition the candidate must collect the names of at least 20 registered school district voters.

Burn permits to be put on hold

The Department of Natural Resources and area fire departments are reminding people who are doing spring cleaning on their lawns that, if they plan to burn grass, leaves or brush, they first need to obtain a burning permit. To obtain a permit, phone 547-0086.

There will be a moratorium on burning permits from April 15 through May 14. In an effort to prevent spring grass fires, no burning will be allowed for that month.

Three-year-old screening offered

The Char-Em Intermediate School District is sponsoring a screening clinic for three-year-old children who will be entering kindergarten in 1996. The clinic will take place April 12 at the Community Reformed Church on Petoskey Avenue. The purpose of the clinic is to provide parents information regarding normal child development, an opportunity to interact with parents of other three year old children, and to have children informally screened to identify any potential learning difficulties. There is no charge for the service and appointments are made on a first-come, first-serve basis.

For additional information or to make an appointment, phone Pat Cauthier at 547-9947.

Late-night fire destroys Clinton Street home

Two people rescued from balcony

A young woman carried her baby to safety and firemen used ladders to rescue another couple from the balcony of a burning apartment house last week.

According to Charlevoix City Fire Chief Doug Carver, the fire department was called to a fire at 308 Clinton Street at 3:52 a.m. April 7. The fire was at a large old home which contained three apartment units.

The cause of the fire has yet to be determined, but it began in the living room of an apartment occupied by a young woman and an infant. The woman was sleeping and woke up to find smoke and flames. She grabbed the infant and carried it out of the building. They were later taken to the hospital where they were checked for smoke inhalation, treated and released. A couple sleeping on the second floor in one of the other apartments woke up and was unable to get down the stairs to the first floor. They went out on a second-floor deck and were rescued from the deck by Charlevoix city firemen using ladders.

The third apartment was unoccupied at the time of the fire. Carver said the fire traveled out an open door of the apartment to the rear of the building. From there, it got up into the attic and did extensive damage. Carver said the cause of the fire is believed to be accidental.

Three candidates file for school board seat

Prior to the June 12 election, the Courier will be sending the candidates questionnaires and will be printing a pre-election story regarding the candidates and their positions.

Cooperative efforts assures Charlevoix, has Nearly 3,000 trees line the streets of the city of Charlevoix. That's nearly as many trees as there are people. Huge maples fill Kiwanis Club sap buckets in the spring and mighty oaks drop their acorns to feed the squirrels in the fall.

Although a lot of people take for granted the trees lining Charlevoix's streets, those trees aren't there by accident. The large trees Charlevoix residents enjoy today were planted decades ago. An active tree maintenance and planting program exists today so that decades from now Charlevoix people will still be enjoying local trees.

Charlevoix's tree program is a cooperative effort between citizens and local government. Among the parties involved are the Shade Tree Commission, Street Department, Waste Water Treatment Plant and Charlevoix Boy Scout Troop 11.

An inventory of Charlevoix street trees was done in 1987 (see accompanying information box). As of 1987, the city had 2,492 trees along the streets. According to city street department superintendent John Martin, between 1987 and 1994 the city has been planting about 90 new trees each year. By the time you add the new trees and subtract some old trees which were cut down, Martin says the city currently has about 2,900 street trees.

In recent weeks residents may have noticed a work crew trimming or removing old limbs and trees.

Martin says that last fall the city let out a contract which called for 275 trees to be trimmed and 40 to be removed. Hazardous limbs are being trimmed. The 40 trees being removed, most of which are maples, are dead or dying.

"A lot of them are just plain getting to the end of their lives," Martin said. He estimates that some of them are well in excess of 100 years old.

In the fall the city will plant between 90 and 100 new trees which are being purchased from a tree nursery in Copemish. At the April 3 city council meeting, Martin reported that the breakdown of the trees to be purchased will be a mixture of Superform maples, Crimson King maples, Seedless ash, Bradford Callery pear and discretionary seed plantings.

According to Martin and Shade Tree Commission member Bern Cannan, the city wants to get a better mixture of trees. Right now, nearly two-thirds of the city's trees are maples. If a maple disease killed Charlevoix's maple trees in anything similar to what Dutch Elm disease did to the elms, Charlevoix the Beautiful might become Charlevoix the Bleak for a while.

In addition to purchasing trees, the street department, wastewater treatment plant, shade tree commission and Charlevoix Boy Scouts are participating in a cooperative effort to grow elm trees for Charlevoix. A tree nursery has been established near the wastewater treatment plant. The city provided the property and some fencing materials and the Boy Scouts are providing the manpower.

Last spring the scouts planted 75 American Liberty Elms at the nursery. Later this year, they will be planting 45 more. The trees are growing well. Several are more than six feet high and a couple are more than eight feet high.

When the trees are ready to be transplanted, the city will use a portion of them to replace trees along city streets and the scouts will sell a portion to raise money for the local Boy Scout program. When the trees were planted, expectations were that it would be three years before they would be ready for transplanting. However, Martin says some of the trees are doing so well that they may be ready for transplanting next year.

Sam Creswell, wastewater treatment plant superintendent, serves as the contact person for the scouts. He said the scouts have work sessions where they come out to the nursery and care for the trees. He noted that Bob Irving, who along with Cannan and Barbara MacArthur make up the Shade Tree Commission, has done a lot of work at the nursery with the scouts.

Creswell says he's pleased with the way the nursery program has gone and he's looking forward to seeing it grow. "It was a trial thing and it's worked well so we'll expand it."

The elm trees in the nursery are a special disease resistant variety called the American Liberty Elm. A few decades ago Dutch Elm disease nearly destroyed America's elm trees. An organization called the Elm Tree Institute, working in conjunction with university research teams, spent millions of dollars developing a new disease resistant strain of elms. This new strain, the American Liberty Elm, is being distributed via a program called the "Johnny Elmseed Five Year Program." Charlevoix is one of the cities in America participating in the program. The program can be extended beyond five years on a year by year basis.

For each of the past several years Charlevoix has qualified for the National Arbor Day Foundation's designation as a Tree City USA. To qualify, a city must meet four standards: the city must have a tree board or department; the city must have a tree ordinance; the city must have a community forestry program; the city must have an Arbor Day observance and proclamation.

City street superintendent John Martin opens a gate to look at the trees in a tree nursery which is a cooperative effort between the city and Charlevoix Boy Scouts.

Forty trees are being cut down and more than 200 trees are being trimmed this spring as a part of the city's ongoing effort to keep up the trees in town.

Editorial

Vandalism is a crime that can be done without

Of all crimes, vandalism is one of the most frustrating and difficult to understand. While theft is no great thrill for society either, at least you can understand thieves' motives. They want whatever it is they steal. Vandalism on the other hand is beyond comprehension. Why would somebody want to wantonly destroy something?

This past weekend area television stations carried a story about the Maple City - Glenn Lake High School being damaged to the tune of about $100,000. Apparently somebody broke into the building at night and wreaked havoc.

Glenn Lake isn't the only area community to suffer from vandalism. At one time or another, most northern Michigan communities get hit. Charlevoix has occasionally had problems with damage to school buildings, public restrooms and public buildings at the beach.

On the bright side, given the amount of facilities we have in the community, the amount of vandalism has been limited. Beyond that, when vandalism has occurred local police, in cooperation with community members, have a pretty good track record of catching the culprits and making them pay.

Stopping vandalism, or at least minimizing it, is something that requires the efforts of the entire community. It begins with parents teaching their children simple values and enforcing those values. It also extends beyond that to the community showing a willingness to enforce those values. That enforcement is as simple as a community-wide perception that the people of this town will have no tolerance for people tearing up stuff. It is a matter of people not turning a blind eye when somebody is causing a problem. It is a matter of people in the community being willing to investigate and if someone is messing up, being willing to tell them to cease and desist immediately.

Charlevoix's a small town. We've only got about half a dozen cops on the entire force. They can't be everywhere. But we've got thousands of good people. And they are pretty much everywhere. And when they collectively determine that they won't put up with vandalism and other behavior which undermines a community, that community becomes, or in Charlevoix's case continues to be, a nice place to live and raise a family.

You've probably noticed that thanks to the telephone, E mail and the fax machine, family letter writing has dropped to virtually zero. Instead, fortunately, many of today's retirees have mastered the computer and this has given rise to the weekly or monthly family newsletter. By keeping in touch with sons and daughters, who are scattered not only throughout the United States, but the rest of the world as well, a bit of written memorabilia is still preserved.

Take for example, Homer Jones Jr., who writes a weekly newsletter to his three sons. He loves to recall the happy days he spent in Charlevoix as a youth. "I keep all 'Scrapbook' pictures from the Courier, but this is fantastic! Two of my great loves, the 'Golden Rule' and the 'Manitou' appeared recently on the same page."

Jones now lives in Princeton, New Jersey in the winter and in the little Japanese cottage on the Belvedere Resort in the summer.

He recalls going into the attic in the family home in Chicago, as a youth, and opening the large cedar chest to smell the woolen swim suits and dream of summer. When the great day finally came that the family packed up to go north, Father drove the Buick to the Municipal Pier in Chicago, where it was loaded on the great ship, "Manitou." Then the family gathered in the formal dining room where they enjoyed a delicious steak dinner.

"Later, Father took me to the engine room to listen to the loud thumping of the giant wheels and watch the shining pistons that moved us northward," he writes. "The long giant propeller shaft was so well oiled and polished, it didn't appear to be moving."

"I would stay up late to play the coin operated soccer game by myself — a large field of metal men whose right legs could be maneuvered by hand. Then I would watch the crew tie up the chairs in the main salon for an expected rough night that I also enjoyed."

"After a morning stop in Ludington and Muskegon, the Charlevoix Water Tower and the Coast Guard Station would come into view, and then the slow, magnificent, majestic entrance through the narrow channel in the late afternoon, through the swing bridge, past waiting crowds. A deft turn into Round Lake and we gently approached the dock with its admiring group of people, cars and trucks. As we arrived, chimes would be played on the stern deck by a crew member with a mallet."

"Another one of my great memories was of the ship, the 'Golden Rule,' built and operated by Allie Moore and his wife. Allie was a local character and acted the part of a Sea Dog. The ship was very authentic and had no engine. Drinking water was pumped by hand from the lake. It was anchored off the Belvedere Casino and sailed on Lake Charlevoix taking boys for the day to teach sailing and to keep the ship painted. When I was at Camp Charlevoix in about 1924, the 'Golden Rule' sailed up for our special Circus Day. Allie Moore and his eight boy crew members wore red bandannas and earrings."

"Earl Young, who developed Boulder Park on Lake Michigan finally bought the 'Golden Rule' and had it towed and beached on the rocks of Boulder Park for a curiosity and a landmark."

Jones, with boyish enthusiasm, remembers a Gatsby summer full of "fantasy life of playhouses, flowers, toy boats, beautiful clothes, thick milkshakes, fudge, movies, sunsets, lapping water in the boat houses and on the beach, 24 cylinder Cadillacs, fishnets, the yachts 'Sylvia' and 'Reomar', mahogany speedboats, white flannels in the morning, fried chicken, beach parties and a summer of strawberry shortcakes."

He concludes, "Those golden Charlevoix days that can never be described to the uninitiated."

My answer to that is — we have tried!

In May, the revised edition of "SUMMER RESORT LIFE: Tango Teas and All" will be available in the local bookstores. Here you will find not only a picture of the renowned Captain, Allie Moore, but also a photo of the beautiful 191 ft. yacht, 'The Sylvia' that made its home on Round Lake. There's even a wedding picture taken in 1924, in which the men are wearing white flannels.

I trust, Mr. Jones, you will be able to return to the Japanese Cottage this summer for a family reunion, to compose another nostalgic newsletter and to enjoy a cup of hot tea overlooking Lake Charlevoix.

Rainbow donations surpass $250,000

Editor,

Charlevoix's Rainbow Shoppe exceeds one quarter of a million dollars in donations.

Yes, you read correctly, and we would like your readers to know that since we have been in business, (12 years), the Rainbow Shoppe has donated to Charlevoix and Emmet communities over one quarter of a million dollars! Isn't that fantastic to be able to reach out to the less fortunate in this manner? Could you possibly fathom that this unassuming store, located in an alley, behind the Bridge Street retail stores, could accomplish anything like that?

Some of the recipients of this money were the Charlevoix Area Hospital, Ministerial Association, Food Pantry, Senior Citizens Center, High School Grad Party, Sunshine Club, Castle Farms 4-H, and Camp McSaub. Others are the Grandvue Chaplaincy, Nehemiah House, Salvation Army, Crisis Pregnancy, Dyslexia Association, Love for Children, and Youth for Christ. There are many more, but it no doubt would run into the Sports page and I don't think the dear editor would like that!

All of this could not have been accomplished without the assistance of many thoughtful and caring people: those who donated or purchased the merchandise, our loyal and dedicated volunteers, employees, and board members. A most sincere thanks to all of them. With your continued support, surely we will extend "our reaching" out to another quarter of a million dollars!

That was the good news. Sorry, but here is the bad news: After closing time, there are some inconceivable people who drop off broken furniture, and large faulty appliances which are not saleable. Consequently, we must pay up to $50 per item to have it hauled away. Many times that amounts up to over $500 per month. We could use that money to reach out to other non-profit organizations. Alas, alas.

Thanks for taking time to read this,

Rita Orlowski, Vice Pres. on the Board of Directors of the Rainbow Shoppe

Mayor voices opposition to spending change

Editor,

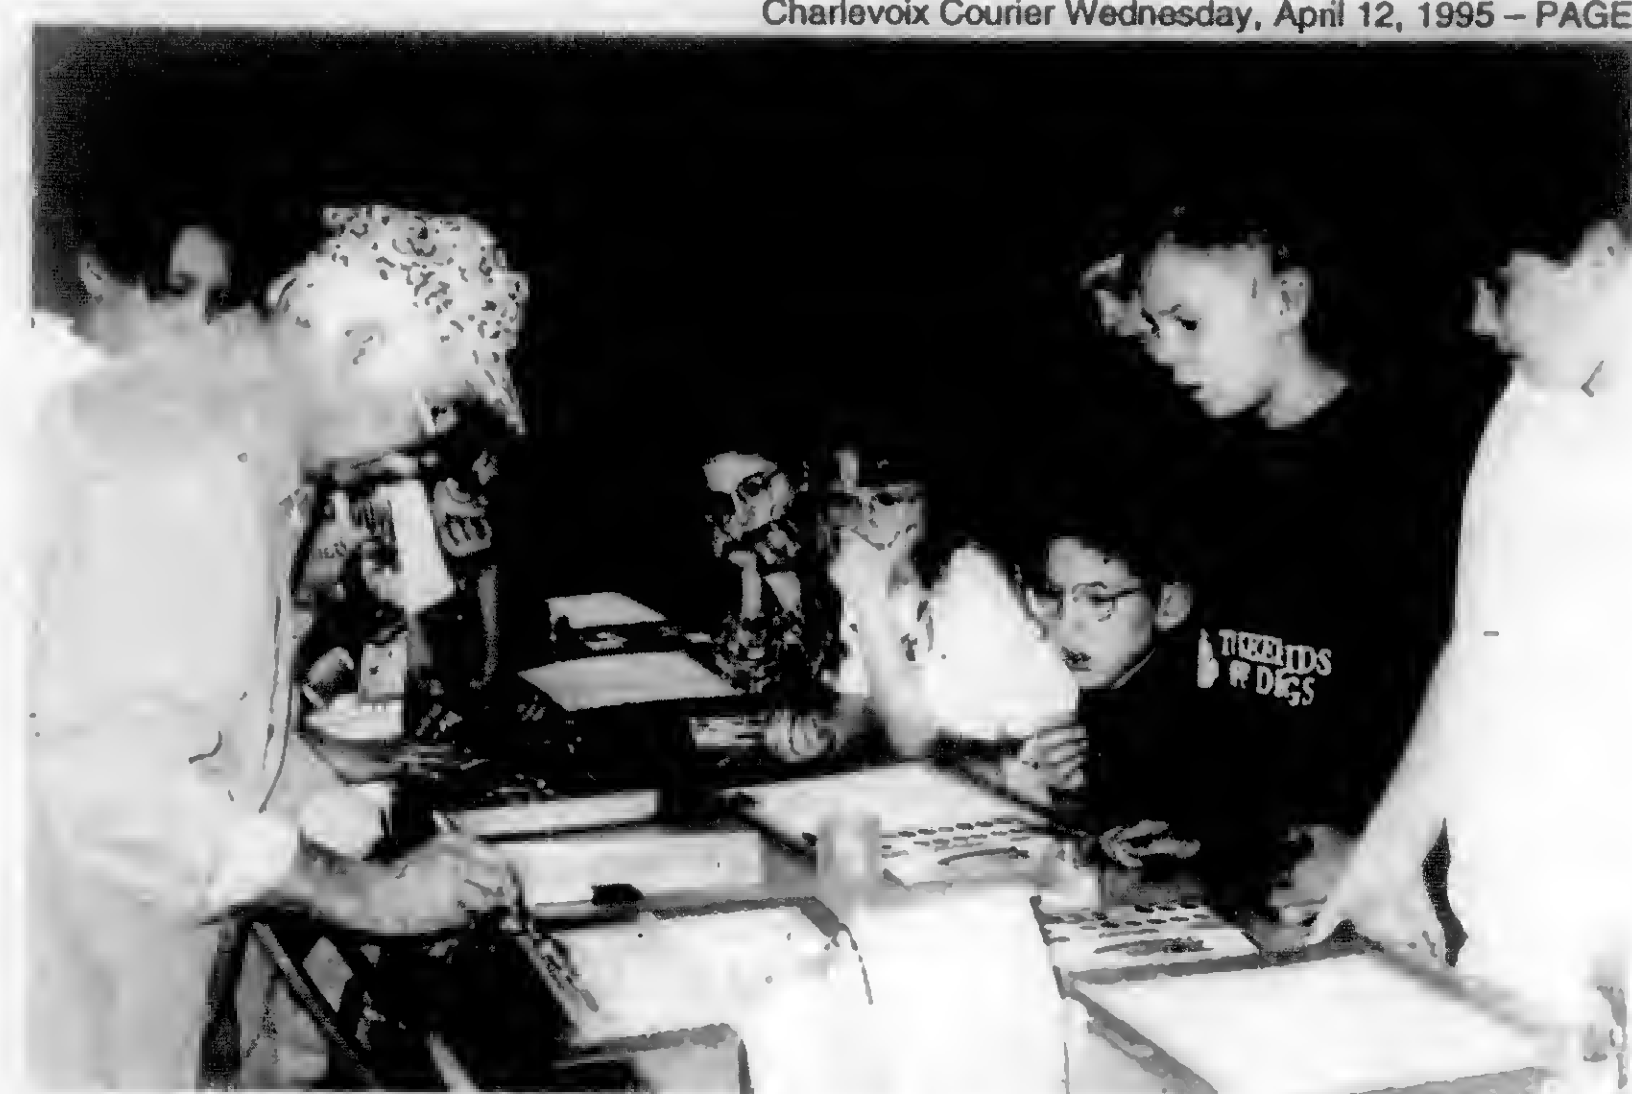

On Monday, April 17, a Public Hearing on a proposed amendment to the City Charter will be held by the City Council. The amendment would reduce by $5,000 the $10,000 of the portion of Chapter 4, Section 1.56 entitled Purchasing Agent that now reads: All purchases of goods and services in excess of $10,000 must be awarded by action of the city council. This proposal would relieve paid staff of both the responsibility and the authority to make major purchasing decisions. Your Council is neither more technically capable of comparing products or services nor more knowledgeable about proposed vendors, than your professional staff. This is an amendment without justification and without purpose, unless its purpose is to be a slap in the face of the staff. It will not save money, it will both increase costs and increase your taxes.

At LexaLite, we pay good money to have qualified employees that make such decisions. I would never dream of bucking any such decision back up to our board! If the City Council is forced to make such decisions, I suspect contracts will always be let through the fixed price bid process. That would be the penny-wise, pound foolish course of action that our predecessors avoided by their well drafted Ordinance that has been tested and proved workable for over 12 years. It ain't broke, let's not fix it! Call your council members!

Ordinance 410 established the present limit of $10,000 without Council approval, for all purchases.

It was enacted August 18, 1982. A great deal of thought and discussion was followed by the 4 to 2 vote of Council that elected to give that much authority to then City Manager Rob Hunt. I cannot speak to how effective it was at that time, but over the last 11 years it has enabled negotiated consulting contracts and equipment purchases that have saved the city a ton of money!

Best Regards,
Josh Barnes, Mayor

Clean-up fund runs out of cash

Assessments of the Michigan Underground Storage Tank Financial Assurance (MUSTFA) program, contained in a report commissioned by the Department of Natural Resources and a recent report by the Auditor General, have prompted Department of Treasury and Natural Resources officials to conclude that the MUSTFA program faces imminent insolvency and must be shut down.

"The reports by Public Sector Consultants and the Auditor General leave no doubt that the MUSTFA program must be shut down immediately," DNR Director Roland Harnes stated. "Although there is statutory 90 day period prior to the shut down of the program, it would be inadvisable for owners and operators of underground storage tanks to continue to submit claims due to the lack of funding to pay for any new claims."

The MUSTFA program was adopted by the Michigan Legislature in 1988 to reimburse owners and operators of underground storage tanks containing petroleum products for the cost of remediating contaminated sites and paying third-party claims. Funding for reimbursements and subsidized loans has been generated by an annual fee of 7/8 of a cent for every gallon of refined petroleum sold in Michigan.

The MUSTFA Finance Authority has borrowed funds over the last 18 months to pay prior remediation invoices. This latest action will not impact the Authority's debt service obligation with respect to those borrowings.

MUSTFA became effective in 1989 and was placed under the auspices of the Department of Management and Budget (DMB). An Executive Order transferred administrative responsibility of MUSTFA from DMB to DNR in May 1994.

The statute provides that the State Treasurer must notify the MUSTFA Fund Administrator if a determination is made that revenues are insufficient to pay anticipated fund expenditures. Treasurer Douglas Roberts transmitted that notice to the MUSTFA Fund Administrator, Amy Carter, on Friday, March 31, 1995.

The DNR is notifying registered owners and operators of underground tanks by certified mail that MUSTFA will no longer accept claims, work invoices, or requests for indemnification after 5 p.m., June 29, 1995.

Those invoices already received by MUSTFA will likely be paid over time. Claims for new releases reported after March 31, 1995, will be paid only if additional funds become available.

After June 29, 1995, an owner or operator of an underground storage tank will be required to obtain pollution liability insurance, or other suitable mechanisms to comply with the financial requirements of state and federal laws.

Knights of Columbus open their new hall

Hall ready for receptions, parties etc.

With their community hall project nearing completion, the Charlevoix Knights of Columbus are ready to party. Well, maybe that's putting it a bit strong. The Knights of Columbus hall is nearing completion and is ready to serve as a location for parties, wedding receptions and other gatherings.

Last year the Charlevoix Knights of Columbus purchased a large building on Bells Bay Road south of Charlevoix. For the past several months the K of C have been renovating the building into a hall suitable for hosting large gatherings of people.

The first big event to be hosted at the hall will be the Knights of Columbus' annual cash party which will take place April 22.

The center piece of the hall is the large room which measures approximately 60 feet by 70 feet. John Haggard of the Knights of Columbus estimates the room will seat 250 to 300 people. The hall also has a smaller meeting room, a catering kitchen, bar and refreshment area and restrooms. Tables and chairs are provided and there is plenty of parking.

Lou Orłowski, a retired architect who is a member of the Knights of Columbus, did the design work on the renovation. The hall has a nice entry area with recessed ceiling lighting and beautiful trim work. Several other Knights volunteered time and worked on the project in one way or another during the past several months.

The Knights purchased the building for $120,000 and estimate they've put another $50,000 to $60,000 into it.

"It's something the community's needed for so long," Haggard noted.

The hall currently has eight rental dates booked and is accepting additional rentals. People interested in renting the hall should contact Louie McKenzie or Mark Hosler.

John Haggard (left) and Larry Sullivan of the Charlevoix Knights of Columbus look somewhat small in the midst of the Knights of Columbus' new hall on Bells Bay Road, south of Charlevoix. The hall will seat up to 300 people and is available for parties and receptions. The first big event to take place at the hall will be the Knights' annual cash party April 22.

Oh Boix

A collection of praises, awards and accomplishments involving Charlevoix area people.

Jeff Joy, a freshman at Alma College, was among those recognized at a postseason banquet for the Alma College swimming and diving team. Joy, a 1994 graduate of Charlevoix High School, was a diver on the team.

Five Charlevoix people were among 72 North Central Michigan College students recently inducted into the Alpha Omicron Upsilon chapter of Phi Theta Kappa International honor society. In order to be inducted an NCMC student must have accumulated at least 12 hours of coursework and have maintained a grade point average of at least 3.5 on a 4-point scale. Charlevoix people inducted were: Elizabeth Ann Browe, Michelle Renee Lebutt, Christina Lindstrom, Liane Rae McGhee and Melissa Renee Williamson.

Navy Petty Officer 2nd Class Charles R. Struthers, son of Howard G. and Mona Struthers of Charlevoix, recently departed for a six-month overseas deployment aboard the guided missile frigate USS Kauffman, as part of the USS Theodore Roosevelt Battle Group.

Struthers is one of 285 sailors aboard the guided missile frigate, which departed Newport, R.I., in mid-March along with 10 other ships and submarines. The 11-ship USS Theodore Roosevelt Battle Group is a formidable force equipped with jet fighters and attack aircraft, helicopters, and ships and submarines armed with Tomahawk cruise missiles. Extremely mobile and flexible, the battle group can operate together, moving nearly 700 miles a day, or can be deployed simultaneously to separate geographic regions.

Struthers and his fellow sailors spent the past year training for a variety of situations they might encounter during the deployment. They will be replacing the USS Dwight D. Eisenhower Battle Group, which has been operating in the Persian Gulf enforcing the no-fly zone over Southern Iraq and most recently supporting United Nations operations off Bosnia-Herzegovina in the Adriatic Sea.

Struthers will travel approximately 30,000 miles during the six-month voyage, spending much of his time at sea conducting operations with U.S. and foreign naval forces. The 438-foot long guided missile frigate is designed to protect other ships with its high-tech radar, sonar and weapons systems for combatting aircraft, ships and submarines.

The 1981 graduate of Charlevoix High School joined the Navy in June 1981.

Problem solvers among state's best

A Charlevoix sixth grade team competing in the Michigan Future Problem Solvers State Finals placed twelfth among 50 teams. The competition took place at the University of Michigan. The 50 state finalists were selected from among more than 300 junior division teams. The team was coached by Tom Sothard and Ann Shindorf. Shown above with Sothard (left) and parent JoAnne Beemon (right) are team members (from left) Phil Morris, Troy Smith, Hal Evans and Sally Beemon.

Nature walk to celebrate rivers

Young and old Nature Enthusiasts will gather at Wooden Shoe Park in Ellsworth April 22 at 10:45 a.m. and walk to the South Arm Township Preserve in the St. Clair Lake-Six Mile Lake Natural Area.

Gov. John Engler declared 1995 as the Michigan Year of the River. This year's March for Parks event will celebrate the completion of the Educational Board Walk on the river. Several area schools and youth groups have made use of the 225 foot long walkway to study habitat preservation, conservation and wetland protection. The educational board walk dedication will be at 11:30 a.m. Children and youth will be shown the proper method to plant young trees, and tours of the other two preserves in the natural area, the 17 acre Lee Alan Law-master and the 59 acre Skow Family Preserve will be offered afterward. The 86-acre natural area lies on the northernmost section of the 56-mile long Chain of Lakes in the Elk River Watershed. More than 1,200 feet of St. Clair Lake (home of the Tapawingo and the Rowe Inn) and more than 2,000 feet of the river are protected into perpetuity under the wing of the Little Traverse and Grand Traverse Regional Land Conservancies. The public is invited to participate. For more information call Jo Ann Beemon at 547-4820.

BEACONS

by REV. DALE P. OSTEMA

As you read this article, you find yourself in the middle of the most important and misunderstood week in the life of the Christian Church. Holy Week is the high point of the Christian year for believers around the world. Unfortunately, the message which lies at the heart of these days can seem confusing and irrelevant to many who look in on the Christian faith from the outside. The very thought that God would come among humanity in the person of Jesus the Christ, live and teach us the way of life and then die, on a cross no less, in order to reconcile sinful humanity to himself, is difficult to believe. Add to this the story of Jesus' resurrection from the dead, giving all those who have faith in him the promise of abundant and eternal life, and you have the greatest story ever told.

Sadly, for many, it remains just that, "a great story." One not necessary or relevant to life. That is unfortunate. Someone once said, "The problem with Christianity is not that it has been tried and found wanting, rather that it has not been tried." Opinions are easily formed and excuses quickly made for why personal faith in God is optional. All miss the mark. The starting point in the story of Good Friday and Easter is not "do I believe in God." Rather, it is, "God believes in me!" Regardless of my opinion about God, God believes in me and sent his only son to show that great love. This is love which makes a difference both now and in eternity. Have you allowed God to love you? Try it. I promise, God's love is never found wanting!

Rev. Dale Ostema is the pastor of the Charlevoix and Greensky Hill United Methodist Churches.

Dorothy Iris Dodd

Dorothy Iris Dodd, 85, died April 4, 1995, at the Grand Rapids Home for Veterans, where she had been a resident since Jan. 9, 1988.

A Requiem Mass was held April 5 at the chapel in the home. Interment took place April 6 at Fort Custer Military Cemetery in Battle Creek.

Miss Dodd was born May 16, 1909, in Marion Township, Charlevoix County, the daughter of W. Earl and Esther (Beattie) Dodd. She attended school in Charlevoix and in Detroit, where she graduated from Southeastern High School.

She moved to California in 1937, where she graduated as a registered nurse from Letterman General Hospital School of Nursing in San Francisco. She then enlisted in the U.S. Army Nurse Corps, and served for 20 months in England during World War II, and later for some time at a M.A.S.H. unit in Korea. At the time of her discharge, she had attained the rank of captain.

She spent time in the Army Reserves on her return to California, then did private duty nursing and worked as a school nurse. In later years, she did volunteer work at a Catholic mission in Morehead, Ky., after which she resided for some years in East Jordan.

Survivors include one sister, Rose Elzinga, of Charlevoix; and three half brothers, Harrison, Gerrit and Charles Elzinga, all of Charlevoix; plus many nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her brothers, Robert and Raymond; and her sisters, Violet and Mignonette.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Disabled American Veterans, or to the charity of choice.

New title company stresses efficiency

There are five title companies in Charlevoix making the field very competitive. Rather than finding that intimidating, John Taylor and Paula Barron, of Preferred Title Company, say it just means that it's that much more important to do excellent work in an efficient manner. In land transactions, customers not only want good work, they want it done as soon as possible.

"The speed at which you can produce an accurate product is essential to the business," Taylor explains. That's why when he and Barron founded Preferred Title Company earlier this year, they installed a state-of-the-art computer system that will accommodate even the most difficult transaction.

"There's no type of closing out there that our system can't handle expeditiously and efficiently," Taylor said.

Even with the high powered computer system, as anyone who has used a computer will attest, the thing's only as good as the knowledge of the people operating them. In the case of Barron and Taylor, each of them has been doing title work in Charlevoix County for a decade or more. Barron has been doing title work since 1977 and Taylor has been doing title work since 1985.

Barron said the fact that she and John have some very loyal clients who were familiar with their work in the past has been very helpful in starting the new business.

Barron and Taylor had been working with other local title firms prior to opening Preferred Title Co. Preferred Title is currently small. Barron and Taylor are the sole stockholders in the company. They and their staff of one operate out of their office at 200 Antrim Street. The office is directly across the street from the county building. Since title searches and transactions often involve county files and departments, the office's proximity to the county building is very convenient. The office also has plenty of nearby parking and is handicap accessible.

Preferred Title handles just about any kind of real estate transaction including title searches and insurance, insured escrow closings and 10-31 real estate exchanges. They also can serve as an agency to handle construction draws and disbursements.

Taylor and Barron say the company is off to a good start, meeting all of their financial and customer goals established when they founded the business.

Preferred Title will be hosting an open house April 27. The open house will begin at the office where guests may take a look at some of the artwork provided by Patti Left. The open house will then move to the Charlevoix Country Club.

Legion Auxiliary approves several contributions

President Katie Curtis presided at the April meeting of the Leslie T. Shapton Unit #226, American Legion.

Annual reports were given showing 69 cards had been sent to shut-ins. Nine hundred and thirty-eight cancelled postage stamps had been sent to the World Relief, Inc. Anyone wishing to contribute used postage stamps to this National Auxiliary project, please cut stamps from envelopes leaving 1/4 inch or more border around stamp. They may be turned in to any Auxiliary member, or at the Monday night Bingo. Proceeds from the stamps benefit World Relief which helps the poor and homeless. The American Legion and Auxiliary also continue to collect pull tabs from aluminum cans of pop and beer. Proceeds from redeeming these tabs are used in Michigan to purchase equipment for children's hospitals. The local Unit/Post has collected many hundreds of pounds of tabs for this project. Please donate your tabs to any American Legion or Auxiliary member.

It was voted to contribute to Camp Quality, the Chapel of Four Chaplains, and to the Peggy Carey Memorial Nurses Scholarship at Charlevoix Area Hospital. The Auxiliary meets the first Tuesday of each month at 7:30 p.m.

Russell Williams of the Charlevoix Freestyle Wrestling Club has his hand lifted after winning a match at Coopersville Saturday. Williams placed second in his weight class.

Freestyle wrestlers bring home medals

The Charlevoix Freestyle Wrestling Club traveled to Coopersville this past Saturday to compete in an invitational tournament.

Three Charlevoix wrestlers placed among the top finishers in their divisions.

Josh Christ took first in the heavyweight division. On the way to the gold medal he beat two wrestlers who were undefeated in previous freestyle tournament this year and remained undefeated himself.

Russell Williams went 5-2 on the day and placed second in the 58 pound weight class. Phil Christ, who coaches the freestyle wrestlers, said Williams in one of his matches executed a five-point Russian throw which amazed several people watching the match because it's a very difficult throw rarely executed at Williams' age and experience level.

Erin Christ placed first in the 67 pound weight class, then moved up to 72 pounds where she placed third, missing first place by two points.

This weekend the freestyle club will be traveling to Cedar Springs. The club receives support from the Charlevoix Mat Club, Silverbirch Motel and Biceps Gym.

Spring is for the dogs

Spring is a good time of the year to be a dog. After being cooped up all winter, your owner gets back to taking you for regular walks. The spring air is filled with all kinds of smells that interest a dog. There are squirrels to be chased and countless other things that even if they don't merit pursuit, at least deserve to be sniffed at a little.

(Bottom right) Even if you're not going for a walk, spring is a nice time to be a big dog lounging in the sun. Sasquatch, a grizzly bear cub...er, a mix between a Newfoundland and Chesapeake Bay Retriever belonging to Scott and Kathy Swanson, yawns as he soaks up some sun on a spring day.

Data base set up to help local officials

City, township and county policy makers face a growing dilemma: They are being asked to solve more problems without the economic, social and demographic data needed to make informed decisions.

"This is a time of great reliance on state and local solutions to policy problems," says Barbara Greene, a Central Michigan University political scientist who specializes in local government policies and issues. "And it is precisely at this level that data needs are greatest."

To help solve the need for more local information and resources, the Center for Public Policy Studies at CMU is developing a multi-dimensional computer data base of information for local governmental officials and economic developers in central and northern Michigan.

"Common issues facing many local units of government include lack of money, a non-willingness to increase taxes, and a growing desire to enhance services," says Greene, who is directing the data base project.

"Most small units lack the time and resources to go after grant money, to negotiate with other governmental units, and to look at innovative ways to solve problems. The data base will help local and regional governments improve the quality of decision making, cut their information costs and permit more focused social and economic development policies," she said.

The data base has two distinct advantages for policy makers, said

Greene. A geographic information system (GIS) component will allow easy-to-interpret data to be plotted across regions and time. The data also can be broken down to county, city and township levels. Users will be able to compare data from similar communities.

"One of the unique characteristics of this project is including data from the township level," said Greene. "Most other data bases used for policy research do not collect data below the county level. However, decisions and actions are taking place at lower governmental levels now than they were in the past 30 to 40 years."

The data base will include factors that contribute to economic and community development, said Greene. Examples include information about physical structures like roads, utilities and buildings; economic institutions like banks and credit unions; and local characteristics such as distances from and transportation links to major urban centers.

Social and community information in the data base will include descriptions of local governments, social service agencies and voluntary organizations; human resource data such as education levels and technical expertise; and social structures such as class, race and ethnicity.

Said special meeting has been called to consider the following:

Pancake supper to help Club 77

The Charlevoix Kiwanis and the American Legion are sponsoring an All-You-Can-Eat pancake supper, featuring the world-famous Kiwanis maple syrup and kielbasa. Proceeds will be donated to Club 77. The event will be Friday, April 21 starting at 5 p.m. at the American Legion Hall in Charlevoix. Tickets for this event are available from Kiwanis, Legionnaire and Club 77 members and at the door. Price is $5 for adults, $3 for children 12 and under and $15 for a family ticket. Children under 5 are free. Club 77 youth will participate in serving and clean up.

Barb Godwin, Club 77 board member stated, "This type of activity benefits youth in many ways. They will participate in fund-raising and form new positive relationships within their community. We are extremely grateful to the Kiwanis and Legionnaires for this opportunity."

Club 77 is creating a library and study area. Donations of heavy tables and chairs and current resource materials would be appreciated. Call 547-2298 or 547-0116 to make a donation.

...data to help local government

sources of information, such as the 1990 census data and various federal and state reports," said Greene. "However, another important source of data is information now available only in city and township halls, county courthouses and school administration buildings. While the time and labor to collect the data is significant, it will in the long run have substantial research benefits."

A survey of administrators, economic developers, elected officials and other public policy makers in central and northern Michigan identified the kinds of information currently lacking, said Greene. The CMU data base will attempt to respond to the local concerns, she said.

"Unfunded mandates from both the state and federal governments are an enormous burden on local governments," said Greene. "Respondents overwhelmingly identified unfunded mandates as an immediate concern."

Other critical concerns include a need for more information about grant funding sources; comparative wage and salary studies; financial data related to property tax base development, millage growth and revenue diversification; environmental data related to recycling and ground water regulations; and comparative data on alternative user fees and charges, she said.

The development of the data base is being funded by a 1994 grant from the State of Michigan's Research Excellence Fund, which provides support for university research projects that spur economic development and job creation in Michigan.

Leave wild animal babies alone

With the arrival of the spring, people enjoying the out-of-doors may encounter young birds or animals that appear to have been abandoned. However, wildlife young usually have a "parent" hiding nearby and, unless obviously injured, should not be removed from their natural environment.

The collective experiences of state, federal and local wildlife experts attest to a variety of problems when people take wild creatures home in what they consider an act of mercy. Wildlife young can be the carriers of serious diseases such as distemper and rabies. It is also extremely difficult for these animals to survive on their own if they are released back into the wild after being raised by humans. Wild animals do not make good pets. They are born for a life in the wild and are best suited for their natural environment.

Giving first aid to injured birds and animals requires great expertise. In Michigan, some people are authorized by agencies such as the Department of Natural Resources to provide wildlife rehabilitation services because they have demonstrated proficiency in that kind of work. Under all other circumstances, it is unlawful to pick up or retrieve any protected wild animal.

Please try to remember that in almost all situations, wildlife belongs in its natural environment. If you encounter an obviously injured animal, contact your local animal control agency or DNR office.

School developing five-year budget

by L. Scott Swanson

The weather warms, trees sprout leaves, sidewalks begin to grow crowded with tourists and the Charlevoix School Board prepares to adopt a proposed budget for the coming fiscal year. It must be spring. Although the weather, trees and tourists are all going through their same routine, the Charlevoix school system has altered the way it draws up its budget. This year, the process involves more people and rather than looking just at the coming year, they're looking at the next five years.

"If we're moving toward building-based decision making, then more people need to be involved in the budget planning process," explains Dr. Roberta Jackson, Charlevoix school superintendent.

In the past, the school business manager drafted a proposed one-year budget with some input from the superintendent, principals and school board finance committee. This year the school established a budget planning committee which includes the school board finance committee, the superintendent, business manager, school principals, four teachers and a member of the maintenance staff. The committee began shortly after the new year.

The budget committee is operating under the following parameters:

1. Develop a balanced budget.
2. Educate all staff as to the budget process and give them the opportunity for input into their building proposal.
3. Any request to replace retiring staff or add new staff will be accompanied by an analysis of current staffing patterns of the building in question and include a rationale for replacement or addition. Only the board finance committee will make staffing recommendations across buildings (i.e. the high school won't recommend a staff reduction at the middle school etc.).

4. Budget decisions will be made in line with district goals.

5. Budget recommendations will have the endorsement of the building school improvement team.

6. If the budget planning committee can't determine a recommended budget in a timely manner, the school finance committee will resume the initial responsibility for completing a recommended budget.

7. This is a pilot process which will be evaluated by the board finance committee for continued utilization.

The school board plans to adopt a proposed budget next month so the budget planning committee is operating under a tight deadline. Jackson said the committee has been very active.

"The process has been very dynamic. We've looked at a lot of material."

Following state school finance reform schools now have a better idea of how much money they'll have to work with in coming years. In the past, that depended on several variables such as how much property values increased and how many mills taxpayers approved levying against that property value. That's not the case anymore. There is a cap on the amount that property values can increase for tax purposes and local school boards are capped on the amount of millage they can request.

"We found out early that the new funding process in Michigan is going to constrain what we can do," Jackson said.

During the next five years the amount of operational money the Charlevoix school system will have to work with will be:

1995/96 - $9,524,140 (up 2.45 percent from this year)
1996/97 - $9,728,840 (up 2.14 percent)
1997/98 - $9,940,930 (up 2.18 percent)
1998/99 - $10,155,010 (up 2.15 percent)
1999/00 - $10,369,510 (up 2.11 percent).

Those estimates could vary to some degree, but if all things stay the same they should be close.

But there's no guarantee all things will stay the same. One issue the committee has been grappling with is how to react if enrollment drops. With school finance reform, enrollment determines the amount of money the school receives from the state. Currently that's about $6,400 per student. In a worst-case scenario, if Big Rock closes and the Coast Guard Cutter Acadia is stationed elsewhere, that could pull

Ground to be broken for swimming pool

by Laurie Lounsbury

After years of talk, the Charlevoix Community Pool is about to become a reality. Ground-breaking for the pool will take place Saturday, April 22, at 1 p.m. The site for the pool is just north of Waller Road on U.S. 31. The four-acre piece of property was donated for the pool by Rik Lobenherz. Lobenherz is the developer of the Charlevoix Country Club, which adjoins the pool property.

The Friends of the Pool committee has raised about half of the money they need to complete the project. They are projecting the total cost of building the pool to be about $700,000. The Charlevoix Friends of the Pool hope to raise the rest of the money during their summer fund-raising campaign.

Petrie Construction Company was awarded the contract to build the pool building for $516,000. The actual pool will be built by Acme Pools of Grand Rapids.

The pool will be five lanes wide and 60 feet long. One lane will include a ramp and instructional area. Plans also include a hydrotherapy spa for hot water therapy. The public is encouraged to attend the groundbreaking ceremonies this Saturday.

Hillemonds has served on special subcommittees on worker's compensation and also unemployment insurance, helping negotiate major reforms of both systems enacted by the Legislature in 1981-82.

Investigators took up the case May 6 with limited evidence and no suspects. During the next six days they put in more than 200 hours and several 16-hour days which led to the arrest and ultimately the conviction of the murderer.

Deputy to be added to sheriff's department

by Laurie Lounsbury

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department will add a new sheriff to the payroll for at least the next three years. Through a new federal grant program called COPS FAST, the county was able to fund a new officer at half price for three years. "It's long overdue," said Sheriff George Lasater, who has been lobbying for an extra officer for years.

The COPS FAST Grant will pay 75 percent of the cost the first year, 50 percent the second year, and 25 percent the third year. The total amount paid by the grant will be $63,900. After that, the county will either fund the position completely or eliminate the position. "I'm sure we'll be able to show a great need for the extra officer after the three year period is up," Lasater said.

County commissioner Carl Price said, "If we don't need the extra officer now, we will in three years."

Lasater will be promoting Rex Behling to the deputy sheriff position.

Behling is deputy sheriff certified, and is currently working in the sheriff's department as a communication/correction officer. Behling also teaches the DARE program in East Jordan and Boyne Falls. To replace Behling, Lasater will hire Chuck Vondra. Vondra has worked as the sheriff's marine patrol officer and as a corrections officer in the past.

There's a certain amount of skill required to be a good Easter egg hunter. It takes sharp eyes and lightning quick hands and feet. The hunt, which took place Saturday afternoon, is an annual event sponsored by the Retail Merchant Committee of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce. It drew well more than 100 people downtown Saturday afternoon.

Oh, for just a nickle for every little kid who's laughed and giggled as they rolled down the hill in East Park over the years. You could purchase a lot of things with all that money, but not the enjoyment and fond memories of the children and their parents. Such things are priceless.

The object of the Easter egg hunt is simple. Grab an egg as fast as you can, stash it in your basket and move on to the next egg.

We don't need a hidden bottle tax

The Michigan United Conservation Clubs (MUCC) can call it what they may, but when you cut through the self-righteous environmentalism, what they're pushing is a multimillion dollar tax increase on Michigan businesses and consumers.

The MUCC, as they have been doing for the better part of the past ten years, are trying to persuade the state to take millions of dollars from businesses which handle returnable bottles and cans.

According to the MUCC there are a lot of cans and bottles which people pay deposit money on, but end up for one reason or another not returning. The MUCC claims that all of those uncollected deposit dimes add up to about $32 million per year. According to the MUCC, this is a windfall profit for businesses that handle the bottles and cans.

The MUCC wants the state to latch on to this money and use it to fund the MUCC's special interest, which in this case happens to be environmental projects.

You won't find it in MUCC press releases, but there's another, completely different, side to this story.

Businesses handling returnable bottles and cans will tell you that to begin with there are nowhere near $32 million worth that go unreturned each year. For that to happen, on average each person in Michigan would have to pay the deposit on and not return about 30 bottles and cans each year.

Businesses also contend that not only are MUCC's money estimates grossly inflated, what money there is from nonreturned returnables isn't a windfall profit. The bottle crushers, storage space and man-hours spent taking care of returnable bottles and cans all cost money, a lot of money. Money from nonreturnable returnables doesn't cover that cost, but it defrays a portion of it.

tion of it.

From a business perspective, what the MUCC has done is first persuade the legislature to add a costly new labor-intensive operation to their business at no profit and now, to add insult to injury, they want to extract another $32 million from these businesses.

From a Michigan consumer perspective, the reality is that if the MUCC is successful with this money grab, you'll be footing the bill. One way or another the cost will be passed along to you.

What the MUCC's bottle and can money grab amounts to is an additional tax. It's veiled behind environmental and business windfall arguments, but at heart it's a pitch for a tax increase, plain and simple.

If Governor Engler and other Lansing legislators are serious about making Michigan a more business and consumer friendly state, they should reject the MUCC's push. Taxes that are open and easily seen are painful enough. Hidden taxes are worse and should be done without.

Club 77 is making progress

Editor,

Many people have stopped me to ask about the progress made over the past few months at the Charlevoix area's teen center, Club 77. This community cares about its young people!

Just two months ago Club 77 was in danger of having to close its doors. Since that time, a new board has been formed and the center has made good progress. The central assumption of this new board has been that this community would support a teen center that offered quality programs in a safe, alcohol free, tobacco free and drug free environment. Over the past year the center had suffered from lack of money direction and parental and community involvement.

The first goal of the board was to insure that all activities be adequately supervised and that all rules be respected by adults and youth. Because the weekend activities were attended by almost 100 youth, the need for additional adult supervision was apparent. Parents and community volunteers were invited to participate in inservices designed to familiarize adults with rules, policies and roles.

Stupak to visit county April 29

Congressman Bart Stupak (D-Menominee) will be in Charlevoix County Saturday, April 29 for a town meeting. The meeting will be from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m. at the Boyne City Hall in the Commission Chambers. The meeting will be one in a series of meetings as Stupak tours Michigan's First Congressional District from April 17 through April 29.

The teens attending Club 77 also needed to understand and be willing to respect the rules and policies of the teen center. A teen board was formed to facilitate communication between adults and youth. It was difficult for a few young people (and a few adults) to accept that the rules were being tightened up. But most of the young people understand and are happy to follow rules that make their center a better place for everyone.

The board is now working to expand activities. In addition to the weekend social activities, the center will be open on Monday and Thursday afternoons for study and craft activities. (We'd like to be open every day!) The board is now in the process of hiring a part-time youth director who will plan and offer educational and recreational programs, work with the youth board and coordinate volunteers. There will be an emphasis on drug and alcohol education.

The young people have worked to paint, clean and support their center through participation in fund raisers. Now more than ever we need your continued support.

Don't forget to attend the Kiwanis Club-American Legion all you can eat pancake and Kielbasa dinner (with real maple syrup) Friday, April 21 starting at 5 p.m., at the American Legion. Tickets are available at the door! All proceeds benefit Club 77.

Thank you.
Jo Anne Beemon
President Club 77

Volunteers allow hospice to help

Editor,

During National Volunteer Week, April 24-30, 1995, the Charlevoix County Hospice would like to recognize the dedicated services provided by its volunteers. Hospice care offers a very special kind of care for terminally ill persons and their families and is one of the fastest growing health care services in the United States.

Since November of 1983, the Charlevoix County Hospice has brought dignity and quality to the lives of hospice patients due in large part to our hard working volunteers. We applaud and thank each of our volunteers for the wealth of time and compassion they give to the patient, family and community.

Hospice seeks to enable patients to carry on an alert, pain-free life so that their last days may be spent with dignity. Hospice care is provided through an interdisciplinary, medically directed team. The volunteers are a very valuable part of this team, providing respite care to the patient and family in their home.

Nationally, about 100,000 hospice workers are volunteers. Last year these volunteers gave over 5 million hours of their time to serve terminally ill persons and their families. In 1994, in Charlevoix County, 45 persons donated their services. These volunteers are very special, caring people - they truly care!! A THANK YOU to ALL hospice volunteers!

Sincerely,
Margaret E. Lasater
Executive Director

Social Services relies heavily on volunteers

Editor,

The Michigan State Department of Social Services is a very large organization yet without the assistance from volunteers, donors, and area businesses, you just can't do it alone. Our office, the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services, admires the gift of volunteerism it receives from so many people.

During National Volunteer Week, April 24-30, all area organizations will be showing their appreciation for the volunteering and donations which make a big difference in the services that the volunteers are providing. Our office is very fortunate to have a portion of the many volunteers and donors giving their time and goods to help others.

The volunteer program includes individual volunteers and all the individuals who make up the volunteer organizations. Together they make up a massive network of help.

Volunteers sometimes think that they are only volunteering their time when so many times it's their experience, knowledge, and skills that are the invaluable service they are providing. Also, volunteers sometimes think they are such a small piece of the pie when in fact if they were not a piece of the pie, there would be no pie!

Our program works in close cooperation with the RSVP, Retired Senior Volunteer Program of Charlevoix/Emmet County. Seniors have that vast background that is such a valuable asset.

The bottom line is you just can't do it alone. It takes a variety of individuals with their vast skills and experience to accomplish our goals.

Our hats off to the many people and organizations that make our work possible, successful, and give it that personal touch.

Island students participate in environmental research program

In recognition of the 25th annual Earth Day, students at Beaver Island Community School are taking scientific measurements of earth systems and sharing their observations with other students and scientists around the world using state-of-the-art technology systems.

Beaver Island Community School was chosen in February to be a charter participant in the Global Learning and Observations to Benefit the Environment Program (GLOBE), an international science and environmental education partnership initiated by U.S. Vice President Al Gore. GLOBE students are contributing to a better understanding of the planet by making regular environmental observation at thousands of locations around the world and sharing their information via the Internet.

Jacqueline LaFrenier, a Beaver Island teacher, attended a three-day workshop in March with GLOBE scientists and educators for instruction on the measurement procedures and the GLOBE computer technology system.

"GLOBE is an excellent program designed to be integrated into existing curriculum, not an extra topic to be taught. Students kindergarten through twelfth will be exposed to various levels of measurement and will see the results of their work on computer graphics the next day through the Internet," LaFreniere said.

Students have selected a study site near the school where, they will take regular measurement of various atmospheric, hydrological, biological and geological features. Students will then send their findings via the Internet to a GLOBE data processing facility. Their data will be combined with input from other GLOBE schools around the world and with other science sources, such as satellite imagery, to create dynamic, online images of the Earth. The GLOBE student data will be available to the general public on the World Wide Web at www.globe.gov.

The GLOBE program is jointly funded by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), the National Science Foundation (NSF), and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

"We hope to obtain local funding to purchase the needed equipment to get up and running before the end of the school year." For more information contact Jacqueline LaFreniere at Beaver Island Community School (616) 448-2744.

BEACONS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

The sunshine and blue skies drew my pen, writing pad and me to Ferry Beach Saturday afternoon. Sometimes, even the quiet of my study is not enough to really let my heart focus on what the Lord might want to pass on. It was neat to watch the sea gulls wheeling and turning. Some brave soul was whipping up a fair amount of waves on a "Sea-doo" too. It was a little boy that got to me however.

If you were out, you know that even though the sun was shining, it was kind of cool. This little guy was bundled up in a parka as he very delicately and very deliberately walked right along the edge of the water. He was just close enough that he could make good footprints in the wet sand but just far enough that his mother wouldn't say anything. That was his first pass by me and he made me smile.

Moments later, I heard this "splish splash" and as I looked up from my work, this little guy was running right through the water for all he was worth. The ear-to-ear grin on his face was as priceless as they come. From way at the end of the park, his mother's voice bellowed, "You get out of that water right now! You'll get your sneakers all wet!" Oh how tempted I was to holler back, "Too late Mom!"

Being practical is an essential tool of every parent. When it comes to raising our kids, if someone didn't exercise a little common sense now and then, we would all be in trouble. Yet practicality can deprive us of some unique blessings now and then.

Since it is so close to Easter, permit me one more resurrection based thought. We have come to call him "Doubting Thomas." I think "Practical Thomas" would in some ways be more appropriate. When news reached him of Christ's resurrection, even though he knew the people conveying that news he told them all he would not believe it until he could see the nailprints in Christ's hands and the wound in his side for himself. After all, a practical person would tell us all in calm and rational terms that of all the things in this world you can conquer, death is not one of them.

Jesus knew a challenge when he heard one. He appeared to Thomas using his very own words and invited him to touch the holes in his body. His concern was that Thomas would not be faithless, but believing. Then in a moment that touches my heart each time I read it, the Lord reaches out some 1,900 years later to you and I and says, "Blessed are they who have not seen and yet believed."

God will speak to you if you are prepared to listen. God will address your doubts in specific fashion if you will open your heart and let His Spirit in. It is important to be practical about a lot of things in life. But when it comes to the things of God, practicality can unfairly limit Him. Open your life to the unexpected. Open your soul to all of God's creation that surrounds you. You might be surprised at what He'll open up to you in order to help you believe.

(Rev. Bruce Hamilton is pastor of the Charlevoix Community Church of God. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Hamilton and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

Precipitation low, but lake stays high

During the month of March precipitation on each Great Lakes basin was below average. For the year to date, precipitation is about 5 percent below average for the entire Great Lakes basin. The net supply of water to each of the Great Lakes in March was below average.

In comparison to this long-term (1918-1994) averages, the March monthly mean water level of Lake Superior was 3 inches below average, Lakes Michigan-Huron, St. Clair, Erie and Ontario were 5, 7, 9 and 2 inches above average respectively. Shoreline residents are cautioned to be alert whenever adverse weather conditions exist, as these could cause rapid short-term rises in water levels. Should the lakes approach critically high levels, further information and advice will be provided by the Corps of Engineers.

A more detailed summary of Lakes Michigan-Huron water levels follows. All elevations are referenced to the International Great Lakes Datum 1985.

Lakes Michigan-Huron at the end of March were at elevation 579.00 feet (176.48 meters) above the mean water level at Rimouski, Quebec, or about 18 inches (48 cm.) above Chart Datum. The March monthly mean level of 578.97 feet (176.47 meters) was about 5 inches (12 cm.) above the long-term average for March. The lakes were about 26 inches (65 cm.) below the all-time high March monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986. The forecast shows that the April monthly mean level of Lakes Michigan-Huron will be about 3 inches (7 cm.) above what it was at Mid-March. The lakes are expected to begin their seasonal rise in April. The water level in Mid-September 1995 is expected to be about 4 inches (9 cm.) above the long-term average for that month, or about 5 inches (13 cm.) below what it was at the same time in 1994.

You can fax in your license plate renewal

Secretary of State Candice S. Miller has announced that Michigan motorists may now renew their license plates by FAX, a convenience that marks the beginning of a new era in customer service at the Secretary of State's office.

Joining Secretary Miller for the announcement were officials from AAA Michigan who endorsed the program by announcing that AAA Michigan members who want to take advantage of the license plate Tabs by FAX program will be offered free FAX service from 38 full-service AAA Michigan branch offices across the state.

In announcing the statewide Tabs by FAX program, Secretary Miller said Michigan is the first state in the nation to offer customers this convenient service.

"The availability of the Tabs by FAX program signals a new era at the Secretary of State's office," Secretary Miller said today. "Our customers are very busy people with many demands on their time so we have an obligation to make it as easy as possible to do business with us."

"While this program has many advantages, the one that stands out is its availability 24 hours a day, seven days a week," Secretary Miller explained. "Anyone who has a valid credit card and access to a FAX machine can renew their license plates without ever stepping foot in a Secretary of State branch office."

AAA Michigan, representing more than 1.6 million members, endorsed the program by announcing it will allow members to FAX license plate tab renewals to the Secretary of State's office free of charge from any of its branch offices around the state. The state's largest automobile insurer will also offer the Tabs by FAX service for license plate renewals to non-members, for $3.

To renew license plates, motorists must FAX the following:

* A cover sheet with name, telephone number and license plate numbers for each vehicle being renewed;

* The renewal notice for each vehicle;

* Proof of insurance for each vehicle;

* Vehicle's emissions statement, if required;

* Completed credit card charge slip.

The FAX number is 517-322-6822 or 517-322-6TAB!

Renewing by FAX will speed up processing time by as much as three days.

"In the past five years, more than 8.2 million registrations have been processed through the mail program," Secretary Miller explained.

"Based on these numbers and the comments I have received from customers who want new ways to do business with us, I am confident that the Tabs by FAX service will be a popular way to renew license plates."

Barnard Road to be repaved

The Michigan Department of Transportation recently released its list of planned road construction projects for the coming summer. All three of the major projects in Charlevoix County will be either in or near the city of Charlevoix.

Seven miles of Barnard Road, between US-31 just south of town and where Barnard Road rejoins US-31 near Norwood, will be reconstructed and improved to all-season standards.

Electrical and mechanical work will be done on Memorial Bridge in downtown Charlevoix.

Modifications to the Beaver Island boat dock in order to accommodate a new ferry will begin.

Volunteers sought for beach clean-up

As part of Earth Day - 1995, the Inland Seas Education Association will again coordinate a cleanup of public beaches in northwest lower Michigan and the Grand Traverse area. Whether you are a seasoned Beach Sweeper or a potential one, ISEA invites you to take part in the Sixth Annual Earth Day - Beach Cleanup, Saturday, April 22, from 10 a.m. to noon.

Volunteers are needed in Antrim and Charlevoix County. The goal of the "Earth Day - Beach Cleanup" event will be to remove and document debris from the shores of the Great Lakes in the Grand Traverse regional area and determine the type and sources of beach litter.

Participants in the Beach Cleanup event are contributing to the long-term health of Lake Michigan. Much of the non-biodegradable objects that were left years ago on our beaches such as bottle tips, plastic straws, glass bottles and other items have been removed in prior beach cleanups in many areas.

ISEA will again be providing data cards for participants interested in helping with the "Earth Day - Beach Cleanup". If anyone is interested in volunteering as a group or as an individual to help make the area beaches a more beautiful place, and are in need of data cards and/or a beach assignment that they would please contact the Inland Seas Education office at 271-3077. ISEA is also in need of individuals who would like to act as a "Beach Captain", and help coordinate cleanup efforts in the area of their choice.

Tennis team wins opening match

The Charlevoix Rayder tennis team won its first match of the season Monday, beating Traverse City West 6-1.

In number one singles, Eric Anderson lost 6-1, 6-0.

In number two singles, Amy Freidinger won 6-3, 6-3.

In number three singles, Shay Arnold won 0-6, 7-6, 6-2.

In number four singles, Lilly Pair won 6-3, 6-1.

In number one doubles, Chris Matye and Matt Dietle won 6-2, 6-1.

In number two doubles, Brad Parsel and Kevin Balch won 6-2, 6-0.

In number three doubles, Jess Wood and James Conlan won 6-0, 6-2.

Rayder coach Eric Lundteigen said that for being the first meet of the year, things went fairly well. He said Arnold had a great come-back.

"We're pretty young," Lundteigen said. "A lot of people are playing different positions than they were last year."

Wrestlers take two firsts

Four Charlevoix freestyle wrestlers traveled to Cedar Springs Saturday and brought home two first places, a third and a fourth.

Erin Christ went 1-0 in here weight class and placed first.

In kind of a peculiar deal, Josh Christ placed first in his weight class without even wrestling. There were two other wrestlers at the tournament who were in his weight class, but they'd seen him wrestle before and decided they would pass on wrestling with him.

Russell Williams went 4-2 and finished fourth in his weight class.

Luke Whitley went 2-2 and placed fourth in his weight class.

This coming weekend a group of high school age wrestlers will be competing in the Portland freestyle tournament. The following weekend Charlevoix wrestlers will compete in the district freestyle and greco-roman tournament.

The weather might be a bit cold, but real golfers can hack it

The city golf course was speckled with golfers on Good Friday. The sunny skies and reasonable temperatures brought golfers out.

This foursome took to the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course on Good Friday. Some members dressed for cold weather, while others were a bit more optimistic.

John Van, a ten year old golfer from Petoskey, tees off at the Charlevoix city golf course under sunny skies last Friday. His dad, Tom, said they often like to visit the municipal course in Charlevoix. "This afternoon was too good to pass up," Van said last Friday.

School board approves purchase of two new buses

by Laurie Lounsbury

Two new school buses will be added to the Charlevoix school district fleet this year. It took some thorough research by transportation director Gordon Russell and a lot of discussion by the school board to decide what type of bus to get, but the board reached a decision Monday evening. The district will purchase two gas powered buses, one with a 71 passenger capacity and one with a 65 passenger capacity. The two buses cost a total of $80,617. The new buses were budgeted for in the transportation budget as a capital expenditure.

The 65 passenger bus will be handicap equipped with a hydraulic lift, a special door, and tie downs for securing wheelchairs. The additional cost of the door, lift, and tie down is being picked up by the Charlevoix Emmet ISD. Char-Em currently uses a station wagon to transport a wheelchair-bound student.

Chorale to sing tunes from Broadway

The stage is a radio studio from years past - WNNC - broadcast from the heart of downtown Petoskey on the shores of Lit-Tra-Bay. Within these studio walls, located in the McCune Arts Center at the corner of Division and Mitchell streets, the Northern Michigan Chorale will present its 13th annual spring concert Sunday and Monday, April 23 and 24.

The concert will feature music from many classic Broadway musicals. Between these musical arrangements will be humorous radio skits complete with sound effects and nutty plots.

Stephen Little will be the featured guest artist with the Chorale, singing and playing songs from his recent record release, "Jazzin' It Up." Little, currently living in Northern Michigan, is a guitarist and singer who has performed throughout the county.

The Chorale invites everyone to attend an evening of music and laughter - broadcast live from the stage of McCune Arts Center in Petoskey. The concert begins at 7:30 p.m. both Sunday and Monday, April 23-24. Tickets are on sale at the Petoskey Chamber of Commerce and from Chorale members. Tickets will also be available at the box office on performance nights. Cost is $7 for adults, and $3 for students.

The board weighed the pros and cons of buying buses with gas motors instead of diesel powered buses. Board member Ben Cunningham favored diesel motors because the motors last longer and diesel fuel is somewhat safer than gas fuel.

Russell favored gas motors because they're less expensive, the motors have been around a long time and the school district has had good luck with them over the years.

Russell pointed out that the district doesn't put enough miles on a bus each year to justify the need for a diesel engine. The bus body will rust out before the engine wears out. Russell wasn't concerned about a perceived lack of safety with gas tanks on the new buses. "It doesn't bother me. I'm not concerned about letting my stepchildren ride the bus. The gas tanks are caged and guarded. It would take a freak accident to cause an explosion," Russell said.

The board voted five to one in favor of buying gas buses, with Cunningham casting the only dissenting vote.

In other business, the board approved the eighth grade trip to Washington D.C. One hundred eighth graders will be going to Washington on May 3. Fifteen eighth graders will be staying home from the trip. Middle School Principal Dennis VanGuilder said that financial arrangements were made available so that all students had the opportunity to go on the trip. Special class arrangements will be made for the 15 students not going on the trip.

The board also approved a trip to Chicago for the middle school future problem solving team and advanced art students. A trip to Pictured Rocks for the high school senior biology students was also approved.

Retrospective

Editor's note: Retrospective is a new monthly feature for the Courier. It is a look back at segments of area history. This month's Retrospective is provided to the Courier by the Norwood Area Historical Society.

Something we all take for granted and regularly complain about, early settlers in Norwood Township worked hard to build. Roads.

The word "road" in the 1860s when Norwood's settlers first arrived, meant something very different from what it does today. A strip was cleared through the woods. Stumps were cut as short as possible and the undergrowth was chopped out. After a season of wagon and horse travel, ruts developed. Mudholes appeared in wet seasons. That was a "road."

To make travel possible on frequently used wagon roads and through swampy ground, small logs were laid side by side. This formed a corduroy road. Often a heavy wagon load and team of horses or team of horses and a homemade road grader.

With the passage of legislation in the early '30s in Michigan, the township gave up primary responsibility for road maintenance. The county assumed responsibility for the care and maintenance of all township roads under the jurisdiction of what was known as the Mc Nitt Act.

Many of the roads in the Norwood area bear the names of early settlers. Richardson, Lord, Parsons, and Gennett are some of them. The Rex Beach Road still bears the name of author Rex Beach who once lived in the area.

The paths that bore the weight of moccasined feet, that jostled and exhausted the patience of weary settlers, and challenged the skills of pioneers, became roads. And roads, as bad as they were, brought settlers to Norwood.

117 students (and nearly $750,000) out of the Charlevoix school district.

Other items considered by the committee include: how much money to project for health insurance costs; freeing up some money for additional staffing if that's needed; building in some money for computer purchases; allocating enough money for facility maintenance.

Jackson said that the object is to present a proposed balanced budget for five years. In working on the budget, the committee found that coming up with a balanced budget for the next year or two isn't too difficult, but after that, it gets very challenging.

According to Jackson, although the process is taking up quite a bit of time, it's going to be very helpful and strengthen school decision making.

"There's no secret here. The budget has been a public document forever," Jackson noted. "Now we have a whole group of people taking a hard look at the budget."

The meetings of the budget committee are open to the public. The committee will be presenting information on its work to date at a special school board meeting April 24. The committee's next meeting will be at 4 p.m., April 26 at the high school library.

County considers staffing and wages

Commissioners tight-lipped on study results

By Laurie Lounsbury

Charlevoix County employees have waited a long time to find out if they are underpaid, as some believe. Employees also want to know if their departments are overstaffed, as county commissioners have suggested.

An independent study done by the Plante Moran consulting firm will help provide answers to these questions. The findings of the study were presented to the county personnel committee recently. Commissioners Don Smith, Howard Hosler, and Jim Behling met privately with Plante Moran consultant Jim Shrier to discuss the report. A newspaper reporter and county clerk Jane Brannon were asked to leave the meeting. County Commission chairman Don Smith said that the three commissioners were going to discuss sensitive issues regarding personnel, and preferred that their discussions be kept out of the newspaper until the report was finalized. The final report will be presented to the county commissioners at the April 26 evening meeting of the full board.

Smith said, after reviewing the report, "We're not as bad off as some people have told us." Smith said he wouldn't be pinned down to following the recommendations in the report exactly as they were written.

"I would think we're going to try to use it as a guide, but I need a little discretion as far as following every recommendation."

ten. "I would think we're going to try to use it as a guide, but I need a little discretion as far as following every recommendation."

The Plante Moran consultant said that he wouldn't alter his report to satisfy any commissioner's requests. "I'm not going to change the substance of my report," Shrier said after his meeting with the commissioners. Shrier also said of the commissioners, "I think they're trying to be fair. Where it makes sense, they'll make adjustments."

Commissioner Howard Hosler was reluctant to say much after the meeting with Shrier. "We altered some things, changed things around a little bit," Hosler said of the report. "But we want to wait to talk about it until it goes to the full

County to re-vote on unionization

The Plante Moran study of county wages and efficiency may affect more than salaries of county employees. It could affect the efforts of some employees to become unionized. County employees are still without a contract after 16 months of bargaining.

Employees will have the opportunity to re-vote on the union in the near future. According to Julie Whitley, a county employee who is on the negotiations committee, if a third of the employees want a re-vote, then a re-vote will be held. An anonymous petition was circulated throughout the county building to see how many employees would like a re-vote. Apparently there was enough support for a re-vote. The first vote to join a union passed narrowly by the county employees.

Plante Moran representative Jim Shrier thinks that the results of the study could affect the second vote. "I think if people feel comfortable that they are being treated fairly, they would not look to a union for protection," Shrier said, adding,

Charlevoix Personified

Charlevoix girl travels the world preparing for missionary work

by Laurie Lounsbury

Amy Kujawski is focused. She has a plan for her life and she can tell you about it in clear, articulate sentences. What is remarkable is that Kujawski is only 16 years old. While her peers are thinking about softball games and dates, Kujawski is pursuing missionary work in foreign countries.

Kujawski's focus and direction was influenced by her upbringing. Kujawski was home-schooled for most of her youth. Her mother and step-father, Debra and Paul Gelderblom, chose to teach the Kujawski children at home for religious reasons. Kujawski did attend public school during her middle school years, but headed back home for her high school education. "I started doing stupid things, getting into trouble," she said of her public school experience. "Now it's better because I'm not stuck hanging around with kids who don't know what they're doing."

Now, at age 16, she is technically a sophomore, but has enough credits to be a junior in high school. She plans to graduate next year so she can get on with her life. Kujawski wants to travel in France and Spain for a year after graduation, then go to college and study linguistics so she'll be ready for a full time missionary job.

Traveling around the world isn't a foreign concept to Kujawski. She went to Ecuador when she was 13 years old to do evangelistic work with a Christian youth group. The teens would do skits and little dramas on the street corners of impoverished, Ecuadorian cities to spread a message of hope.

The following summer Kujawski headed to Paraguay to do more mission work. On that trip, Kujawski stayed in remote villages without electricity, running water, or phones. "We'd do our dramas anywhere and everywhere," she said.

Kujawski's most recent trip was to Israel, a journey for entirely different purposes. This time, Kujawski was nominated by her pastor, Lander Carter, to attend a conference for Christian youth leadership. Kujawski and about 80 other teens toured all over Israel while attending conferences. Kujawski found the country fascinating. "They're a really young nation. It reminded me of what America must have been like when it was in its youth," Kujawski said of Israel. "I think our heritage is about a lot of Christianity. Our values come from religion - honesty, decency, and hard-work ethics."

Kujawski returned home from Israel just in time for Easter. Before coming home, she went to the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, where Jesus was supposed to have been crucified. She also visited the Garden Tomb, a spot where Jesus might have been entombed. "It certainly made Easter a lot more real for me," she said.

Amy Kujawski, 16, has been to Paraguay, Ecuador and Israel on church missions. Not surprisingly, her career plans at this time are to do work as a missionary. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

Handgun safety class offered

A handgun safety class designed for women will be offered May 13 at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club firing range. There is no charge for the class which is being cosponsored by the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club and the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

Deputy Jim Owens of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department will instruct the course. Owens is certified as an instructor by the National Rifle Association and the Law Enforcement Training Council. Registration in the class is limited to 20 participants.

Participants should bring their handgun to the range locked in the trunk of their car, or glove box if there is no trunk, or in some other secure fashion. They should also bring the handgun registration, 50 rounds of factory ammunition and ear and eye protection. All guns will be inspected prior to firing them on the range.

Charlevoix County Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Mary Beth Kur will discuss the rights and responsibilities of owning a handgun and self-defense issues.

The class will begin at 9 a.m.

Saturday, May 13. Classroom instruction will take place in the morning with firing range work after lunch. Participants are responsible for their own lunch. The Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club is off of U.S. 31, approximately two miles north of Charlevoix.

Filing deadline for city election is rapidly approaching

Although the election isn't until August, the filing deadline for city council candidates is rapidly approaching. Candidates who want their name included on the city election ballot must turn in completed nominating petitions to the city clerk's office by 4 p.m., May 16. Three council seats, one in each of the city's three wards, and the city clerk's seat are up for election this year. The three council seats are currently held by: Cheri Hoffman, first ward; Butch Russell, second ward; and Bruce Reid, third ward. The city clerk is Joanne Patrick.

Blank petitions may be picked up at the city clerk's office. Completing the petition requires the candidate to collect the signatures of at least 24 and not more than 40 registered voters from the ward in which they are seeking office. The clerk's race is city-wide, rather than ward based.

If more than two candidates file for any seat, there will be a primary election in August. If no seat has more than two candidates file, there will be no primary, just a general election in November.

hoard."

Shrier was willing to discuss some aspects of the report. Overall, it appeared that Charlevoix County workers are earning slightly less than other county employees of a similar size. Charlevoix County was compared to Alpena, Antrim, Benzie, Cheboygan, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Isabella, Kalkaska, Leelanau, Manistee, and Mason Counties.

According to Shrier, staffing in the equalization department was appropriate or even a little on the light side, considering the tasks that are performed by the department. Commissioners have complained for years about the size of the equalization department, claiming it is overstaffed. Shrier said that department does a lot more than most county equalization departments, including assessing for cities, mapping, and numbering for the new 9-1-1 system.

Department heads in Equalization, Probate Court, and the Friend of the Court appear to be underpaid by more than 3 percent. While Shrier wouldn't put a figure on it, but he did say that some department head positions appear to be earning more than 10 percent below comparable counties.

...county employees re-voting on union

"By and large, I think the people working for the county are happy." If the county commissioners make good on the recommendations in the Plante Moran study, particularly the recommendations about pay raises, employees might change their minds about forming a union.

OPINIONS

Editorial

A lot of volunteers work with town's youth

You'll find a special section with photos of spring sports teams in this week's Courier. In past years we've done special fall and winter sports sections, but this is the first time in recent years that we've done spring sports. Ask anyone associated with high school spring sports, either from a press or school perspective, and they'll tell you that in terms of organization they're a challenge. The biggest problem is unpredictable spring weather. Cancellations and rescheduled games or meets are common.

Something that kind of jumped out while taking the photos last week is how many community members are helping coach the teams.

On the girls' varsity softball team, head coach Rick Grunch has enlisted the assistance of Larry Potter, Jim Potter and Bob Eveleigh. The two Potters have been playing softball since shortly after learning to walk. In fast-pitch softball, pitching is critical. Without good pitching, you're going nowhere. Both Potters, Jim especially, bring a wealth of pitching knowledge to the program. The Rayders' top pitcher, Liz Grunch, has increased her velocity discernably from last year and the coaches are grooming several other pitchers on both the varsity and j.v. team for depth. In addition to helping the pitchers, having coaches who can pitch also helps the hitters. Charlevoix's hitters are getting live batting practice every day against better pitchers than they're going to see during games.

Another thing having three assistant coaches does for the softball teams is keep the players busy during practice. With four different coaches constantly hitting to them, pitching to them or catching for them, Charlevoix players don't stand around much in practice.

The track team has Douglas Bergmann and Julie Bush working with the distance runners. Both are former high school all-state runners. Bush's situation is kind of interesting. When she was in high school, she was an excellent runner, but as a team the Rayders lacked depth. Now, times have changed. The Charlevoix girls' track and cross country teams no longer have just one or two good distance runners. They've got a fleet. Bush doesn't get to run in meets with them, but she still gets to assist in the team's accomplishments. And that's got to be rewarding.

Janet Freidinger is working with the tennis team. They've got a swarm of kids out for that team this spring. Freidinger provides a female counterpart to head coach Eric Lundteigen.

Hagen Manker is working with head coach Tom Conlan and the girls' soccer team. Manker is a former Wabash College player. This is the first year that Charlevoix High School has had a varsity girls' soccer program. The team has a lot of players, but they're predominantly underclassmen. With Manker's assistance, Conlan has been able to divide the players up to get them more individual attention in practice and also work out kind of a quasi-junior varsity program so the back-up players learn and develop rather than stagnate.

The people listed above aren't all of the people who work with youth athletic programs in Charlevoix. An all-inclusive list would be difficult to come up with because it would incorporate so many people. By the time you start considering programs such as Little League baseball, youth soccer, youth basketball, wrestling and all of the city recreation programs the list of people who help out as coaches and referees gets enormous. And if you branch out beyond athletics and look at how many adults work with local youth through Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, church groups, 4-H, performing arts etc. the number of volunteers gets really impressive.

Having adult volunteers work with youth is a good deal. It gives the adults an opportunity to pass along the expertise they've acquired and gives the young people a chance to learn. Beyond that, it makes for a good community.

EDITH GILBERT

by EDITH GILBERT

When Cinema III moves, to Antrim Street, "THE ROOM" will be nothing but a memory.

Let me tell you about "THE ROOM." Originally it was a storage room for candy and supplies upstairs. In the mid '70s the new owners decided to turn it into a private box for viewing films. They replaced a wall with a glass partition, they installed three love seats, and they rented it out for $10, plus admission. And people were allowed to smoke!

Because it was so private, it was also a neat place for friends to watch movies together and talk. Sometimes it was a special treat to take the children upstairs with their friends, and of course it was ideal for teenagers.

Pat McKeown, Jr. recalls that the choices for teenagers dating in Charlevoix were few and far between, especially during the long, cold winters. Hence, the logical place for a date or group outing for boys and girls was often solved by renting "THE ROOM." McKeown recalls his first real date. He and his best friend double dated two sisters. Although he can't remember much about the movie, he can remember "THE ROOM" as if it were yesterday.

"To get to 'THE ROOM,' you first climbed a narrow, spiral staircase to the upper level. Then you moved past the movie projectors into a little hall that leads to 'THE ROOM.' In addition to being soundproof and dark, there were three large black leather couches, each on its own level, so every seat was great!"

This hideaway was never advertised, but was more or less of an open town secret. Word of mouth has made it such a popular rendezvous that it was rented out every night last summer, according to the present owner, Bill Supernaw.

There used to be two movie houses in town, the Majestic and the Palace. The Majestic is long gone and the Palace was bought by Bill and Sam Supernaw and Tom Merta in 1972. They renamed it Cinema III, not because there were three movie screens in the building as is popular today, but because there were three partners. Bill has since bought out his two partners, and recently sold the building to Jon Hisey. The new Cinema III will have, prophetically, three auditoriums now showing three different movies at the same time.

The new movie house will be heated in the winter and air conditioned in the summer, which will be a joy to many old timers, who can well remember shivering in the winter and sweltering in the summer in the old Palace. According to a survey commissioned by the city, the Palace was built in 1927, with 30 foot high ceilings and it originally was only planned to be open in the summer.

Evelyn Noirot remembers going to the movies as a child in those days, with 25 cents, which was enough money for admittance - and a bag of popcorn. She started working there as an usher when she was fourteen. She would walk up and down the aisle with a flashlight and seat customers. Mrs. Moon was one of the owners and she was very strict, Noirot remembers. One was expected to always dress neatly and be polite.

Before World War II, there was an unwritten rule that the black people who worked for the summer people, were required to sit in the back row, but this practice ended after the war.

In 1945 there was a major fire in the Palace and 80 percent of the building burned down. This caused a huge brouhaha in town as many people didn't want the theater to be rebuilt in the same location. Instead, they wanted a bigger view corridor on Bridge Street, with a broad view of Round Lake. It was decided, however, that since the entire building didn't burn to the ground, it could be rebuilt on the same spot.

One of the big complaints the public used to have with the present movie house is that they ran films such as "Grease" and "ET" for 13 and 14 weeks consecutively. Supernaw explained that according to the contractual standard agreement with the movie distributor, the film had to be shown as long as it was selling. With the tourist turnover during the summer, that meant a very long run. With the new theater having three screens, this ought not to be a problem anymore.

What are the plans for the old movie house on Bridge Street? You won't see any changes this summer. According to Hisey, the preliminary plans this fall are to convert to retail shops in the front and possibly expand the restaurant next door, the one with the view of Round Lake, formerly know as 218 Bridge Street. There may be offices or residential condominiums above.

Whatever. But "THE ROOM" will be long remembered after its gone along with the railroad bridge, the lumber mill, and the old Colonial Club gambling casino.

Ben Castiglione reaches into the mystery game to see what kind of prize he can come up with.

Amber Lynn Smith pitches bean bags at the PTA Carnival Friday. Next thing you know she'll be giving her father Jeff pointers on how to pitch in the men's slow pitch softball league.

There's just so much PTA Carnival fun a kid can stand before taking a break. Matthew Murray took a time-out to recover in the arms of his friend Tiffany Wojan.

Colin Campbell has his face painted by middle school art student Brooke Block. Getting decorated was popular with the youngsters and lines were long at the face-painting room.

Hospital offers free immunizations

Preschool children and babies in Charlevoix and northern Antrim County will be able to receive their needed immunizations free Saturday, May 13, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The one-day event is being sponsored by Charlevoix Area Hospital and District Health Department No. 3 as part of a statewide effort to bring all preschool children up-to-date with their immunizations.

Most area schools do not allow children to begin kindergarten if their immunizations are not current. Last year only 90 percent of those entering kindergarten in Charlevoix were up-to-date resulting in loss of state funds to the school.

"Actually, the hospital and health department have been working with citizen coalitions in both Antrim and Charlevoix Counties to ensure that all babies are immunized before the age of two," says Nancy Ellison, hospital director of marketing and public relations. "We hope parents will take advantage of this opportunity to have their children immunized at no charge to them," she says.

Appointments are requested, however walk-ins will not be turned away. Call 547-0295 or 1-800-432-4121 for appointments. Parents should bring their child's immunization record with them.

BUSINESS

Names in Business

A collection of praises, awards and milestones in the careers of Charlevoix area business people.

Michael A. Ruhlman, a shift supervisor at Big Rock Point Plant in Charlevoix, recently completed the Shift Supervisor Professional Development Seminar conducted by the National Academy for Nuclear Training at its Atlanta, Ga., headquarters.

The two-week seminar complements utility training programs for shift supervisors and is designed to enhance their management and supervisory skills. The seminar's primary focus is recently qualified shift supervisors, but each session also includes experienced shift supervisors who lend their practical expertise to discussions.

The nine to 10 participants share experiences through case studies, role-playing, discussions and exercises. Subjects covered include planning and overseeing work, applying plant resources, promoting team communications and improving presentational and interpersonal skills. The seminar is part of the nationally accredited shift supervisor training program.

Rayder track teams are off and running

Jessa VanGuilder, a sophomore, placed second in both the 100 and 200 meter dashes in the Rayders' opening meet against Petoskey last Thursday.

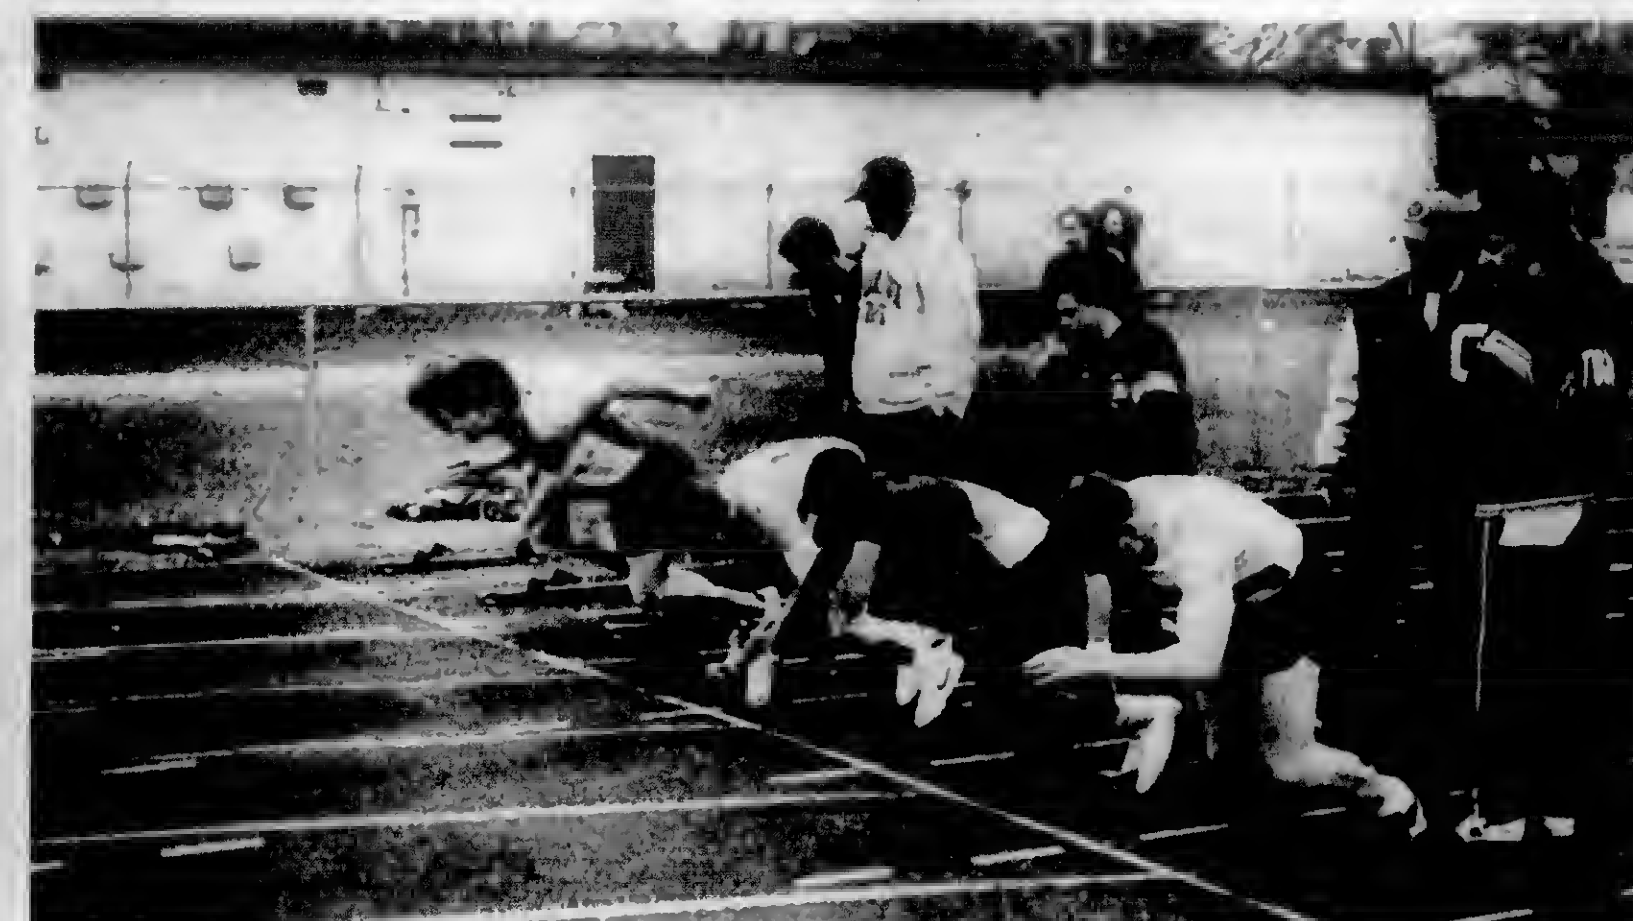

Gretchen Scott takes the baton in a relay race and moves out against Petoskey. In addition to running with the relay team, Scott, a senior, placed second in the 400 meter run.

Travis Wood (right) won three events in last Thursday's track meet. He won the 110 meter hurdles, the 300 meter hurdles and the pole vault.

Jessa VanGuilder (second from right) got off to a bad start in the 100 meter dash, but ran well in the middle of the race and ended up taking second.

Jerry Duhart (second from right) won both the 100 and 200 meter dashes in Charlevoix's opening meet against Petoskey last Thursday. Duhart, a senior, is the defending league champion in the sprints.

SPORTS

Jenny Eveleigh, a sophomore pitching for the first year, has been doing well as the Rayder varsity softball team's second pitcher this season.

Liz Coen has done reasonably well with the bat, but her real strength has been in the field early in the season. Coen, a good all-around athlete, has one of the best arms on the Rayder team.

Rayder softball team sweeps Harbor Springs 8-2 and 10-0

Charlevoix's girls' softball team improved their season record to 6-2 with a sweep of two games at Harbor Springs Monday.

Charlevoix won the opening game 8-2 and followed up with a 10-0 shutout in game two. Liz Grunch picked up both pitching wins, allowing one hit in the first game and another hit pitching four innings in game two. She struck out 19 batters on the day. Jenny Eveleigh mopped up the final inning of game two, giving up two walks and striking out one.

In the opening game, Grunch had two of Charlevoix's five hits. In the second game, Grunch had three hits including a double. Liz Coen also had a double while Waja Wujcik and Jill Dreyer each had two hits.

This past Saturday the Rayders traveled to Grand Rapids to play in a tournament. They finished sixth among 16 teams with a 2-2 record. The Rayders beat defending state champion Hemlock 5-2, later beat Sparta and then lost to the eventual tournament winner, Grand Rapids Forest Hills 6-2.

Coach Rick Grunch said the Rayders were leading Forest Hills 2-0 in the seventh inning, but were hurt by defensive errors. He said that generally speaking the Rayders played well in the tournament. He said that the defensive lapses occurred when they tried to sneak a peak at where they were going to throw, prior to picking up the ball.

Lisa Boss takes a mighty rip during Charlevoix's 26-0 pounding of Mackinaw City in the Rayders' season opener last week.

Go fly a kite, but do it safely

Blue skies and warm breezes will soon be greeting kite-flying and other outdoor enthusiasts. Consumers Power Company offers advice to make those outings safe as well as fun.

When removing an object caught in a tree, like a kite or balloon, remember to stay clear of electric lines. When using a ladder outside, or any metal pole, be careful not to let it touch a power line.

"We ask kids to follow a simple rule," says Steven L. Ray, energy delivery manager for the utility. "When it comes to outdoor fun, look, stay away from overhead electric lines and stay alive."

Kites should never be flown near electric power lines. If a kite gets entangled in an electric line, don't try to get it out — let it go. A child should never climb a utility pole, a tree or a broadcast tower to retrieve a kite. In the long run, buying a new kite is the safest course of action.

Consumers Power offers some basic rules that will help both young kite flyers and tree climbers to have fun and avoid trouble:

- Keep away from overhead electric lines.
- If an electric line falls, keep away from it and call Consumers Power immediately at 1-800-477-5050.
- When buying or making a kite, make sure it is constructed of wood, plastic and paper — do not use anything made of metal.
- Use dry string when flying a kite, not wire or anything metallic.
- Fly your kite in open areas in dry weather. Avoid streets and highways and keep away from television and radio antennas.

Consumers Power offers films and videotapes on electrical safety for free use by schools and community organizations. Information on obtaining the materials can be requested by calling your local Consumers Power office or by writing the Energy Education Program, Consumers Power Company, 212 W. Michigan Ave., Jackson, MI 49201.

Char-Em preschool enrolling students

The Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, Northwest Michigan Human Services Agency, Project FREE and the East Jordan PREP Program will host a joint preschool recruitment of the 1995/96 school year during the months of April, May and June. Joint recruitment ensures that families are made aware of each of the free preschool programs available to them and to enroll as many eligible children as possible into a program. Parents of 3 and 5 year old children can come to the recruitment and learn about preschool programs offered in their local school district. Parents are asked to bring: child's immunization records, child's birth certificate, proof of income, Medicaid card or private insurance number, Social Security number of each family member, food stamp card, if applicable, and their child.

For more information or to make an appointment call 347-9070 if you live in Boyne, Charlevoix, Pellston or Petoskey or 536-7564 if you live in East Jordan.

Tie vote leaves city purchasing as is pending further review

By L. Scott Swanson

By a 3-3 vote of the Charlevoix City Council an effort to reduce the discretionary spending limit for city administrators without council approval remains at $10,000.

The issue has been ongoing for several months. Previously council members Gabe Campbell, Butch Russell, Don Meggison and Jackie Cross voted in favor of setting a public hearing for an amendment reducing the discretionary spending limit of city administrators from $10,000 to $5,000. Council members Cheri Hoffman and Bruce Reid and mayor Josh Barnes favor leaving the limit at $10,000.

Monday evening Cross voted with Reid and Hoffman in opposing a motion to adopt a proposed ordinance that would have reduced the limit. The 3-3 council vote caused the motion to fail. Since the issue is a charter amendment, Barnes is not allowed to vote to break the tie. Following the meeting, Cross said he's still willing to reduce the spending limit, but was uncomfortable with the wording as proposed in the amendment before council Monday evening.

Prior to Monday's council vote, former council member Bob Gill, who has been assigned by Barnes to update wording in the city charter so that it is consistent with itself, said the amendment as proposed had confusing wording and loose ends.

Campbell has been the most vocal supporter of reducing the spending limit. He maintains that having expenditures of more than $5,000 be subject to prior approval would equate to better and more responsible business practices by the city. He argues that since the council meets twice a month, it wouldn't tie administrators hands, but would leave the council better informed derson in the county clerk's department. Henderson said the first vote was so close, she thought it was worth trying again. She has been opposed to a union all along. "I see this as a good situation with a good employer. I'm not in a position where I could lose my job as long as I'm doing my job," Henderson said, adding, "There's no place for a union in county government since the taxpayers dictate what we do anyway."

In other business, the commissioners gave their unofficial support to the East Jordan Downtown Development Authority (DDA). The East Jordan DDA was formed under the old DDA laws and technically doesn't need the county's approval. The DDA would like to change some boundaries, such as including all of the East Jordan Iron Works, and if they change boundaries then the old DDA formation is invalidated. With that in mind, Bill Hughes of the East Jordan DDA asked for the commissioner's support of the DDA. Smith, who over the years has repeatedly expressed distrust of DDAs, wouldn't give an official endorsement of the East Jordan DDA until he's gotten a legal opinion on the matter. Mary Faculak of the East Jordan Chamber of Commerce, pointed out that East Jordan is the poster child for DDAs. In a straw vote, commissioners agreed to support the East Jordan DDA provided it agrees to terminate itself in 20 years.

City election deadline approaches

Although the election isn't until August, the filing deadline for city council candidate is rapidly approaching. Candidates who want their name included on the city election ballot must turn in completed nominating petitions to the city clerk's office by 4 p.m., May 16. Three council seats, one in each of the city's three wards, and the city clerk's seat are up for election this year. The three council seats are currently held by: Cheri Hoffman, first ward; Butch Russell, second ward; and Bruce Reid, third ward. The city clerk is Joanne Patrick.

Blank petitions may be picked up at the city clerk's office. Completing the petition requires the candidate to collect the signatures of at least 24 and not more than 40 registered voters from the ward in which they are seeking office. The clerk's race is city-wide, rather than ward based.

If more than two candidates file for any seat, there will be a primary election in August. If no seat has more than two candidates file, there will be no primary, just a general election in November.

and better able to respond to constituent questions about city expenditures. Past expenditures which have been questioned by Campbell and others involved engineering and other professional services.

Reid argues that reducing the discretionary spending level amounts to fixing something which isn't broke. Monday evening, he pointed out that the city gets competitive quotes on items purchased and that there is no conspiracy or secret and that everything is a matter of public record.

Campbell said he hasn't said that he didn't trust anybody, but feels reducing the spending limit would lead to a better informed council.

Following Monday evening's vote, Cross said he would like to revisit the issue after Gill finishes drafting proposed charter revisions.

In other matters Monday evening:

*Council members approved two development plan requests.

One will allow Lloyd VanAlstine to put a nine-foot wide door in a building at 108 West Carpenter to allow four indoor parking spaces. Creating the indoor parking spaces will provide enough parking to allow the Char-Em Intermediate School District to rent a portion of the building to use as a classroom for developmentally disabled adults.

The second plan approved will allow Pete and Mickey's restaurant at the Edgewater Inn to replace a temporary enclosure around a deck dining area with a permanent enclosure.

*Council members approved renewing a contract with Real Estate One of Charlevoix for the sale of lots in the city industrial park. There are only two unsold lots left in the park and one of those is going to be used for the expansion of an industry presently in the park.

*Theater owner Bill Supernaw offered an update on construction of the new multi-screen theater on Antrim Street. He said plans are to have the new theater open by July 1. However, if any unforeseen delays arise, the old theater on Bridge Street will continue to operate until the new theater comes on line.

Supernaw said the old theater building has been sold to Jon Hisey who plans to develop it into commercial space, both on the Bridget Street and Round Lake sides. Supernaw said he received excellent cooperation and guidance from the city throughout the project and he feels the culmination of the project will be something which is a tremendous asset to the downtown area.

*During the beginning of the public comments section of the meeting, second ward resident Polle Verwys asked if the petunia project is publically or privately funded. After she completed her question, Barnes asked her to be seated. She refused, saying she preferred to remain standing. So Barnes asked her to at least step away from the podium. She complied. For several seconds, nothing happened. There was no response to Verwys' question from the council and no movement on her part.

Supernaw then approached the podium and offered the aforementioned update on theater construction. Meanwhile, Verwys stood a couple of feet behind him at the podium.

After Supernaw finished and returned to the audience, Campbell pointed out to Barnes that Verwys had never received an answer to her question. At that time, Verwys returned to her seat. Barnes said she hadn't received an answer because he did not know the answer. He said that city manager Mike Wiesner had asked that in instances where audience members ask questions he be allowed to respond in writing to the person asking the question at a later date. Campbell told Barnes that Barnes hadn't said that when Verwys was at the podium. Barnes said he felt Verwys understood that from previous meetings.

Monday evening's installment was the latest in an ongoing dispute between Barnes, Verwys and Billie Smith over how the public comments portion of the meeting is to be conducted. Verwys, Smith and former mayor Dave Novotny had similar disputes.

Barnes has requested that any person making a comment restrict themselves to a three-minute time limit. He also has refused to answer questions one by one, but instead has asked that if people have more than one question, they ask them all, then take their seat and have them answered. Verwys has pointed out that other people aren't restricted to three minutes. Smith has argued that she should be able to direct questions to her council representative rather than to Barnes.

Some side incidents to the debate have included Smith reciting passages from Roberts Rules of Order or engaging in question and answer sessions reminiscent of a courtroom cross examination from the speaker's podium and at other times muttering complaints from the audience. Meanwhile, Barnes has on more than one occasion attempted to adjourn meetings when things weren't going the way he desired in arguments with Smith or Verwys and on one occasion had a wrist-watch alarm beeping after a speaker's three-minute time limit expired.

Editorial

Must we have so many proclaimed days?

For busy people there are not enough hours in the day and not enough days in the year. However, for people seeking to draw attention to whatever their pet project in life is, there can never be too many national days of whatever proclaimed.

It's an unfortunate phase we're going through in American society. It seems everybody who's feeling a bit neglected or just wants some publicity for their pet project has decided that the way to remedy the situation is to have a national day, week or month proclaimed by any politician they can talk into doing some proclaiming.

For those of you who didn't know it and somehow missed all of the hoopla, Monday, May 1 was Law Day, Thursday, May 4 will be the National Day of Prayer and May 20 - 27 will be National Safe Boating Week. All of these days have been proclaimed by Charlevoix mayor Josh Barnes and the Charlevoix City Council. Law Day and Boating week were proclaimed this past Monday evening. Prayer Day was proclaimed back in mid-April. (Christians apparently were more on top of things than the lawyers, whose day was two-thirds over before it was even officially proclaimed. Boaters probably could have gotten by with just a day if the event were only to include power boaters, but since the event was to include sailboats too, they had to stretch it into a whole week because sailboats are so darn slow.)

Shortly after Barnes took over as mayor, he made a proclamation of some day or another, not one of those mentioned above, but one of countless others. For those of us who regularly attend city council meetings and like to see them function expeditiously, he made the proclamation with a bit too much verve for comfort. It left us wondering, "Is he going to be making these every time you turn around? And are we going to have to listen to people read these proclamations?"

For those of you who have never had to listen to someone read a proclamation for a national day of whatever, count your blessings. They're full of whereassss and therefores and gush wordy propaganda from every nook and cranny. Hemingway never wrote a proclamation.

Monday night's council agenda came as a pleasant surprise. It contained two proclamations, but they were both under the consent agenda. This meant that they weren't read out loud. Council was asked for approval of the consent agenda. They approved it and the proclamations were done with it. No proclamations were read. The meeting quickly progressed to more important business. Assuming Barnes was the one who suggested that manner of handling proclamations, he deserves credit there for a good move.

And it's not that the projects for which proclamations are made are bad things. Many of the items proclaimed and the events in conjunction with the proclaimed days are very nice. For example, this Thursday's (May 4) Prayer Day lunch at the city fire hall is a wonderful community event and well-worth attending.

The problem with the national days of whatever is not what they attempt to draw attention to, it's the means which people use to gain attention. If prayer, law, boating safety or any of countless other things are important, they should stand on their own merits. Proclaiming a national day in order to gain recognition for them doesn't strengthen them. It's building a false platform to raise up these things. And it's been done so often with so many things, it's become cliched and in a way is almost more detrimental than beneficial.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. LOWELL ANDERSON
Charlevoix Assembly of God

The single greatest theme of Jesus Christ is LOVE. (And in case you are interested, the second most mentioned theme of Jesus was MONEY.) So significant is the theme of love that Jesus said it is the basis for the two greatest commandments: "Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind. This is the first and greatest commandment. And the second is like it: Love your neighbor as yourself. All the Law and the Prophets hang on these two commandments." (Matt. 22:37-40)

Christianity has become so codified with various doctrine that we have complicated what Jesus intended to be very simple. The essence of Christianity is to love God supremely and love others fully. While this truth is simple, it is not simplistic.

It is not simplistic in that it means far more than mouthing empty platitudes on the one hand, or seeking to avoid accountability and responsibility on the other. It's easy to mouth platitudes of love for others, it's quite another to sacrifice one's time, energy and resources for them. One can say they love the starving children in Africa, or inner-city America, but love isn't love until it puts food in their empty stomachs. Neither does one truly love another by not making them accountable for behaviors that are detrimental or destructive to themselves or others. True love does not enable someone else's dysfunction. Failure to discipline a child and shape his character for successful and productive adulthood is not true love.

The two great commandments Jesus gave us are inextricably united. One cannot love God supremely and not love his neighbor. True love for God will always be accompanied by loving what God loves; others! One cannot truly love others if he does not love God first. It is only in loving God and in return experiencing His great love for us that we can truly love others.

Since Jesus said we are to love our neighbor as ourselves, the assumption often is that we must love ourselves first before we can love others. Popular opinion is that in order for us to love God and others we must first love ourselves. Intuitively we love ourselves; we put our own will, feelings and desires before others. When you really stop to think about it, self-love is the root of the problem. Jesus Christ is our great example, and nowhere in scripture does it say that Jesus loved Himself. What the Bible does reveal is the Father loving Jesus, Jesus receiving that love, and Jesus passing that love on to others.

It is only as we learn to love the Lord supremely, and in doing so tap the source of divine love to us, that we will be able to truly love our neighbor as we love ourselves.

Char-Em career program and Ferris State agree on credit transfer

Naomi Singer, of the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District Career Center, and William A. Sederburg, Ferris State University Interim President, recently signed an articulation agreement ensuring students a "seamless transition" from the center into the University. Ferris is the first of Michigan's 15 public universities to enter into articipation agreements with 40 high school career centers, allowing students who complete the centers' programs to earn up to 16 semester credits to be applied toward their Ferris degrees. Scott Whitener, dean of FSU's College of Education, said students will not lose ground through duplicate programming. The knowledge students gained through their high school career centers will be recognized, so they will not repeat the same curriculum content and will build on their knowledge. Dr. Whitener said students will not be required to pay for the credits they earned prior to Ferris enrollment and the advanced standing will shorten their education.

William A. Sederburg (left), Ferris State University Interim President and Naomi Singer of the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District Career Center celebrate the signing of an agreement ensuring that credits earned by career center students will transfer to the university. Career center students can earn up to 16 college credits.

Students complete Big Rock job shadowing program

The inaugural class of students graduated April 26 from the job shadowing program between the Big Rock Point nuclear plant and the Char/Em Intermediate School District.

The "Class of '95" consisted of 7 juniors and seniors from six area high schools. Students were teamed with a Big Rock Point employee in a discipline of their choice; such as engineering, chemistry/health physics, instrument and control, computers, administration assistant, public affairs, human resources and storekeeping. During the six-week program, students were encouraged to actively participate, track jobs and learn as much as possible about their potential future vocations.

"We have been looking for some time to include practical work experience in our program," said Mary Gaudard, Char/Em career and technology assistant. "This job shadowing program is a wonderful way to assist students in making wise career decisions."

Participating in the program were: Tracy Zelenak, Central Lake High School; Jason Firman, Charlevoix High School; Willie Dodge, Harbor Springs High School; Melissa Helsley and Eric Kessler, Boyne City High School; and Mike Warner and Jodi Veenstra, Ellsworth High School.

"The job shadowing program is an excellent opportunity to make an investment in local students and also in our plant," said Ellen Zienert, Big Rock Point human resources director. "We have many employees who graduated from local high schools and hire interns nearly every summer. A program such as this can help develop quality future employees."

The graduating students were honored at a luncheon ceremony April 26. Each received a certificate of participation and a memento of their experience.

Track team takes a shot at CMU title

Charlevoix's boys' track team took a run at the title at the Lyle Bennet Relays at Central Michigan University Saturday, but ended up placing second in Class C, six points behind Breckenridge.

Charlevoix won three events: the 3200 meter relay, the distance medley race and the 3200 meter run.

Matt Dickinson, Mike Bush, Chris LeButt and Brian Martinus are the Class C defending champions in the 3200 meter relay and Saturday's performance indicated they're not planning on giving up the title. They won the event in a time of 8:24.

Bush (1600 meters), Dickinson (1200), LeButt (800) and Seth Kilander (400) joined forces to win the distance medley.

Bush completed a gold medal hat trick by winning the 3200 meter run in 9:44. Mike Newkirk of East Jordan was second with a time of 9:46 while Dickinson placed third in 9:48 to complete a Charlevoix County sweep of the top three places.

Travis Wood placed second in the pole vault while a 1600 meter relay team of Kilander, Wood, LeButt and Jerry Duhart finished third.

Duhart placed fifth in the 100 meter dash. An 800 relay team of Chris Dominic, Dave Manker, Kilander and Duhart also placed fifth. Wood placed sixth in the 110 meter hurdles. T.J. Felter finished seventh in the discus. Dominic, Manker, Kilander and Duhart teamed up to place seventh in the 400 relay.

Charlevoix's girls placed thirteenth among 26 Class C teams. The Rayders' top finish, a third place, came in the 3200 meter relay run by Beeca Chamberlain, Liz Kelly, Lisa Hoadley and Chelsea Gorkiewicz.

Kelly, Hoadley, Gretchen Scott and Jessa VanGuilder placed sixth in the 1600 meter relay. Chamberlain finished seventh in the 3200 meter run.

The Rayder track team will host Boyne City, Rogers City and Traverse City St. Francis Wednesday, May 3.

Baseball team gets a loss and a tie

Charlevoix's varsity baseball team traveled to Traverse City St. Francis Monday and came out of a double header with an 8-7 loss and a 7-7 tie.

St. Francis won the opening game on a throwing error with two outs in the bottom of the seventh inning. Steve Carland, who was pitching in relief of Bryan Jarema, got the pitching loss. Charlevoix had five hits in the game.

In the second game, which was called due to darkness, Mark-Boss pitched for the Rayders.

Boss also led the Rayders in hitting in the second game with a double and a single. Justin Gengle had two singles in the game.

The Rayders season record is now 1-4-1.

Softball league meeting May 16

The Charlevoix Recreation Department will host an organizational meeting for men's and women's softball leagues at 7 p.m., Tuesday May 16 at City Hall. There are still openings available for teams in both the men's and women's slow-pitch leagues.

Wrestlers qualify for state

The Charlevoix Freestyle Wrestling Club competed in the Regional Tournament this past weekend and came home with a first and second place trophy.

Josh Christ picked up a first place trophy, going undefeated on the day. Russell Williams finished second in his weight class with a 4-1 record. Both will advance to the State Finals. The Freestyle Club is sponsored by the Silver Birch Motel and Biceps Gym.

Middle school students from all across northern Michigan were in Charlevoix Monday afternoon competing in a middle school track meet. Running a leg of 800 meter for Charlevoix was Jamie Gowell.

SCRAPBOOK

Early May used to be the time of year for the annual Chamber of Commerce dinner dance. The dance was always held at the Belvedere Casino. In more recent years, the casino's furnace broke and the building had no heat. Frigid temperatures in the building made the dance less popular than it was in its heyday. Pictured here we found the late Gordon Wellman dancing with his wife Helen, and Bruce Bartlett Sr. looking over the heads of other dancers.

Lady in last week's photo was Estelle Meredith

Last week's scrapbook photo portrayed two women selling poppies for the VFW. We knew that one woman was Rosemary Warner. We have since learned that the woman on the right was Estelle Meredith. Both Meredith and Warner were former presidents of the VFW Women's Auxiliary.

Charlevoix Personified New blood needed for Blood Drive

By Laurie Lounsbury

"Blood can't be manufactured. It has to come from people," Nancy Fowler said. So she and her pal Andie Mathews have donated blood, sweat, and time to get blood from its only source—the people in the community. In 23 years, the two women have served as the original, and only, chairmen of the Charlevoix County Blood Drive. And after 23 years, the two women are ready to retire from the positions they've held for a generation. "Twenty-three years is a long time. We don't feel guilty about retiring, but we sure would like to find someone interested in doing this to take our place," Fowler said. She and Mathews made a pact with one another many years ago that they wouldn't retire until they found replacements for themselves.

But times have changed and there aren't many men or women who have plenty of spare time for volunteer work. Fowler and Mathews decided to retire anyway, so they submitted their resignations directly to the Red Cross. They're hoping that if no individuals step forward and volunteer for the job, the churches in town will take over the blood drive.

Donated blood is a precious commodity. The two women expressed concern over the shrinking numbers of donors. Fear of AIDS, busy schedules, and a lack of awareness of the need for blood is keeping donors away from the bloodmobile. "On our first blood drive in 1972, we got 165 pints of blood. Now we're lucky to get 90," Fowler said. "I used to take it personally, but I don't do that anymore," Fowler said. Mathews nodded sympathetically at her friend. "I used to be afraid to call her the day after a

County is at top in commissioner benefits

By Laurie Lounsbury

The Plante and Moran report, which compared Charlevoix County to 11 other counties, contained one glaring discrepancy, but don't be surprised if county commissioners don't bring it up for discussion at a public meeting. Of 12 counties, only Charlevoix County and Mason County provide health benefits to retired employees and employees' widows. And only Charlevoix County pays benefits to four former county commissioners who left or were voted out of office.

While many and perhaps most people don't think of elected officials as county employees, according to the retirement plan the county uses, commissioners can opt to be considered full-time employees since they are on call to their constituents on a full-time basis. The actual hours they work would classify them as part-time employees.

Charlevoix County doesn't pay benefits for any part-time, retired employees. The county doesn't even pay health benefits to current part-time employees. Yet the county pays about $6,000 a year to provide health benefits for ex-commissioners Lee Moerland, Larry Mathew, Ralph Harmon, and Clyde Cunningham.

How did this happen? On December 10, 1986, commissioners voted to award retirement benefits to any county employees who were eligible for retirement benefits. The commissioners who unanimously supported this resolution were Lee Moerland, Larry Mathew, Ralph Harmon, Don Smith, Tom Breakey, and Oral Sutliff. Three of those men knew they would qualify for the benefits. Smith and Sutliff also now qualify for retirement benefits. Sutliff currently works in the county transit department and Smith has served 13 years as a commissioner. Moerland was voting himself retirement benefits as a lame duck commissioner. In November, he was defeated in his re-election attempt by Bud Heeres. He voted for the retirement benefits between his election defeat and leaving office at the end of the year.

The 1986 resolution said that the county had eight retirees who were purchasing retirement benefits through the county. "This number (of retirees) has remained stable over the years...payment of retirees'

Study compares county employee wages

By Laurie Lounsbury

It took a while, but the Plante and Moran study has finally come to light. The study compares wages, benefits, and staffing in Charlevoix County as to 11 other counties in Michigan. The study was completed nearly a month ago, but county commissioners suppressed it until the Michigan Freedom of Information Act was exercised and chairman Don Smith turned copies of the report over to the local newspapers. The study said that some of Charlevoix County's department heads' salaries are 12 percent below the other counties. In particular, the probate court administrator, Blue Cross would not be a significant cost increase to the county but does represent a significant savings to retirees on fixed incomes," the resolution said.

The number of retirees did not stay at eight. The number has grown to 18 retired employees, and will continue to grow significantly for many years before it levels off. Commissioner Jim Behling said, "By having that benefit, we are indebted the county to millions of dollars. The way we're going, we could still be in a bind. That's a benefit no one can afford."

In 1993, the board of commissioners saw that paying out retirement benefits to employees and their spouses was going to grow to astronomical proportions if the county didn't change its policy. "I supported the retirement plan originally, but now I regret that," Smith said in 1993. So county commissioners Smith, Behling, Phil Johnson, Carl Price, Howard Hostler, and Richie Gillespie voted to cut the retirement benefits for any future employees. They also voted to cut the benefits for spouses of current employees upon retirement. What they didn't cut were the benefits for ex-commissioners and themselves, the current commissioners, when they retire.

"Personally, I don't think commissioners should get retirement benefits," said Price. Behling wasn't so sure. "I don't know if it's right," Behling said of the benefit, adding, "I do know that we cut the same across the board, for employees and commissioners. We got a lot of heat (from employees) for trying to trim this retirement benefit back a little bit."

The Courier tried to get Smith's opinion on the matter, but he did not return several phone calls.

The wage compensation for other employees was found to be about 2 percent below other counties. That difference was corrected when the county granted a 3 percent retroactive raise to all county employees.

The county's retirement plan (see related story) stuck out as an oddity when compared to other counties. Many other counties allow their employees to buy into a group plan after retirement. In Charlevoix County, retirement benefits are paid by the county for any employees who are eligible and were hired before January of 1993. This could cost the county millions of dollars in the next few decades.

When comparing salaries and wages, the study had to adjust for number of hours actually worked in Charlevoix County. County employees currently work a 35 hour work week, at seven hours a day. Salaries in other counties are based on a 40 hour work week. County commissioners are considering a switch to a 37 and a-half or 40 hour work week for employees, hoping it will increase efficiency and reduce the need to hire new employees.

blood drive. I knew she'd be so upset if the attendance was low."

A crisis seems to help people rise above their fear of donating blood. When the bombing occurred in Oklahoma City, people lined up and waited hours to donate blood at Northern Michigan Hospital.

"When there's really a need, people come through," Fowler said.

"I just wish people realized that there's always a need," Mathews added.

If donating blood makes you squeamish, or you are unable to give blood for medical reasons, there are other ways to help the cause. Mathews and Fowler reported that they always need volunteers to help run the canteen and register donors. Even baking homemade cookies is a big help. "Our volunteers are faithful, but some are getting up in years, so we're interested in getting new volunteers," Mathews said.

Fowler and Mathews will direct the May and September blood drives before hanging up their volunteer hats. The spring blood drive will be May 18 from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the American Legion Hall. Mathews said that any nervous, potential donors are welcome to visit and observe the process without donating blood.

Pool construction begins next week

Following ground-breaking April 22 for the proposed public pool for the Charlevoix area, road building and excavation equipment moved in to create a 'footprint' for the pool, parking lot and a road from U.S. 31 N to the building site.

Next week, according to Dr. David Strawbridge, president of Charlevoix Friends of the Pool, the four-acre site will be ready for Acme Pools to begin constructing the pool.

Thus far, all labor to prepare the site has been donated. Steven Smith, of C.H. Smith Co., Inc., is coordinating the work of volunteers representing several local firms. Earlier, six local engineering firms provided their services at no cost.

"These in-kind services are a measure of the strong support for the pool project," said Strawbridge. "Also, pledges and donations are coming in at a faster rate. We're extremely grateful for this support."

Additional funds are expected to be raised at the 8th annual Petunia Party and Pool Auction scheduled for Sunday, Aug. 6 at the Charlevoix Country Club. Joanne Curtis is accepting auction donations and maybe reached at 547-5494.

Those wishing to make donations to the pool project may mail checks, payable to the Charlevoix County Community Foundation Pool Fund, to P.O. Box 1, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Editorial

It is an outrageous example of politicians feathering their own nest.

And it didn't happen in Washington D.C. You've got to look closer to home.

It didn't happen in Lansing. You've got to look closer still.

It happened right here in Charlevoix County. It happened nearly 10 years ago and it's still sucking money out of Charlevoix County taxpayers' pockets today.

On Dec. 10, 1986, Charlevoix County Commissioners approved granting retirement benefits to county employees and their spouses. The county commissioners at the time were Lee Moerland, Larry Matthews, Ralph Harmon, Don Smith, Tom Breakey and Oral Sutliff.

On Dec. 10, 1986, when commissioners approved retirement benefits, there were only eight county employees eligible for the program. But that number was due to change and commissioners knew it. How did they know it? Because three of the six who voted to add retirement benefits were in line to receive them at the time and since that time two more of the six have qualified.

Moerland's case is the most blatant. In November of 1986, one month before voting himself retirement benefits at county expense, Moerland had been defeated in his campaign for re-election by Bud Heeres. Although the benefit package had been discussed earlier, when he voted for the benefit that he would receive, Moerland was a lame duck commissioner.

In order to qualify for retirement benefits, a commissioner has to serve at least five two-year terms and be age 60. (Other combination of years served and age will also qualify.)

Matthew joined the county board in 1977 and had been re-elected to another two-year term in November of 1986 so he also knew he would qualify. Harmon also qualified and like Moerland, Matthew, and another former commissioner, Clyde Cunningham, is now receiving county retirement benefits. Currently the county is paying about $6,000 per year to provide retirement benefits to Mo-

erland, Harmon, Matthew and Cunningham.

Smith and Sutliff now also qualify for the benefits, but have yet to retire. Smith is a teacher and probably has a better benefit package through the school system. Given that, and his role as chairman of the county commissioners Smith is in an ideal position to take the lead in rectifying this situation, if he is so inclined.

Sutliff's situation is almost as interesting as that of Moerland. Sutliff was ousted from the board in 1988 by Phil Johnson. Later, Sutliff was hired to fill a new position created at the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging and Transit Authority. It appeared to be another case of county commissioners taking care of a comrade when voters went away and failed to re-elect a commissioner.

In 1986, when they were taking care of themselves, commissioners also included other county employees. These would be what most people would consider to be the real county employees, the ones who work five days a week. As opposed to the six who attend two meetings a month and perhaps a few committee meetings.

Including real county employees, for whom you might actually make a legitimate argument for giving retirement benefits, may have seemed harmless enough to commissioners in 1986, but it ended up creating a problem. The problem is that while there are only six county commissioners, there are dozens of real employees and as they began to retire the number of employees and spouses eligible for county retirement benefits (and consequently the cost associated with funding those benefits) grew and grew. Looking down the road, this program held the potential to become an extraordinarily large expense.

In 1993 when this problem became obvious, commissioners acted and acted decisively. They grandfathered in all of the employees who were receiving benefits, but cut the benefits to future employees and commissioners. In other words, they left benefits in place for the 1986 commissioners who had voted them in and also left the door open for themselves to receive them.

County employees responded by unionizing. County taxpayers should respond by demanding that before doing another thing, county commissioners terminate retirement benefits for county commissioners - past, present and future. These benefits never should have been granted in the first place and their further existence simply should not be tolerated. If current commissioners don't correct the problem, county voters should make sure they don't stay in office long enough to qualify for benefits they shouldn't receive.

Current county commissioners, their phone numbers and the areas they serve are as follows:

Carl Price, 347-3032 - Hayes, Bay, Evangeline and Melrose Townships (West of US 31);
Jim Behling, 582-7604 - Chandler, Hudson, Boyne Valley, Wilson and Melrose Townships (East of US 31);
Phillip Johnson, 582-7373 - Boyne City;
Howard Hosler, 536-7983 - East Jordan and South Arm Township;
Don Smith, 547-2125 - Charlevoix, Norwood, Marion and Eveline Townships.
Richard Gillespie, 448-2366 - City of Charlevoix, Peaine and St. James Townships.

The art of effective mingling

by EDITH GILBERT

It was just like watching Borg at a tennis match. Or Michel Jordan on a basketball court — they both make the games look so easy!

'Working a room,' is another game that takes skill and practice too. I'm reminded of some visiting houseguests, who accompanied me to a cocktail party, where they didn't know a soul. Were they bored? No! Ill at ease? No!

Instead, they gracefully circled the room like two ballet dancers. They introduced themselves. They mentioned where they were from and whom they were visiting. They admired the area. They asked questions about fishing and golf. Long after they left, people still came up to me and said with genuine enthusiasm, what a lovely couple I had brought to the party, and how much they enjoyed visiting with them. It made me feel good.

Lona O'Connor wrote the best column on the subject of networking some time ago in the Detroit Free Press, and it bears repeating here. She says, "Everyone advises you to get out there and network. The business contacts you make and the information you pick up are invaluable to your career, we all tell you."

"So you get to the Chamber of Commerce cocktail party, you slap on your name tag ... and then what?"

"If you're like most people, you operate just fine at the office, but when you get in a quasi-social setting all your worst insecurities pop out like measles. Part of the problem is thinking (incorrectly) that you don't know what to do. In fact, there is a very simple procedure for handling a business 'social occasion.'"

"WHAT'S YOUR AGENDA? Just going to a business party is not enough. This is a business, after all, and so you should have a few things you want to accomplish. You may set yourself a goal of meeting 10 new people. Or there may be a potential client you want to meet. Or you may want to tell your peers about the new job."

"Giving yourself something to do is not only a way to make good use of your time. It also gives you something to do with yourself, which can help you avoid the social paralysis that affects many people at business-social occasions."

Letters to the editor

MUCC responds to Courier editorial

Editor,

On behalf of Michigan United Conservation Clubs (MUCC), I would like to clarify the unclaimed deposits issue mentioned in your April 19th editorial.

In 1976, MUCC was the leading advocate of the voter mandated proposal to ban throwaways and require a ten-cent refundable deposit on containers. While it is true that MUCC put forth a great amount of effort to get this legislation passed, in the end the proposal was instituted because of the extensive support shown by the voters.

In 1989, the legislature voted to amend the Bottle Bill by requiring that unclaimed deposits, deposits paid but for some reason not refunded, be taken out of the bottlers' pockets and given back to the people of Michigan. This amendment created an Environmental Trust Fund where unclaimed deposit income would fund many programs to improve the environment. Again, MUCC strongly supported this action, but it was our legislature representing its constituents who passed the amendment because of its necessity. (I might add the measure passed 100-6 in the House and 37-1 in the Senate.)

The Michigan Soft Drink Association (MSDA) has strongly opposed the Bottle Bill from the start. They resisted the ban on throwaways in the beginning and appealed the 1989 amendment to collect unclaimed deposits. The bottlers' appeal has been tied up in court and finally after six years, the highest court in Michigan has decided the amendment is constitutional and that the beverage producers must abide by it.

While waiting for a final decision on the 1989 amendment, an estimated 32 million dollars annually of the public's money has been withheld by the bottlers. This figure is not inaccurate nor can it be said that "MUCC's money estimates (are) grossly inflated." This figure is not MUCC's estimate but that of the independent Public Sector Consultants. Whatever the amount, the point is that the money belongs to the people, not the beer and soft drink companies.

The MSDA contests the unclaimed deposit amendment claiming they deserve that money. If they truly believed in the Bottle Bill enough to want to reap its rewards, MSDA would never have used throwaways to begin with and would not have fought the Bottle Bill so diligently throughout. Now they are suddenly supporters and want their "deserved" dividends?

MUCC sees this issue very simply. Michigan bottlers lost their fight against the Bottle Bill in 1976, lost against the unclaimed deposit amendment in 1989, and lost their legal appeal in April 1995 to the highest court in Michigan. Isn't it time that they stop fighting one of Michigan's most popular and sensible conservation laws in its history and show some genuine support?

Very truly yours,
Thomas L. Washington

Kiwanis and Legion thanked for their help

Editor,

Charlevoix's teen center, Club 77 is grateful to the Kiwanis and American Legion for the huge success of the Pancake Dinner benefit. The Kiwanians planned the dinner, sold tickets and prepared and served the dinner with the help of the American Legion. The "frosting on the cake" was the famous Kiwanian maple syrup. Teens who helped wait on table were treated to meeting and working with some of the pillars of the community. Thank you.

Beacons of Blessings

by REV. PHILIP G. SCHAIR-BAUM

As some of us were talking recently about the terrible tragedy that happened in Oklahoma City, the remark was made, "You know, I think it's a miracle that life and joy and hope have remained. It's a kind of proof to me that there really is a God." Isn't that a great way to look at life?

A while ago, I lead a funeral service for a woman who had had a very difficult life, at least as we generally measure life. She never had much to live on. She didn't have many nice things. Her husband had been sick and unable to work for a long time, so she bore nearly the full burden of raising and providing for her family. Her health had been in decline for a long time and she finally died of complications from her many infirmities.

Yet, this woman had something that many others lack — a strength of character that kept her cheerful and hopeful. I suggested then, as I want to suggest now, that her strong character was something that developed and grew out of her difficulties. I shared a poem at her service that bears repeating today:

"We must live through a dreary winter to value the bright warm spring.

The woods must be cold and silent before the robins sing.

So the heart from the hardest trial gains the purest joy of all.

From the lips that have tasted sadness, the sweetest songs shall fall.

Their joy comes after sorrow, and love is the reward of pain.

So, after earth is heaven, and out of loss comes gain."

Do you suppose that's what Paul meant when he wrote in Romans that "suffering produces endurance, and endurance produces character, and character produces hope, and hope does not disappoint us, because God's love is poured into our hearts through the Holy Spirit which is given to us"? (Romans 5:3-5) And do you suppose that's what happened when Jesus came to the frightened disciples who had locked themselves away in some room that first Easter, in fear of reprisals against them? (John 19:20) Jesus penetrated those walls. He penetrated their fear and offered them instead his peace, his love. Whatever else we may think about that scene, as far as I'm concerned that's the most important thing that happened there.

And what do we do with that love that God is always giving us in Christ Jesus? We do what Jesus taught and what Jesus did: Love one another," he said, "as I have loved you." What an outpouring of love we have seen in the last few weeks, people of all walks of life, all ages, all races, all backgrounds coming together to help each other. All of which is as it should be, though it's too bad that it often takes this kind of tragedy to bring that about.

Someone once said, "I don't like crises, but I like the opportunities they provide." The current crisis, I think, gives us the opportunity to reflect on what is really important to us; and many, it seems, have already decided that it is love. One mother in Oklahoma City, whose daughter was injured, was asked what she would tell her daughter when the child grew up. The woman said she didn't know how she'd explain the tragedy, but she would try to teach her daughter never to hate.

"These are the times that try men's souls," said Thomas Paine more than two hundred years ago. In that same speech he also said, "What we obtain too cheaply, we esteem too lightly." 'Tis dearliness only that gives everything its value." So today let us hold these things dear to our hearts:

Belief in God whose grace sustains us even and especially in times of trouble.

Strength of character that is not destroyed, but further develops in such times as these.

And most importantly, continued love for one another, the kind that reflects the love of Christ for us and for the world.

Commissioners consider hiring county administrator

By Laurie Lounsbury
There is disagreement among Charlevoix County Commissioners about the need for a county administrator. Commissioner Jim Behling is strongly in favor of hiring an administrator and took the initiative to arrange a special meeting with Grand Traverse County Administrator Ross Childs. All commissioners except Richie Gillespie attended the meeting.

The meeting was intended to enlighten the commissioners about the role of a county administrator. Childs explained the potential benefits and pitfalls of hiring an administrator. He explained the need for precisely defining the job before hiring someone. He said department heads and judges should be involved in the interview process.

And Childs stressed the most important aspect of hiring an administrator. He told the commissioners, "If you don't have a consensus among yourselves, it won't work."

Commissioners Jim Behling and Carl Price have consistently said that they are in favor of having a county administrator. "I just think things would run more smoothly with an administrator," Behling said, not getting into any specifics. Price was more specific. "We need someone there on a daily basis who department heads and employees can go to if there's a problem. If I spent all my free time there, talking to department heads, it still wouldn't be enough. It's not fair to the employees," Price said.

Gillespie ran for office on a platform of being opposed to the idea of having an administrator, but lately he's changed his position. At the last commissioner meeting, Gillespie said, "Recent developments have made me wonder if we need a manager." When asked to expand on that, Gillespie said, "There are people not duly authorized by the board of commissioners performing management roles. It might be a board member. If board members don't respect the rights and responsibilities of all other board members... then maybe a manager is in the best interest of the county."

Chairman Don Smith is opposed to having an administrator. He said at the April 26 commissioner meeting, "We're not perfect but I think we do a good job." At the May 2 meeting, Smith fell back on the words of the Plante and Moran consultant Jim Shrier. "Shrier said we're one of the top three counties of the 20 he's worked with. It makes me wonder what we're doing wrong."

In Shrier's study, however, he recommended that the county hire an administrator.

Commissioner Phil Johnson is wondering what's best for the county. "We must be doing something wrong if the employees think they need a union," Johnson said. He would support hiring an administrator if the savings to the county could compensate for the cost of the position.

Intruder chased from home

Charlevoix city police are investigating a break-in at a north side residence, where the homeowner surprised the intruder.

In the early a.m. hours April 29, city police were dispatched to a north side home, where a homeowner surprised an intruder. The homeowner noticed the front door on the house slightly ajar and upon entering surprised a lone subject who ran out the back door of the house, to a waiting car.

The homeowner was not able to get a good look at the intruder, because of the darkness. There does not appear to be anything missing.

City police are reminding city residents to lock exterior doors when you leave your house and also before you go to bed. Also if you arrive at your house and notice a possible entry, do not go inside. Call police from another location and wait for police.

Plans for new middle school introduced

By Laurie Lounsbury

Plans for a new middle school, additions to the elementary school, and renovations to the high school were revealed at Monday evening's school board meeting.

Harry Golski, chairman of the school facility committee, admitted that the 17 million dollars' worth of plans were a "wish list" from the facility committee. "We put the educational process first and foremost, and everything else followed," Golski said. "What was not within our scope was financial realism. We let the educational needs dictate our wish list," Golski explained.

The facility committee came up with a plan for construction of a new middle school. Although it is structurally sound, the old middle school was deemed not worth renovation because its multiple levels would be a nightmare to make handicap accessible. The committee also found the rooms are too small and the ceilings too high in the middle school.

All three schools have inadequate wiring for today's technology needs. Elementary school plans include adding five more classrooms and a computer resource center.

While no one disagreed with the plans for much needed school improvement, questions were raised about how to pay for it. "We haven't done a very good job of planning for our future," Golski said. "Now we've put ourselves in the position that we have one clunker and two old cars, and one needs replacing."

Audience member Dale Boss suggested that the board needs to win back the trust of the community before asking the public to raise 17 million for school building improvement. "I want to put this as kindly as I can. This is strictly politics... The town has lost confidence in you. Don't keep putting doubt and turmoil into the people's minds in this community," Boss said. Boss suggested that the board not

The old water tower which has loomed on the Charlevoix skyline for decades was brought down Monday afternoon and dismantled. The tower has not been used for several years. Maintenance costs were high due to lead paint on the exterior of the tower. The tower was brought down and dismantled by North American Dismantling of Lapeer. Workmen cut two of the tower's legs approximately eight feet off the ground. Cables were hooked to the legs and a crane was used to pull the lower portion of the legs out. The tower then fell toward Park Avenue. More than 100 people gathered to watch the tower fall. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

City contracts and purchases approved

By L. Scott Swanson

The city council approved spending a lot of money Monday evening, but nobody took offense. In one of the more harmonious city council meetings in recent memory the council approved the purchase of several pieces of equipment and approved several service contracts.

Council members approved the purchase of a new greens mower for the municipal golf course and a new dump truck, one-ton truck and pick-up truck for the city street department.

The greens mower will be purchased from Spartan Distributors of Sparta for $13,988. Spartan Distributors submitted the lowest bid which met all specifications.

The dump truck will be purchased from Duthler Ford of Grand Rapids for $52,915. Duthler Ford submitted the lowest of four bids. The one-ton and pick-up trucks will be purchased through a state purchasing pool. The one-ton truck will cost $18,776 while the pick-up will cost $13,214. City officials estimate the city will save approximately $1,000 per vehicle by purchasing through the state pool.

The council approved an engineering contract of $21,780 with Performance Engineering of Charlevoix for work on the city softball fields. This coming fall major improvements are going to be made at the softball complex. The total project will cost approximately $500,000 with much of the money coming from a state grant. Performance Engineering submitted the lowest of three bids on the project.

A pavement marking contract with Kenmark Inc. of Buckley received council approval. The contract is on a per unit price (in other words the city will pay for specific items of work with the total amount varying depending on how much work needs to be done). The contract is for three years and city street department superintendent John Martin estimated that for each of the next three years the cost to the city will be a bit less than $5,000. Kenmark also has three year contracts with Petoskey and Harbor Springs resulting from competitive bidding and offered Charlevoix the same rates.

Council members approved extending a tree trimming and removal contract with Lake Charlevoix Tree Service for an additional year at an estimated cost of $25,100. That contract was bid last year with Lake Charlevoix Tree Trimming coming in significantly lower than the other bidders. Work this year is projected to include trimming 220 trees and removing 75 other trees. Earlier Monday evening the city council heard a presentation from the Charlevoix Shade Tree Commission. Charlevoix fulfills the criteria for being a Tree City U.S.A. Bern Cannan of the Shade Tree Commission noted that as far back as 1884 Charlevoix has had ordinances protecting local trees. He said that Charlevoix has approximately 4,000 sites along the streets for trees and that trees along Charlevoix city streets have a total estimated value of more than $3 million. The city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Boy Scouts are cooperating in developing a nursery for Liberty Elm trees. In recent years, the Boy Scouts have been nurturing several trees which soon will be ready to be transplanted throughout the community. Earlier this week, Scouts planted an additional 45 trees in the nursery.

Council members approved allowing McNamee, Porter and Seelye Engineering to go forward with work on establishing an industrial wastewater pretreatment program at a cost not to exceed $30,000. The program will allow continued industrial growth in the city's industrial park.

A bid of $83,392 from D'Angelo & Son, Inc. of Indian River to replace and repair city sidewalks received council approval. D'Angelo & Son submitted the lowest of three bids on the project.

Mailboxes need to be kept up

Mailbox improvement week will be May 15-20, according to Charlevoix Postmaster Jay Wheatley.

Mailbox improvement week serves as a starting signal for special community efforts to repair, repaint, and make other improvements in the security and appearance of suburban and rural mailboxes, Wheatley explained. Mailboxes in good condition contribute to a more efficient delivery and collection operation and improve service to an entire route, according to the postmaster.

Customers must use only approved traditional or contemporary curbside mailboxes for new installations or replacements. But customers may use a custom-built mailbox if they get approval to make sure it conforms to guidelines applying to flag, size, strength, and quality of construction.

For more information on the use of names or numbers on mail receptacles, supports, and answers to any other questions, call your local post office in Charlevoix at 547-2631.

We gathered for the demise of the old tower

More than 100 people gathered to watch the old water tower come down Monday afternoon. No official announcement was made about the tower coming down, but none was required. Word spreads quickly in a small town.

p.m. Word circulated and the onlookers broke for lunch. Around 12:30 p.m., the time table got set back again, this time to 2 p.m. Some people snuck back to the office to get a little work done while others maintained the vigil at the scene.

In the moments leading up

When the dust settled, people moved in for a closer look at the carcass. The great metal structure that loomed on our skyline and watched over us for decades now lay dead at our feet. The tank was no longer round. The crash pretty much flattened it.

People heard something was up and came down to check it out. It was a pleasant gathering. Infants in strollers looked around with wide eyes. Other children romped around. Older men and women chatted and speculated on the significance of every move made by workmen preparing to bring down the tower.

There was a lot of other work in town not getting done because people took time out to see the show. But hey, it's not every day you get to see a huge steel structure crash to the ground with a mighty kerwhump!

Initially, the tower was supposed to come down late in the morning. But complications arose and the hour of the tower's demise was set back (So what's new? The tower's been scheduled to come down for years.) to 1 to the tower's fall, people jockeyed for the best viewing position and adjusted and focused three dozen video recorders and four dozen cameras. Historical events such as this are well documented in our little town.

Finally the work crew stepped back from the tower and a workman climbed aboard a big crane. Cables connected the crane to the base of the legs of the tower facing Park Avenue. When the crane backed up the cables pulled about eight feet of the bottoms of the legs out. The tower tipped forward, picking up speed as it fell. With a mighty crash it hit the ground sending dust flying in the air. The crowd applauded the spectacle. When the dust settled, people moved in for a closer look at the carcass. The great metal structure that loomed on our skyline and watched over us for decades now lay dead at our feet. The tank was no longer round. The crash nearly flattened it.

The crowd dispersed, leaving the workmen to clean up the old tower and haul her away.

The fall of the water tower proved to be an interesting event - partly because of the event itself, but also because of the gathering it attracted. Although technology brought heavy equipment and video cameras, the event probably wasn't that much different from any event which might have drawn a crowd back in the early 1900s when the water tower was erected.

Sometimes we tend to think that our lives are faster paced, more modern and sophisticated than in days gone by. But the truth of the matter is we haven't come all that far from our past. This is still a small town. Word spreads fast and we still find the time to pause and take in the significant and interesting events. The trappings and the landmarks change with the years, but human nature and curiosity remain the same.

Karley Pearsall reports that she's doing well

Editor,

I was a very tiny baby, only 1 pound 9 1/2 ounces and just 13" long when I was born (about three months early) on Feb. 16 of this year. I came into this world at the Butterworth Hospital in Grand Rapids but seem to remember the sounds of an ambulance as it rushed my mother from the Charlevoix Area Hospital to Northern Michigan Hospital and also the loud din of the helicopter that then brought us here.

My name is Karley Michael Pearsall and I am a big girl now, up to 3 pounds 14 ounces and 17 inches, almost ready to go home to Charlevoix-the-Beautiful, with my Mom (Vikki) and Dad (Kevin).

This is to thank all the wonderful people who helped with the fund raising on my behalf. From the spaghetti dinner at Nanny's through the five course dinner at "On the Edge" (formerly Pete & Mickey's) to the auction at Alexander's and to all who participated as auctioneers, donors, hosts, helpers or as guests; I send my love and appreciation. I'm sorry that I have yet to meet you and don't know your names! That love and appreciation also goes to all who are giving time, money and the "stuff" that will make the Silent Auction a success. It will be held Tuesday, May 23, 6 p.m. at the Edgewater, upstairs meeting room. Please attend, the $5 donation will be applied to your first winning bid. A cash bar will be complimented with donated hors d'oeuvres. Call my Aunt Kristi, 547-9134 for information or reservations (limited seating!). You may leave a message if she's out.

God Bless You All,
Baby Karley

County service is excellent

Editor,

We recently had business at the Charlevoix county court house. We were again impressed with the courteous, friendly and professional service given us. Each of the people we dealt with at the register of deed's office, equalization department and the treasurer's office provided service in a manner that made us feel fortunate to have such people in our public offices. Thank you, ladies, for doing your jobs so well. We feel you are a credit to Charlevoix County.

Sincerely,
Larry and Verna Swanson

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

I'm guessing that he had to have been only about five feet, five inches tall. His gray hair told the tale of more experience than I have yet to imagine. His frame, though wiry, spoke of one who had tried his best to look after his health under difficult circumstances. What fascinated me most of all were his eyes.

Someone philosophized that a man's eyes are the windows to his soul. If that's the case, then Harry Lee's eyes speak volumes. I had read a paperback book about his life. This last weekend I met him in person as he came to our church to speak. To him, it was a part of his walk of faith that he had taken for granted. To me, I was somewhat in awe of anyone who could endure being in prison, losing twenty-four years of his life, for the cause of Christ.

Harry is from mainland China. He is old enough to have lived through things most of us have only read in history books. He shares memories of the Japanese invasion of China. His tales of the Communist takeover make your heart shudder. The subtle ways that your beliefs can be changed by societal pressures are amazing. He would also be the first to tell you that is why you have to remember and be sure of where Jesus lives.

As you might guess, a missionary won Harry's heart for the Lord. He was only fourteen years old at the time, but the more he learned about his Savior, the more he knew he had to serve Him. Harry's crime was wanting to attend seminary in order to be the best servant of God he could. He spent years in a cold concrete cell, cut off from virtually all outside contact. "Brain washers" sought to reeducate him. What news he could garner was determined by the prevailing political moods of his captors. Transferred after many years to a prison farm, he walked countless times past graves where he felt he would end up being buried.

Obviously God had other things in mind. There he was standing in my pulpit declaring to my church family love and faithfulness of God. There he was a living example of how the power of faith that the Bible speaks about really does work.

We may live in northwest lower Michigan. We may not have the political worries that Harry endured. But we need to understand that our faith is just as vital, just as priceless, and just as able to see us through whatever challenges we may face as it did a quiet man from halfway around the world. May your faith never be put to a severe test. But if it were to be, do you have the assurance in your heart of hearts that it would really be there for you? I would invite you to talk things over with the Lord. You might be surprised at just how good a listener he really is.

(Rev. Bruce Hamilton is pastor of the Charlevoix Community Church of God. Beacons of Blessings is provided to the Courier by Hamilton and other members of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.)

Everybody's welcome to help with petunia planting

"We need all the helpers we can get to plant petunias next week," declared Dale Boss, Chairman of the Charlevoix petunia project as he announced Thursday, May 25 as the date of the 14th annual Operation Petunia.

"Anyone can help," said Boss. Block captains and flower distributors are needed in addition to planters.

Volunteers will report as usual at 5 p.m. to the block captain nearest their home. There are about 50,000 petunias to plant the entire length of the city's main street. Despite the numbers, planting is usually finished in a little more than an hour. Six colors will be used, but this year hot pink petunias will replace dark purple, Boss said. Boss and his wife, Marilyn will water the petunias later using the watering truck supplied by Keep Charlevoix Beautiful, Inc., sponsors of the event.

A community picnic and entertainment, a "thank you" for workers, will follow at East Park. The Blue Rider Band will perform.

According to picnic chairperson Patti Sitzema, a last minute surprise donation of pizzas from Pizza Hut last year proved so popular that more local restaurants have said they will also donate pizzas. They are in addition to the usual offering of hot dogs cooked by members of the Rotary Club of Charlevoix.

Dairy Queen will donate coupons for ice cream cones to students who participate. Workers are eligible for a coupon for Kilwin's chocolates.

Both coupons must be validated by a block captain.

The day before Operation Petunia, May 24, orientation for block captains will be offered by Karen LaVanway at 5 p.m. at LaCroft meeting room. To volunteer, call LaVanway at 547-5345.

According to Jackie Krusch, a KCB board member, the community endeavor has attracted many visitors over the years. She said many letters of praise and "how-to" inquiries from all over the country are mailed to the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce which forwards them to KCB.

Activities focus on women's health

By Laurie Lounsbury

Night sweats - Yuck. Mood swings, edginess, and drop dead, bone tiredness - Bummer. Any woman over 40 can tell you that the sneaky symptoms of premenopause are no fun. But Diane Liverance can tell you in a way that is fun. She is unabashedly down to earth when she confronts topics that our grandmothers didn't even whisper about. Liverance will be speaking at the Charlevoix Fitness Studio May 25 at 7:15 about menopause and exercise.

So what's the connection between exercise and menopause? "If you're going to be having hot flashes and sweating anyway, you might as well be exercising," Liverance joked, but then quickly added, "The biggest thing that bothers women is being out of control. Exercise helps you manage the symptoms. It regulates the chemicals in your body that are out of balance due to stress or anxiety. And it helps fight those feelings of getting old, fat, and dumpy."

Liverance finds that sharing and talking about menopause is the first Student cheating: Do you want an honest answer?

By Leah Dulaney

Are values and morals flying out the window so better grades can slip in under the door?

Recently, a survey on cheating was given to each student at Charlevoix High School. Although techniques used to cheat vary, almost all the students indicated that they had cheated at one time or another. Methods of cheating range from the kid who uses a "cheat sheet," to several classmates who overtly shared answers if the teacher left the room or wasn't paying close attention, to the bold student who just went up to the teacher's desk and looked at an already corrected paper.

Excuses such as, "I didn't get back from the game last night until 11, and I didn't have time to study!" or "I went to a party and didn't get in until after midnight," can be heard throughout the halls as students tell their friends why they couldn't study for a test or do their homework. According to the survey, answers can be obtained quite easily. Students tell their friends things like, "the second to last multiple choice question, I put 'C' but it's really 'A'." Or, "On the essay you have to name the first five presidents," etc.

Meanwhile, other high school students competing for the best grades wonder why they study so hard for the grades while others who cheat are effortlessly getting the same or better grades.

True, a few teachers may use different tests, but some also acknowledged, on a similar survey that they filled out, that answers are being passed in the halls a little too frequently.

Although most of the survey data varied by grade and gender, one thing stood out: more students, in every grade and gender, had copied homework than had cheated on a test. Many students said that it was just as easy to copy someone else's homework as doing it themselves, plus they'd probably get a better grade. Tests, on the other hand, they viewed as more substantial work, or as being a little harder to cheat on.

Quite often students are told by parents to improve their grades or their privileges will be taken away. It's easier to cheat, according to 74 percent of Charlevoix High School students, than to get help or to do the work on their own. As long as they're not part of the 13 percent who cheat and get caught, for now, it's their best chance at good grades without having to struggle with the homework by themselves.

Of the teachers who filled out a similar survey, most said students caught cheating the first and second time would receive a zero on the assignment, and on their third offense would get an "F" for the class. Other consequences included calls to the students' parents, Saturday School, and one teacher averages the Cheaters' grades from the assignment that they were caught cheating on then divides that average between the cheaters.

Even though most students realize that cheating is dishonest, lazy, and detrimental to education they are still willing to risk the consequences to improve their grades. What can be done to discourage cheating? Some suggestions teachers and parents offer students include: studying with a partner, attending classes regularly, getting extra help, budgeting time better, and paying attention in class. Teachers can deter cheating by giving different class sections different versions of tests, being more diligent in watching for cheating and uniformly administering consequences.

The accompanying story was written by Leah Dulaney, a freshman at Charlevoix High School. She is the daughter of Pat and Sharmon Dulaney. Charlevoix High School English teacher Dixie Ashton has been working with the Courier to establish a youth page featuring stories written by Charlevoix students. Dulaney's story is the first fruit of that project, which, with any luck, will be expanded during the 1995-96 school year.

County discusses results of compensation study

By Laurie Lounsbury

County commissioners paid more than they planned and got more than they bargained for with the Plante & Moran employee compensation study. The study, which ended up costing $17,000, was more than the original projected $14,000, because two departments were added to the study after Plante & Moran submitted their bid. And although the commissioners didn't ask for it, they got an earful of complaints about the need for better communication in the county. The Plante & Moran study was the valve that opened the floodgates of complaint from county department heads.

"Communication is among the worse things in the county," reported Jim Shrier, consultant for Plante & Moran, at the May 10 commissioner meeting.

Shrier said a common complaint from county employees is that they feel they aren't being heard. "People had good ideas that they said weren't being listened to. I put that in the report because I thought their ideas should be heard," Shrier said.

Register of Deeds Charlene Gaskin told commissioners, "You've got everything going for you here. You've got good department heads. We just need communication."

Dollar value of benefits debated

Commissioner Chairman Don Smith persistently asked Plante & Moran consultant Jim Shrier to put a value on the county's retirement benefit plan. Smith, who voted to provide health benefits to retired employees and commissioners, knew that Charlevoix County is one of the few counties to provide that benefit. And he knew that it must have some value to employees. But Shrier was equally persistent when he told Smith that a cash value couldn't be placed on the benefit because it had different value for different employees. Some employees won't work for the county long enough to receive the benefit. Others would rather have the cash today instead of the benefit in ten years. "It's specific to an individual," Shrier said. "It might have no value to some employees, and it might be of prime value to others."

But Smith wanted a cash value of that benefit factored into the total salary package of department heads. Joan Balch guessed at his reasons when she said to Smith,

"You can't use that benefit to hold our salaries down. All employees get that benefit."

Shrier said the retirement benefit was nice, but it was offset by the lack of optical benefits and other factors. "Overall, the benefit package is comparable and consistent to other counties," he said.

After the meeting Shrier said that he didn't make any recommendations regarding the retirement benefit because he hadn't seen any actuarial studies on the projected cost of the benefit. He did ask if an actuarial study had been done before the retirement benefit was granted. No actuarial study was done in 1986 when the benefits were granted. An actuarial study was done in 1992, just before the commissioners voted to trim the retirement benefit. "The financial implications down the road could be a disaster. It was not a prudent thing for those commissioners to do," Shrier said, referring to the 1986 board of commissioners who voted in the benefits.

Probate court administrator Dave Bitler thinks there's more to the problem than just communication. "It's my observation that people here don't feel appreciated. That has nothing to do with money. There's no reason to treat us this way. We're good people, we work very hard. There are better ways to handle communication. There are better ways to do business on a day to day, month to month basis."

While both employees and commissioners agree that better communication is necessary, they are unclear about the best way to get it. Shrier recommended that the county hire an administrator to improve communication, among other things. "You've got to get all of your employees to feel like they're playing on the same team," he said. Overall efficiency of county business would be improved with an administrator, according to Shrier. "I wouldn't dream of running a business by having the stockholders' board of directors get together twice a month and make all the decisions," Shrier said. "We would hire a C.E.O. It only makes sense."

County treasurer Joan Balch didn't think a full blown administrator was necessary. "Has the board ever considered an executive secretary? Maybe what you need is a person who all department heads can go to who is just your secretary. Take a look at what your problem is. Is it really just a communication problem? Do you need a full administrator for that?" Balch asked the board.

Commissioner Phil Johnson has said in the past that he would support an administrator if the county savings would justify the cost of the position. Johnson asked Shrier if that would be the case. "It's the value in public service and the value in communication that you have to look at," Shrier said.

Acacia installs new buoy in Lake Charlevoix near Horse Point

The Coast Guard Cutter Acacia established a new buoy Wednesday, May 10 in the north arm of Lake Charlevoix. Horse Point Lighted Buoy 3 is now keeping watch for the summer about one quarter mile off the north shore of Young State Park. According to Lieutenant Commander Steve Corporon, Acacia's Commanding Officer, Horse Point is one of the few areas in the lake where a shoal extends out from shore more than a hundred yards. During a routine review of the aids to navigation requirements for Grand Traverse Bay and Lake Charlevoix it was noted that there had been several groundings of pleasure craft on the shoal since the last review three years ago. Acacia personnel recommended the new buoy in their official report and once approved, the hull was ordered; however it did not arrive until Acacia was in Haiti last fall, too late for setting during last year's boating season.

The buoy itself is the latest in cost-effective design as the main hull of the buoy is made of hardened, painted foam. Naturally, the crew has nicknamed it a "nerf" buoy. The vertical support unit that holds the light and solar panel is still made of steel but Corporon says it will be interesting to see how the new buoy holds up this far north. "The Coast Guard uses quite a few of these buoys down south and they were very convenient for marking the entire entrance into Port Au Prince last fall. I've heard they don't handle ice very well so we will have to pull the buoy sometime in October." The buoy is painted green and has a green light which will flash once every four seconds. To stay in safe water, boaters should pass south of the buoy when traversing in the vicinity of Young State Park.

Anyone who saw the Acacia underway in Lake Charlevoix Wednesday may be wondering how they positioned the buoy in the rain and fog that day. "Satellites," says Corporon. In fact with the advanced technology available to them, Acacia personnel set almost all of the aids from Traverse City through the Straits this spring with the Differential Global Positioning system connected to a laptop computer. It's quicker and in most cases more accurate than traditional horizontal sextant angles claims Corporon. Once the differential system is completed in southern Lake Michigan later this year Acacia plans to use the satellite system for all of its buoys.
